Age No Hindrance To 74-Year-Old

Senior citizens often bemoan the fact that their age prevents them from doing what they would like to do. Such is not the case with John Rouika, a Lithuanian immigrant who will turn 75 on Sept. 10. Rouika, who lives at 747 Glendower, jumps around on roofs as if he was no more than 25 or 30.

He was putting a new roof on the home of Jess Tressler, 157 N. Yale, when a Hartley cameraman caught him. The photographer introduced himself and shook Rouika's hand. Rouika nearly broke it. This 74-year-old stands about 6 feet 1 inch and weighs about 200 pounds.

Rouika has been in this country since 1912 and has been a resident of Columbus for the past 38 years. He loves his work and does it tirelessly. This he says, accounts for a large part of his excellent physical condition.

SMOTHERS, PREPS TOP SHOW CAST

The comedy-folk singing of the Smothers Brothers and the vocalizing of the Four Preps headline "Swing Into Spring" at Veteran's Memorial Wednesday, May 1.

The concert, which also features Dixieland jazz by Phil Napoleon and his Memphis Five, is sponsored by the Franklin Heights High School Boosters Club.

Comedian Clarence Loos will emcee the show and entertain with some of his own antics.

Tickets for the production are on sale at the Central Ticket Office, 37 N. High-st and at all other Richman Brothers stores.

Proceeds will be used to support the Franklin Heights High School Athletic Association.

The time has come to regard democracy not just as a thing of the spirit but as a practical design for living concerned with food, jobs, schools, and creative culture. —Norman Cousins

'Confederate' Ca$h Jackpot $hoot$ Pa$t $100 Mark

The South will rise again!

And whoever wins that big Hartley Newspaper "Confederate" Jackpot can really rise up and shout 'cause it now totals $113.

Yes sir, if you find that little old "5 Confederate" insignia in your copy of any of the Hartley Newspapers this week you will receive all 113 of those "Confederate" Dollars . . . now as good as gold and spendable for real, honest to goodness merchandise with any advertiser in one of the seven Hartley Newspapers. Of course, if you don't happen to be a paid subscriber to one of these papers, you will receive only $5.

This little, old "Confederate" Jackpot is climbing each week and the best way to be sure you are in the money is to see that your subscription is paid either through your carrier or by mail. Better check up on it right now.

The jackpot grew by another $22 this past week when only three persons were able to find the "1" insignia.

Three actual winners, who received one "Confederate" dollar for sending in the proper insignia to Hartley Newspapers, were J. Curtis, 6962 Claymer-dr; W. Hiser, 28 W. Welch-av, and Gloria Baker, 9000 Alkire-rd, Grove City.

Five almost winners sent in what they thought were proper "Confederate" insignia which turned out to be part of an advertisement and not an actual insignia good for Hartley "Confederate" cash.

Don't forget, the insignias are just like those printed in this column, but always in a color other than black. They are just like those printed in this column but always in a color other than black. They are not part of an ad but printed in the white space around an ad:

To win the jackpot the reader must find the "Confederate" "5" insignia in his newspaper and be a paid subscriber. All "1" insignia are good for one 'Confederate" dollar if sent in to Hartley Newspapers, 2465 W. Broad-st, before the deadline at noon on Monday following publication of the paper containing the insignia.

The holder of the "5" insignia must bring the paper containing the insignia in person to the Hartley Newspapers Office to be eligible for the jackpot or to win the five "Confederate" dollars.

Employes of Hartley Newspapers, including carriers, and their families are not eligible to participate in this contest.

Twenty-one insignia will be hidden in 21 different copies of this week's edition, and one of these insignia is worth 113 "Confederate" dollars to the lucky reader. Start checking the advertisements right now for the winning "Confederate" insignia.

Don't delay any longer . . . by spending a few minutes checking the advertisements in this paper you could be $113 richer.

WHITEHALL AT ZONING CROSSROAD

★ ★ ★ Maxwell Advocating Apartment Additions

JAMES MAXWELL

Attorney James Maxwell, Jr., 4042 E. Mound-st, is a Whitehall resident and former solicitor for that suburb.

His roots go deep into the city's development. He claims the title of "architect" for Whitehall's C-A-O (commercial-apartment-office) zoning classification (since revised).

He is strong in his advocacy for more apartments in Whitehall.

Maxwell describes CAO as a "plan to provide a means for building structures of high tax value that provides little additional city services." He boasts the fact that Whitehall is tied (with Grandview) for low tax rate in Franklin County is due to CAO.

"CAO was 50 per cent responsible," he claims. "The other 50 per cent was (city) income tax. We did not require additional police or fire protection."

Maxwell said that six apartment buildings (already constructed at a cost of $1,400,000) have added $700,000 annually to the tax duplicate.

He said that an additional 22 apartment buildings have been approved under CAO and are to be built this year. "At an estimated construction cost of $250,000 each," Maxwell said, "this means an additional $125,000 annually added to the tax duplicate for each building. This totals $2,750,000 in all."

(Maxwell said he calculated the money added to the tax duplicate by dividing the market value of the property by 40 per cent, and adding 10 per

Attention To Youth

This past week we received a nice letter from a "Disappointed Mother" in which she takes us to task for not reporting the Science Fair in detail.

We regret this fact but at the same time feel we are not entitled to be criticized for lack of recognition to youth. Any issue of our papers will show that we regularly devote a great portion of our space to our young people, and shall continue to do so.

We did not print the letter because it was not signed. We welcome letters but also appreciate knowing who writes them.

A BRIEF WORD OF EXPLANATION . . .

By FRANK RYAN

The suburb of Whitehall, in its efforts to formulate a workable set of zoning regulations and classifications, is finding itself at a kind of "crossroads," with the center of controversy over a specific type of building — apartments.

The apartment boom in Whitehall should have far-reaching effects in determining the future growth pattern of that city. Will the multi-unit dwellings add to the total wealth of the community or will they constitute a drain on city coffers?

Problems of a more immediate nature in the reshaping of Whitehall's outdated zoning code include:

- Is Whitehall a "dead" area for private home development?
- Has the controversial C-A-O (commercial-apartment-office) classification been repealed, or was it merely modified?
- Have the CAO and A-O (apartment-office) features proved a cure to an ailing tax duplicate or the basis for future woes?
- Has council acted in strict accordance with legal requirements in using a "special permit" section of zoning regulations?

The stories printed here deal with current thinking on these questions by civic leaders closely associated with zoning in Whitehall.

Councilman Todd In Middle Of City's Zoning Muddle; Trying To Re-Shape

Whitehall Councilman Darrell Todd, 674 Ross-st, is in the unenviable position of "middleman" in the hot-brewing controversy over zoning regulations.

The fourth ward solon has already authored one major zoning change that has been enacted by council, and continues to burn the home lights in an effort to update the remainder of the zoning code.

An aeronautical engineer by profession, Todd takes a calm but serious approach to the task at hand.

"I felt we didn't have sufficient definitions and requirements to meet current needs," he said.

Todd's brief appraisal of the situation stems from the fact that Whitehall has been operating on a basic zoning code enacted in 1952. Census figures show that Whitehall population zoomed from about

WHITEHALL COUNCILMAN Darrell Todd has a lot on his mind these days — what with making attempts to shape-up a long-range zoning code for that city and all. He's shown here in a symbolic "rolled-up-sleeves" pose as he tackles the suburb's zoning muddle in efforts to clarify and revamp foundation rulings.

★ ★ ★ Wright Sees Units As 'Slum Potential'

There is at least one Whitehall resident who feels that if the city continues to allow apartment house development that it could begin to nurture slum sections.

He's Attorney Craig Wright, 433 Country Club-rd, former Whitehall safety director. He's presently a member of the city's Planning and Zoning Commission.

CRAIG WRIGHT

As Wright sees it, the "bulk" of apartments being built and planned today are "low-cost units which will depreciate rapidly."

He added:

"The (apartment building) trend will not be felt for four or five years when the apartments begin to age. Then you'll have the beginning of slums."

The Planning and Zoning member has clashed before with James Maxwell, Jr., former Whitehall solicitor, when the latter has represented developers who have sought zoning changes to permit apartment and commercial construction.

Wright strongly contests Maxwell's contention that apartments built in the last two years — and those approved for construction — will aid the city financially. Maxwell believes that they'll add an approximate $3,450,000 to the tax duplicate.

"Let's talk, instead, about how much of the tax duplicate increase will be returned to Whitehall," said Wright.

"On the basis of $1.50 returned to Whitehall for each $1,000 of tax collected, this would amount to $5,175 gross take each year for Whitehall. Of this amount, $3,105 would go to the general fund and $2,070 to the police and fire pension fund.

"Now, let's consider just one area of expense for servicing apartment-dwellers. That is, free garbage collection. The current rate is 89 cents per month for each unit.

"On the average, the existing and proposed apartment buildings will contain 46 units each, or a total of 1,288 units. At the present cost to the city

OFFICALS SAY:

Bexley Pool Opens Saturday, June 15

It's official!

The board of trustees of the Bexley Civic Improvement Association (BCIA) announced Wednesday that suburb's first-ever swimming pool is scheduled for opening at noon Saturday, June 15.

"After receiving unanimous approval of final plans from city council," said William Birch, chairman of BCIA, "a building permit was issued and we entered into a contract with the Midwestern Pool Co., a prominent swimming pool contractor."

Approval was given by council Mar. 26.

According to Birch, construction began Apr. 1 and "is proceeding on schedule."

A law suit has been filed by six Bexley residents opposed to the pool on the Jeffery Mansion grounds, but no injunction has evidently been sought or granted that would interfere with the scheduled opening of the pool, the trustees reported.

The pool is to be managed by Frank McGraw, swimming coach at Academy School, and Don DeJong, a member of the Bexley High coaching staff.

Proposed hours of operation will be 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays and noon to 8 p.m. on Sundays.

Official Red Cross swimming instruction will be offered free of charge during the morning hours, Monday through Friday.

Further information regarding registration for swimming lessons will be offered soon through Bexley schools, the trustees reported. Competitive team swimming practice will be held prior to regular swimming hours.

Membership is open to any person or family who is a resident of Bexley. The family membership includes husband, wife and all unmarried children under the age of 21.

Any questions regarding loan certificates or memberships should be directed to Mrs. John Ferguson (BE. 1-9785), Birch concluded.

Confusion Clouding Senate Bill Waters

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

It doesn't take a nurse to tell that the thermometer is up to fever proportions around the state over substitute Senate Bill 66, which is causing more headaches for the ladies of mercy than a flu epidemic.

The bill is designed to withdraw liability from hospitals, leaving the registered nurse answerable directly to the patient for her acts or omissions.

Under the leadership of Dorothy A. Cornelius, R.N., executive director of Ohio State Nursing Association, the some 11,000 OSNA members have glutted the state with literature in opposition to such action.

Biggest fight now is beating down of flash fires springing up throughout Ohio — with seemingly no geographic or political pattern — as a result of the nurses' opposition. According to Miss Cornelius,

FRANK JOHNSON, who plays the male lead of Joe Hardy in the upcoming Gallery Players production of "Damn Yankees" at the Jewish Center (slated for May 18-19, 22-23 and 25-26) rehearses with Hartley Newspapers' Entertainment Editor John Auble, Jr. The nervous one with the hat is Auble who has been cast as a reporter in the show.

BEXLEY GIVES OK TO BROAD-ST SIDEWALKS

A short stretch of sidewalks was about the only "concrete" business handled Tuesday night by Bexley council in an equally short stretch of meeting time (29½ minutes).

Sidewalks were ordered, by resolution, for the south side of E. Broad-st, between Gould-rd and Merkle-rd. The land is owned by Edward S. Merkle, 132 S. Chesterfield-rd.

In other action, Bellwood-av property owners got the go-ahead to develop their property, even if the solons have to grant a variance on zoning for each move.

Developer Charles Burkhart says he wants to build three twin-single dwellings on three undersized lots on Bellwood-av. Council agreed to consider each case and grant a variance to the property owner.

HOW'S THIS FOR TYPE CASTING?

Hartley Reporter Gets Part As Newsman In 'Damn Yankees'

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

When it comes to entertainment talent, the only claim this reporter can stake is being able to get off an occasional funny at a press party — and even those are few and far between.

Imagine, then, how it feels to find yourself smack in the middle of a real, live, no-fooling-around musical comedy like "Damn Yankees," which is scheduled to go on stage next month through the efforts of the Gallery Players at the Jewish Center (May 18-19, 22-23 and 25-26).

It's not really so unbelievable when you consider that Lana Turner was discovered in a soda fountain. But, then again, the only resemblance between me and Lana Turner is that I like sodas, too.

Being cast in "Damn Yankees" came about through three incidents. Namely:

(1) I got tired of hearing talented Gallery Director Harold Eisenstein brag about how the Player staff could turn "anybody" into a star.

(2) Eisenstein believes in type-casting with more of a reverence than a Boy Scout believes in being prepared, and

(3) As entertainment editor for Hartley Newspapers, the feeling was strong that I should get closer to the footlights. (With my luck I'll

Tech Staff Misses Call In 'Bells Are Ringing'

By BOB PERKOWSKI

Reviewer's stage, screen Corner

Technical difficulties almost stole the show when the Independent Players presented "Bells Are Ringing" last Friday and Saturday at Veteran's Memorial.

From the beginning there was Trouble (with a capital "T") that even a "music man" wouldn't have to concoct. The door to Susanswerphone (the answering service from which Ella Peterson becomes involved in the lives of her clients) wouldn't open. From then on the cast not only fought the door but a host of other difficulties as well.

Through it all the cast performed ably, even in the powerful darkness (poor lighting) that often descended. The leads, Joanne Howard, Carol Kruckeberg, Hal Summers and Stu Sinclair, came out on top over the stagehands for attention.

The singing ensemble did especially well in all its songs, which, happily, were many in number. The ensemble size had the advantage of concealing whatever distractions occurred behind them.

The orchestra, under the direction of C. Robert Myers (Friday evening), gave its all to the memorable Jule Styne melodies.

Though slow in the beginning scenes, the musical picked up later in the first act and continued with vigor, doing justice to book and lyrics by Betty Comden and Adolph Green.

All in all, there was much to be enjoyed. What distracted was a poor performance by the technical staff—the part of the show which performers are often inclined to alight.

This reviewer hopes the next show by the Independent Players sees the situation improved. Even though the technical staff may get no notices for their labors, it would be better than the amateurish attention-getting devices in "Bells Are Ringing."

Spring Treat—Fresh Fish From Lake Erie

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Meats, Poultry, Fish—Chuck roasts, beef steaks, ground beef, pork "specials," fresh smelts, fryers, eggs

Vegetables—New red potatoes, salad greens, new cabbage, carrots, celery

Fruits—Bananas, apples, pineapple

Other—Dairy products, canned: peaches, pineapple, tomato products.

A SPRING TREAT—FRESH FISH FROM LAKE ERIE

If you're hungry for a meal of fresh fish—meaning as they come from the water — the season is here. Lake Erie fishing has opened up at last. The lake waters are very cold which means the fish have an excellent flavor.

Dealers say the pan fish in best supply this week are perch, white bass and smelts. You can also find "jumbo" pickerel for baking (they came early this year from Lake Erie) and large pickerel from Canadian waters. Small pickerel are just beginning to come.

A Real treat for any fish lover is a big platter of fresh smelts. They're at their very best now, fresh and plump before they start to spawn in another couple of weeks. Remember the tedious task of cleaning smelts? This is no longer true—you can get them dressed for the fry pan . . . or, whole if you prefer to clean your own. Prices are quite reasonable.

You're probably wondering where to find fresh fish. True, fresh fish are never abundant in our markets, but the selection is better now than usual. At fish specialty markets, such as those found at Central Market, you can get fish only 12 hours out of the water. Some supermarkets are offering a fairly good selection, and if you happen to be in the Sandusky area you can get them right off the boat. The fish are packed in ice as soon as they leave the water and are shipped in refrigerated trucks to hold their fresh quality.

When buying fresh fish, remember the fishin' fact we know best . . . the fresher the fish, the better the flavor. So, any method to get—and keep—that just-out-of-the-water flavor is the trick.

Top quality fresh whole fish have bright, clear bulging eyes that "look like they're looking at you"; firm, moist, elastic flesh—springing back when pressed; and an odor that is fresh . . . not tainted or stale. Fish that have a strong "fishy odor" are not fresh.

An easy tip for scaling whole fish, we learned from Tom Stockdale, Extension Specialist, Wildlife Conservation: Use a teaspoon for scaling small fish and a tablespoon for large ones. It works. You won't have scales all over the place, and on you.

Tom also points out that fresh fish are highly perishable. So, keep them iced or place in a plastic bag with some ice and keep in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Use within the day.

A BREAK WITH THE PAST—has been accomplished at the Whitehall Elementary School on East Main-st as this panoramic view of the obstacle course shows. There's no "old fashioned" dull pushups here but rather plenty of room to climb, jump, run and crawl through natural movements necessary for growth and development. The chair weave and platform jump (right), slide (center) and low table tumbling (left) represents parts of Gonino's constant action course which did not require a single financial investment on the part of the school.

BOTTOMS UP—on the tumbling platform-mat go Dawn Alexander, 4687 E. Main-st (left) and Debbie Kraft 1632 Dimson-dr. This type of exercise and movement seems to provide more fun and muscle development than the organized rhythm and games, especially for the weaker child.

JUST LIKE JUMPIN' OFF STAGE

One Obstacle Course Equals Fun + Fitness

Pursuing the theory that a child's imagination is an integral segment of each of his waking hours, Vince Gonino has given his students at Whitehall Elementary School a brand new insight into the "Wonderful World of Physical Fitness."

The E. Main-st school has put the "fun" back into physical education by borrowing the natural movements of pre-TV childhood play and co-ordinating them into "Creative Play" periods, complete with a home-made, indoor obstacle course.

GONINO, THE school's physical education instructor, got the idea for his cost-free course from observing, "how much the kids enjoyed jumping off the stage."

The 10-obstacle layout, which includes rope swinging, chinning, crawling, sliding, jumping, climbing and running, provides the children with safe and supervised physical activity.

The youngsters' ready acceptance of the simplicity-personified course is evidenced in its very construction. Gonino has designed a "backyard playground" which can combine the growth and development of muscle with the childhood fascination of sliding through the dark, cardboard tunnel.

ON "CREATIVE Play Days" the children are permitted to use the obstacle course in a physical program of "free expression" as long as they abide by regulations of safety and sportsmanship set up by Gonino.

"This type of exercise and movement," explains Gonino, "seems to provide more muscle development than the organized rhythms and games, especially for the weaker child."

The happy sounds of children at play in the Whitehall gymnasium were evidence enough to describe the youngsters' feelings on Gonino's fresh and imaginative approach to physical fitness.

LOOK OUT BELOW—is the warning seven-year-old Kenny Freed, 897 Bucknell-rd, has for classmates as he leaps off a stairsteps obstacle to an elevated platform below. Gonino got the idea for his "fun plus fitness" plan by observing how the school children "loved to jump off the stage."

WITH THE GREATEST OF EASE—sails little Melanie Munk, 5065 Dimson-dr, N., on an improvised rope swing from one platform to another. In the fitness program, girls participate with as much enthusiasm and imagination as the boys.

INTO THE TUNNEL—goes six-year-old first-grader Theresa Lynn Marcum, 200 Parklawn. The slide obstacle, a throwback to the pre-television playground days, provides participants with the conditioning childhood play techniques without the dull "50-around-the-gym" walks and drab "pushups by the dozen."

TIME OUT PERIOD—in the "creative play" activity is taken by instructor and course designer Vince Gonino as he points out results on his progress board which charts the development of each student. Checking out their totals on the board are first-grade students Micheal Ann Dilly, 4046 Vanderbilt-dr and Vincent Smith, 1666 Colgate-rd. Young Vince is leading the boys' group with 30 [illegible]

UP AND OVER the horizontal bar goes second grader Scott Smith of 1010 Antwerp. The bar, one of ten obstacles set up in the Whitehall gym by Gonino can be likened to swinging on a tree branch in the "Creative Play" program.

"I urge . . . a program that will stir the imagination of our youth . . . to build the energy and strength that is their American heritage."

Hornung, Karras Guilty But Penalty Questioned

You probably could have traded one Johnny Unitas for 174 Paul Hornungs in the bubble gum card mart last week.

That would probably be the going rate of exchange after Mr. Pete Rozelle swallowed hard, puffed through several packs of cigarettes and then threw the book at two of pro football's super stars.

THERE ARE plenty of people who think Rozelle was justified in going the limit with his penalty to curtail player lottery on pro games.

The culprits were guilty as charged, and since their contracts stipulate "no betting" they deserve just punishment.

However, no evidence was produced which indicated that bets by Hornung and Alex Karras influenced the outcome of any game.

Furthermore, there was no indication that there was any telltale point spread involved which might also jump the charge from a misdemeanor to a felony.

FOR THESE reasons, we question the justice of Rozelle's punishment. An indefinite suspension with no opportunity for redress for one year is a pretty stiff penalty.

Such a heavy sentence smacks of the old military axiom . . . "make somebody an example and hit 'em hard." Rozelle isn't fielding a circuit of little leaguers who have to be in bed before dark.

We rather doubt if he believes that he has or will be able to clean house with the Hornung-Karras case. We might even go so far as to suggest that the NFL might have a hard time filling up their playing rosters if every player who ever bet on a game or looked twice at an "undesirable" were booted into the doghouse.

IT JUST ISN'T likely that every sports participant leaves the great American pastime in his hip pocket with a change of clothes.

If we had a nickel for every jockey who ever bet on a horse race, we could retire tomorrow. (This doesn't imply that the race is fixed).

You may argue that Rozelle's penalty put some teeth into this country's effort to keep the gamblers at the tracks. Well and good, but as of this sitting, the whole scandal has sounds of scapegoat.

IF THE NFL investigators continue their snooping and collect all the offenders, we'll be most happy to eat these words. But if the whole orobe slips back into obscurity without ALL the guilty parties getting their just deserts, we're holding our stand till the Mets win the NL flag.

BITS OF WIT(T)—A good chunk of fan interest at last week's Jet opener was centered around Indianapolis pitcher Herb Score as he worked out in the Indian bullpen during the late innings.

In a pre-game uniform number identification, Score got one of the biggest plaudits we've heard for a non-Columbus player since Mo Mazzali made his return to the stadium in a foreign uniform a few years back.

It would be pretty hard to find a baseball fan anywhere who isn't pulling for this victim of one of baseball's greatest tragedies—a fellow whom the Boston Red Sox wanted one million dollars' worth just nine short seasons ago.

Beulah Racing Opens Saturday

Everything is set for the opening of the spring racing season at Beulah Park Saturday and all indications point to spirited competition during the 25-day stand which ends on May 25.

President Robert Y. Dienst is hopeful that the fine array of talent assembled for the meet, will bring business to a level of a couple of seasons ago.

WITH SOME 750 horses on the scene and possibly a fifth of them "newcomers" to the local area, it is expected that the fans will have a wide choice of new names in the racing lineups as well as new faces among the jockeys and trainers who will be plying their trades.

One of the strongest jockey colonies in recent seasons is ready for action, headed by Paul Ward and Jimmy Dobson, who have been campaigning at Beulah for many years.

Post time for the racing will be 2:15 each day and every effort will be made to complete the programs well before 6 p.m. There will be a daily double on the first and second races and sales of double tickets will close 10 minutes prior to first post.

Entries Taken For Hospital Golf Tourney

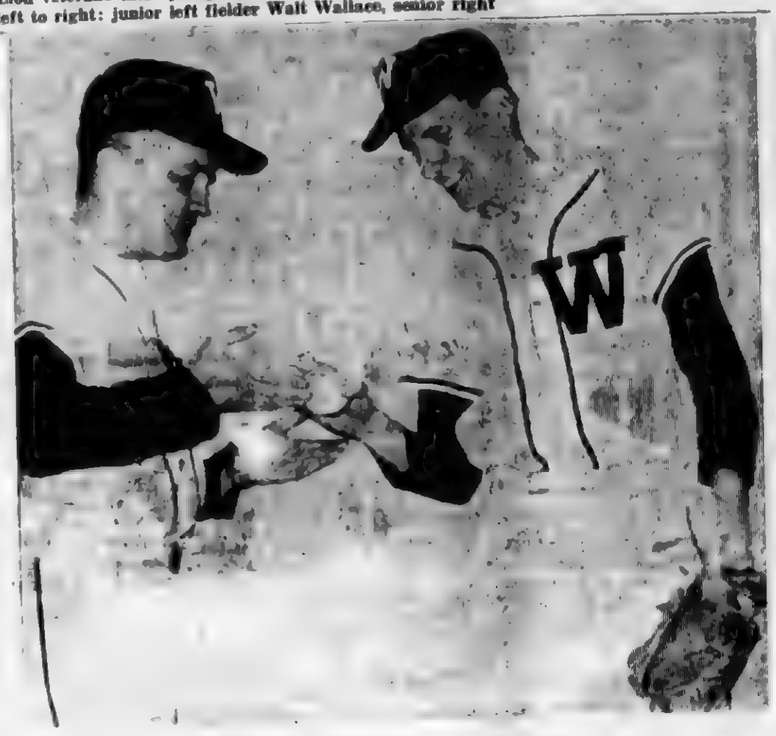
Team entries from throughout Ohio are being received for the Second Annual Hospital Day Golf Tournament at the Chillicothe Veterans Administration Hospital.

The tourney is being sponsored by the Chillicothe Swing Club of United Voluntary Services, a gofers organization whose members work as volunteers in veterans and military hospitals.

THE INVITATIONAL event gets underway at 8 a.m. Sunday, May 5, and consists of three flights.

One is for ladies while a "championship" and a "first" flight are planned for men. They will vie with patient teams for the club's Josef E. Clark Memorial Trophies.

PHYSICAL FITNESS is stressed as part of the treatment program at Chillicothe VA Hospital, one of the three largest neuropsychiatric hospitals operated by the Veterans Administration.



The hospital has a large stadium, an exercise building housing a gym and an Olympic-size pool, nine-hole golf course, bowling alleys, tennis courts, horseshoe courts, badminton courts, and table tennis.

These are among the hospital facilities the public is invited to see during the hospital's "open house" on Hospital Day.

Weather Never Spoils Hungry Fish Appetite

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors By ROB COCHRAN

Everyone wishes for that ideal day when water conditions are perfect, the temperature is right and the fish are hitting. But conditions are seldom perfect and we must make do with what we have—rain showers, muddy water, finicky fish.

All successful anglers have one rule in common, go fishing when you can! Do not wait until the moon or the wind is right.

THE SECRET, of course, is to be adaptable and to change your fishing methods to fit the day. One of the most common aggravations from now on will be muddy or roily water after nearly every rainy period. When the water gets so bad that you can "plant corn in it," fishing is bound to be poor and you might as well put in your window screens or mow the grass.

There are many days when the water is roiled, far from perfect, but will yield fish to the knowledgeable angler. Under these conditions aquatic creatures switch from visual control to "instruments" and carry on life pretty much as usual. By understanding this, your creel will be heavier.

The instruments in question are simply organs of smell and hearing, senses that are just as important as sight to a fish's well-being. With visibility reduced, they'll carry the load.

. . BAIT IS the tried and proven prescription for curing the disabilities of mud blindness. Most any baits that give off a tantilizing aroma will penetrate the visual barrier and entice hungry fish within range.

This is especially true with the bottom feeders, which often go on a feeding spree after the water has been stirred by runoff. These would include catfish, bullheads, carp and suckers.

The other sense-hearing can be just as useful to the fisherman who doesn't give up because of silt-laden streams. He knows that much of the success of night fishing depends on the fish's response to sounds. And the proof lies in the fact that the best lure on a moonless night is often a black one.

. . SO IF YOU want to try for bass or crappies, break out the noisiest underwater plug in your tackle box. Shapes and patterns are of secondary importance, but the lure should be of the rapidly vibrating type or have spinners on it. A spinner with a good-working blade is also a good choice. Another tip is to use white or yellow lures, or chrome spinners.

Fishing muddy water is far from ideal, but it is not impossible. Some of my most memorable catches were not trophies, but were fish taken under difficult conditions. On a day when everyone is catching fish, there is not so much of which to be proud. But when everyone else is skunked, a couple of fish loom mighty large.

The main thing to remember is that fish don't go "home" when things are not just right. Why should you?

Bexley, East, Whitehall Pace Area Cindermen

Track records shattered and fell during the week's course of cinder activity around the area.

Bexley, East and Whitehall came up with wins while Eastmoor, Academy and Walnut Ridge were numbered among the losers.

THE LIONS remained undefeated in dual competition by speeding past Circleville, 75-43, while East trimmed Walnut Ridge, 83-26, and Whitehall outpointed both Brookhaven and Franklin Heights in a triangular affair.

Rick Harbold's 12¼ points set the pace in Bexley's win. Harbold claimed a new Lion record in the pole vault, clearing the bar at 11 feet, 8 inches.

The rest of Harbold's points were accumulated with a win in the 220, a third-place finish in the high jump and a spot on Bexley's winning 880 relay team.

TOM SCHOOLFIELD'S eight points showed the way in the Tigers' win over the Scotties. Schoolfield notched first place in the high hurdles and finished second in the lows.

It was Clark Fuller day again at Franklin Heights as the Ram speedboy added up 18 points to Whitehall's 74—39½—32½ win.

Fuller's performance included wins in the high hurdles, 220 and 440 plus the runnerup points in the broad jump event.

THE RAMS traveled to Newark Saturday for that school's Relays but yielded the top spot to Marietta, 38-30½.

Mike Short helped the Rams to their runnerup point total by setting a new mark in the shot put with a toss of 51 feet, two and one-half inches.

Eastmoor bowed twice during the week as the Warriors were outpointed by Central and Linden in a triangular, 70—41½—35½ and tied for fifth place in the Steubenville Invitational.

BRIGHT SPOT of the twin setback was the pole vault performance of Jim Clark, who took the event in the Central-Linden meet and set a new mark at Steubenville with a 12'6" effort, well under his 13'4.5", set earlier this season.

Academy finished runnerup to Carroll, 65½ to 43½ in a triangular last week with the Bulldogs and Canal Winchester, despite a triple-event win by Viking John Larrimer.

Larrimer finished first in the 100, 220 and 440 events to top all individual scorers. Whitchester finished in third place with 41 markers.

Parks' Workshop Reveals Statewide Camping 'Boom'

The number 10 seems to be a significant figure when it comes to Ohio campers, according to V. W. Flickinger, chief of the Division of Parks.

Ten types of campers have increased 10 times over in the past 10 years. This information came out in a camping workshop held by the division to discuss design and construction techniques that will aid in the efficient operation and maintenance of campgrounds, some of which become small cities during the summer season.

IT WAS SHOWN that camping has mushroomed in the state since 1953. In fiscal year 1953-'54 there were 63,972 camper-days logged in Ohio. By 1961-'62—the total was 700,431.

"Splitting campers into 10 types may be cutting things a little fine," commented Flickinger. "But they are easily recognized by park managers, and each type seems to want slightly different facilities and puts different demands on camping areas. They must be identified in order to talk intelligently about campground design and construction."

According to Flickinger campers are divided into: sleeping bag (back-packers and hikers), tent, tent-trailer, converted school bus, boat (those that come ashore), station wagon, turtle back (units carried on pick-up trucks), self-propelled (units manufactured by auto companies) and transient (as differentiated from vacation campers).

Crum Covers Pan-Am Games For WLW-C

WLW-C sportscaster Jimmy Crum departed by plane last evening for San Paulo, Brazil and the Pan American Games to provide TV-4 viewers with filmed reports on the progress of five local performers, competing in the '63 games.

Crum will shoot over 3500 feet of film, showing the efforts of East High School high jumper Estelle Baskerville, OSU basketball All-American Gary Bradds, U.S. cycling team member Gus Husse and Buckeye diving stars Lou Vitucci and Juan Botella.

Three 30-minute filmed reports, highlighting these five local stars, can be viewed on Channel Four on three consecutive Monday evenings (May 13, 20 and 27) at 9:30 p.m.

NAA Club, 'Snakehunters,' Make Conservation Pleasure

SNAKEHUNTERS' PROJECT of license sales is booming as tool store manager Ken Boals, and the club vice-president, J. H. Glass, watch President R. A. Cunningham present a license to Joseph White in Columbus Hardware's inplant operation.

There is a group at North American Aviation, Inc. that was unaware any news agency knew of them until a Hartley reporter called on the president. The band is a conservation club called the "Snakehunters," 140-strong, which has been involved in conservation projects since the inception in 1951.

According to NAA public relations man Les Hinshaw, the purpose of the group is two-fold—"conservation and having fun."

Snakehunters President R. A. Chamberlain, 1181 Billiedr, however, felt that the Snakehunters probed deeper than that, although Hinshaw's statement was superficially correct. A list of Snakehunter projects is long, extending from members' sons building birdhouses, to the planting of trees in the Dam Park northeast of Worthington.

The current project is the sale of hunting and fishing licenses. With hunting presently illegal, the written permission to trap the scaly ones is the legal activity. These licenses are sold both within the NAA plant and in hardware stores on the "outside." To date, more than 350 fishing licenses have been sold in the nine locations.

The license revenue, of course, conserves taxes to some degree as well as contributing to the coffers of the Snakehunters, allowing them to do more projects.

The remainder of the Snakehunters' finances come from dues and a dinner once each month. It is in this dinner that club projects are planned.

The Snakehunters are currently working toward getting their own land on which they plan to construct a lake. At present they are using the facilities of the NAA employes' park. Plans for this land and lake are not complete due to negotiations with the present owner.

A forthcoming project includes the planting of trees and shrubbery in the relatively greens-less Walnut Ridge section.

Snakehunter charitable projects are not limited strictly to conservation. Last Christmas $100 was donated to the Franklin Village Christmas Fund. Cunningham and Co. also sponsored the NAA Club Festival, a convention in which each of the 28 clubs at NAA set up a booth in order to explain their purposes and to recruit new members.

Cunningham has been a member of the Snakehunters since 1956, currently serving as president. The vice-president is J. H. Glass. 236 E. Tulane-rd, a member since 1952.

In all, the Snakehunters have completed or are working on enough projects to fill a page-and-a-half of paper.

Delve Into Shakespeare

Capital University's production of Shakespeare's romantic comedy "A Midsummer Night's Dream" includes five East End residents. The Elizabethan five-act play will be presented as part of the May Day festivities on Campus. Playing dates are May 3 and 4.

st, plays Titania, the omnipotent Queen of the Faries. ent Queen of the Fairies. Among her subjects are Jayne Christiansen, 705 Montrose-av; Deborah Dolezal, 2529 Dover-rd. and Betty Ann Lessberg, 4090 Etna-rd.

Hugo Schmidt, 614 College-av, plays the role of the farcical Peter Quince.

Elaine Warren, 4576 St. Ann-ln, is one of two student directors for the production.

Deny Two Traffic Signal Requests

Two requests for installation of traffic signals in E. Livingston-rd were denied in action taken by the Columbus Traffic and Transportation Commission.

The commission denied the petition for a traffic signal between Roosevelt-av and Cassingham-rd on recommendation of Chief Engineer John L. Gallagher.

Gallagher said he did not feel a signal would be warranted in this area at the present time, but that the area is under consideration for future work.

Also denied by the commission was a request for a signal at the intersection of Cunard-rd and Livingston-av.

Residents of the area had petitioned for the signal and reported "it is almost impossible to turn from Cunard-rd into Livingston-av in either direction."

Gallagher told the commission members that there is a push-button light at the intersection of Livingston-av and Zettler-st to serve the pupils of Bishop Hartley High School and Johnson Park Junior High School.

Part of the future program for signalization, Gallagher said, calls for signals at Barnett-rd and at Courtright-rd.

The commission withheld action on a request for a signal shift from the intersection of E. Broad-st and Chesterfield-rd to Gould-rd.

SAFETY TROPHY for school maintaining the best patrol is held by Mayor Walter R. Moling and Sgt. R. A. Wells.

BLANCHE KLEIN HONORED FOR 2500 HOURS WITH VA

They work 13 hours at a stretch, energetically and with unflagging enthusiasm.

Neither is young, and neither gets paid a dime.

Blanche and Charles Klein drive down to Chillicothe every Thursday.

There they are volunteer recreation workers at Veteran's Hospital.

Mrs. Klein will receive a silver pin Sunday in recognition of having given more than 2500 hours to the hospital.

She is the only member of the American Legion Auxiliary in Franklin County to receive this honor and has more hours to her credit than all but one Ohio member.

Charles Klein who, until his retirement from the railroad in 1958 had only one day a year to devote to this service, has already logged 626 hours.

When Mrs. Klein first started at the hospital, many of the patients were older men, veterans of World War I, but now the group is younger and includes many who fought in Korea.

However, the work remains the same. Starting with a class at 8:30 a.m. the volunteers work with four groups of 40 or 50 ex-service men through the day.

"When I was a little younger, I even played soft ball with them," she laughed, "but keeping bowling scores and playing pinochle is more my speed now."

And the day always winds up with a dance in which the Kleins are anything but wall flowers.

"She dances with the patients and I watch out for employes and other volunteer workers who need a partner," Cline explained.

He is a member of the "Swing Club," one of the groups that is part of the United Voluntary Service who play golf with the veterans. This past week Klein edged a win over a man half his age, played, he said "everything, but quarterback."

The traveling team only had 13 members, he explained, and no one was allowed to get hurt. It was this rugged group, playing without headgear or shoulder pads that was never defeated in Columbus.

Mrs. Klein, like other auxiliary members frequently bakes cakes and cookies to give the men, and Mr. Klein is known as an "easy mark" for cigarettes.

Provided with cigarettes to give as prizes to winners of the pinoche tournaments, he buys a carton or two on his own to give to the losers.

One Thursday each month a party is held for birthday celebrants of the past 30 days.

Then a whole district of Blanche Klein

auxiliary members, crisp in their blue and yellow uni-home-made cakes, cookies, candy and ice cream.

"This is where part of our Poppy money goes," Mrs. Klein explained.

Both had nothing but praise for the recreational facilities with which they work.

Like all boys of any age, Mr. Klein was especially fascinated by the five miles of electric trains, on a three deck level which help them while away many tedious hours for the men.

Mr. and Mrs. Klein feel they have found a wonderful solution for use of a retired couple's spare time.

Enthusiastically, they urge anyone who possibly can, to attend the annual open house Sunday, May 5.

Bexley Teachers Will Get A New Annuity Program

Teachers in the Bexley School District will soon become eligible for an insurance policy, a little out of the ordinary.

The teachers will pick the price, the premium, the maturity date, and just about everything connected with it.

This "policy" is in the form of an annuity program announced in the Bexley School Board meeting a week ago.

The program, to be begun shortly in the school system, has been cleared with the state auditor's office and the Internal Revenue Service.

The annuity provides a pension, but it is not mandatory to join, as is the OASI (Social Security) program.

Whether a teacher enrolls in the program is his own choice. Nor is there a set amount or percentage to be deducted from the monthly salary as in OASI.

The amount to be deducted is again a matter of personal preference and financial ability. There is a maximum percentage, however, but the figure has not yet been determined.

The reason for the deduction — rather than an outright transfer from bank to insurance company — is to keep the annuity payment non-taxable. When the annuity is taken back, however, the individual is taxed.

The program is designed to give more security to a teacher after retirement than would a social security pension.

As long as a person is teaching, he or she may keep on contributing to the private jackpot. It is quite possible that $12,000 to $15,000 could be realized if a person is a member of the program for a period of 20 years.

After "shopping around," the Bexley School Board finally decided to use the Educators and Investors Life Insurance Co.

This annuity program is something which is relatively new, but seems to be catching on quickly across the country.

It is a worthwhile investment, according to board members.

Whitehall Safety Drive In Full Swing

The City of Whitehall is currently in the midst of its annual safety program, sparked this year by Sergeant R. A. Wells and Patrolman Paul K. Jackson.

The program is designed to educate and inspire both youth and adults (with emphasis on the former) into taking a greater interest and participation in safety.

Kindergarteners are the first to be indoctrinated. This is done with a series of coloring posters which depict scenes of safety. The same program is held in the elementary grades.

Last year, the illustration to be given color was on the theme of "strangers bearing gifts" or some other form of enticement. The assault of a three-year-old East Side girl should, according to Sgt. Wells, provide enough impetus this year to heed the perpetual warning. This year, the theme concerns general safety procedures around schools — observing school patrolmen, crosswalks, etc.

The best "artists" will receive bicycles — 39 in all — donated by local merchants.

Junior high school students enter the campaign on a more original level, that of creating safety slogans. According to Sgt. Wells, this not only stimulates originality and creativity, but also makes the student think about facets of safety more strongly. Winners in this competition will also take a share of the bicycles.

Senior high school students will compete in a poster-creating campaign, each class contributing one poster. The prize for the winning poster is healthy — at least $50 to the particular class. The students decided on an "all or nothing" policy rather than first, second and third prizes.

The entire program will wind up May 2 at 7:30 p.m. in the Whitehall - Yearling High School auditorium. The winning pictures, slogans and posters will be announced at that time.

To further the safety-mindedness of adults, there will be two short talks. One will be given by M. L. VanDagens, director of sales training for Chrysler Corp. The other will be delivered by the Rev. Charles L. Harrison. There will also be a film on traffic safety.

The final award to be given at the meeting will be a large trophy presented to the school (elementary and junior high school) maintaining the best school patrol. Previous winners have been the Etna Road School (1961) and Beechwood School (1962).

PAINT-FACTS
Facts you should know about paint that will help you get more for your PAINT DOLLAR . . .

1. "Paint can be bought at any price you want to pay." Like so many articles you buy for yourself, or your home, some high — some low, some in-between, some national paint companies have more price lines than filling stations have pumps.
2. Why pay more when you can buy for less. The saying "you get only what you pay for" applies to paint just as other things you buy. When you pay a low price for paint you can expect to get low quality.
3. What is wrong with low-price paint? When paint is made "down to a price", certain necessary ingredients are skimped or totally eliminated to reduce the paint cost. Without a full measure of each ingredient, the paint is bound to be of inferior quality.
4. Why is low-price paint "actually expensive". Because with the substitute ingredient it is made of, it does not cover well, nor does it spread as far. So a greater amount of paint (often twice as much) must be used to cover a certain area. Because the paint is poor quality, it does not hold up and must be re-coated more often. These two fators, poor-coverage which means more paint, and poor quality which means paint more often, more than use up the few pennies or dollars saved by purchasing poor paint.
5. What then is your best course. Since it has been proven that quality paint costs less, looks better and wears longest, be sure you get manufacturer's First Quality, get paint made by reliable manufacturers.
6. Where to buy? At the B & A Paint Company, 33 E. Long Street, Columbus' oldest and most reliable paint supply company. B & A's North Side Store, 4503 N. High Street, AM. 3-5405 and the New B & A East Side Store, 3354 E. Main Street, 237-8433. You can be sure at B & A, for never in their 42 years of doing business have they ever handled a second, third, or less line of paint. First quality only, at the B & A Paint Company, and that adds up to Dean & Barry and Pratt & Lambert fine paint materials.

As long as a person is teaching, he or she may keep on contributing to the private jackpot. It is quite possible that $12,000 to $15,000 could be realized if a person is a member of the program for a period of 20 years.

After "shopping around," the Bexley School Board finally decided to use the Educators and Investors Life Insurance Co.

This annuity program is something which is relatively new, but seems to be catching on quickly across the country. It is a worthwhile investment, according to board members.

Whitehall Safety Drive In Full Swing

The City of Whitehall is currently in the midst of its annual safety program, sparked this year by Sergeant R. A. Wells and Patrolman Paul K. Jackson.

The program is designed to educate and inspire both youth and adults (with emphasis on the former) into taking a greater interest and participation in safety.

Kindergarteners are the first to be indoctrinated. This is done with a series of coloring posters which depict scenes of safety. The same program is held in the elementary grades.

Last year, the illustration to be given color was on the theme of "strangers bearing gifts" or some other form of enticement. The assault of a three-year-old East Side girl should, according to Sgt. Wells, provide enough impetus this year to heed the perpetual warning. This year, the theme concerns general safety procedures around schools — observing school patrolmen, crosswalks, etc.

The best "artists" will receive bicycles — 30 in all — donated by local merchants.

Junior high school students enter the campaign on a more original level, that of creating safety slogans. According to Sgt. Wells, this not only stimulates originality and creativity, but also makes the student think about facets of safety more strongly. Winners in this competition will also take a share of the bicycles.

Senior high school students will compete in a poster-creating campaign, each class contributing one poster. The prize for the winning poster is healthy — at least $50 to the particular class. The students decided on an "all or nothing" policy rather than first, second and third prizes.

The entire program will wind up May 2 at 7:30 p.m. in the Whitehall - Yearling High School auditorium. The winning pictures, slogans and posters will be announced at that time.

To further the safety-mindedness of adults, there will be two short talks. One will be given by M. L. VanDagens, director of sales training for Chrysler Corp. The other will be delivered by the Rev. Charles L. Harrison. There will also be a film on traffic safety.

The final award to be given at the meeting will be a large trophy presented to the school (elementary and junior high school) maintaining the best school patrol. Previous winners have been the Etna Road School (1961) and Beechwood School (1962).

PAINT-FACTS

Facts you should know about paint that will help you get more for your PAINT DOLLAR . . .

1. "Paint can be bought at any price you want to pay." Like so many articles you buy for yourself, or your home, some high — some low, some in-between, some national paint companies have more price lines than filling stations have pumps.

2. Why pay more when you can buy for less. The saying "you get only what you pay for" applies to paint just as other things you buy. When you pay a low price for paint you can expect to get low quality.

3. What is wrong with low-price paint? When paint is made "down to a price", certain necessary ingredients are skimped or totally eliminated to reduce the paint cost. Without a full measure of each ingredient, the paint is bound to be of inferior quality.

4. Why is low-price paint "actually expensive". Because with the substitute ingredient it is made of, it does not cover well, nor does it spread as far. So a greater amount of paint (often twice as much) must be used to cover a certain area. Because the paint is poor quality, it does not hold up and must be re-coated more often. These two fators, poor-coverage which means more paint, and poor quality which means paint more often, more than use up the few pennies or dollars saved by purchasing poor paint.

5. What then is your best course. Since it has been proven that quality paint costs less, looks better and wears longest, be sure you get manufacturer's First Quality, get paint made by reliable manufacturers.

6. Where to buy? At the B & A Paint Company, 33 E. Long Street, Columbus' oldest and most reliable paint supply company, B & A's North Side Store, 4503 N. High Street, AM. 3-5405 and the New B & A East Side Store, 3364 E. Main Street, 237-8433. You can be sure at B & A, for never in their 42 years of doing business have they ever handled a second, third, or less line of paint. First quality only, at the B & A Paint Company, and that adds up to Dean & Barry and Pratt & Lambert fine paint materials.

City Planning Commission Hears Four Zoning Petitions

Agenda for the Wednesday meeting of the Columbus City Planning Commission included consideration of four requests for change of zoning classification.

A change from manufacturing to apartment residential was requested for a parcel on the west side of Fairwood-av, about 225 feet south of Innis-av.

Building of a facility for storage of construction equipment was listed as the purpose for a request to change from commercial to manufacturing two lots at the northeast corner of Studer-av and Lawrence-dr.

Special Reading Center At St. Mary This Summer

A reading center for students from the first grade through high school will be conducted this summer by the Dominican Sisters at St. Mary of the Springs. The center is affiliated with the diocesan reading program.

Courses offered by the center include remedial reading and phonics for students with a reading problem, reading development and study skills for the average student who wants to improve, and, for the good student who wants to do better, speed reading and comprehension skills. In addition, there will be special sessions for those with speech problems.

Special arrangements may also be made for tutoring in other school subjects.

The courses are open to boys and girls from parochial and public schools whose principals indicate that they can benefit from the program. The classes will be divided according to age and grade reading levels and will be limited to a maximum of 15 per group. There will be two sessions for the reading classes — 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Speech classes will run in four one-hour sessions, beginning at 8:30 a.m.

The classes begin June 24 and end Aug. 2. The testing day, for which all registrants must be present, is June 13; testing starts at 9 a.m. For registration, parents should call CL. 2-2137 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 12 noon.

Cap Slates College Prep Programs

A special pre-college prep program, aimed at maturing the late-maturers, will be inaugurated at Capital University this summer.

Under the direction of Dr. Frank H. Bretz, vice-president of academic affairs, the "Summer Program in the Foundations for College" will be held on campus June 24-Aug. 2, at the same time as the University's regular summer session.

"Many of these pupils whose scholastic motivation came too late in high school to have potential to be good college students," said Dr. Bretz. "Capital University feels this potential should not be lost to society."

Capital's Foundations Program will be open to 120 students. Each will be enrolled in six hours of college work plus a daily study skills session.

Airman Honored

Captain Jerry H. Nabers, son of James H. Nabers, 101 S. Weyant-av, has been accorded dual honors in addition to receiving his United States Air Force pilot wings upon graduation from pilot training at Moody AFB, Ga. Capt. Nabors won the Air Training Command Commander's trophy in recognition of his superior ratings in all phases of training and was named a distinguished graduate.

Explorers Live It Up At Lockbourne AFB

A "Goony Bird," Air Force transport plane, worked hard last weekend at Lockbourne moving troops.

Clumsy with unaccustomed parachutes, the "troops" were made up of 500 Boy Scouts and Explorers from five Central Ohio counties.

The brief excursions into the wild blue yonder were only part of the program planned for the teenagers during their two-day "air encampment."

If life in the Air Force could be proved to be as interesting as the 36 hours the boys were exposed to, the local recruiting officer should be doing a land-office business.

The young men got their first look at the Buckeye, new jet tanker designed to maintain a crew in 40 degree below zero weather for seven days. Many saw at close hand the first operational jet fighter, the T-33 used in Korea and now converted to a trainer. The EB 47 was on static display with more electronic equipment than most boys even are aware exists.

The demonstrations of the sentry dogs, one minute viciously lunging at a target, the next moment grinning at their trainers as they waltzed on their hind legs, brought gasps of admiration from the Scouts.

The judo exhibition highlighted another part of the weekend, with the SAC champs showing how experts practice self-defense.

Sunday evening, it was a weary bunch of kids that left for home, but also a gang who had been given the opportunity few civilians have—to closely observe their country's Air Force at work and at play.

Keep Utilities Private

Current discussions between the City of Columbus and Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Company appear to be pointing in one definite direction—something better for Columbus power consumers.

The offer made by Harry M. Miller, C and SOE president, to make a $3.5-million rate slash possible over a three-year period in exchange for a study as to the desirability of the city's expanding its own power operation sounds like one under which Columbus consumers cannot lose. This is particularly true if there are no strings attached in advance of the survey.

This presentation sounds especially good since it appears to be an admission that the C and SOE can afford to make such a rate slash. By the same token, it appears they are so certain of their case that facts will be produced to point up the inadequacies of further municipal ownership.

That portion of the proposal pertaining to the swap of the C and SOE-owned Columbus Transit Company for the municipal light plant doesn't appear to have too much good flavor at this point.

We have long been advocates of having utilities operated by business firms rather than political institutions. We will continue to argue that this is the best for our community. Therefore, if the city administration is determined to hold on to an electric plant, it might be well that they expand no further than their present limits. But, by all means, stay out of an additional public utility field, the transit company!

We will join all of Columbus in welcoming a reduction in our electric rates and we sincerely believe much can be brought out in favor of private rather than public operation of our utilities.

Laws Safeguard Well-Being

Governor James A. Rhodes has proclaimed May 1 as "Law Day U.S.A.," and the week of Apr. 28 to May 4 as "Law In Your Life Week" in Ohio.

Basic objectives of the national observance of Law Day are:

To foster a deeper respect for law by teaching how laws serve and protect citizens.

To encourage responsible citizenship by demonstrating that individual rights and freedoms involve individual obligations.

To emphasize the basic values of the role of law in the United States as contrasted with the rule of force under communism.

Law In Your Life Week, a special observance for Ohio, is sponsored by the Ohio State Bar Association in cooperation with more than 100 local bar associations throughout the state.

These bar associations are to be commended for the extra effort they will put forth to better acquaint all citizens with the rights afforded them by law and their obligation to protect these rights.

He Remembers Buster Roos

A couple of weeks ago it was our pleasure to see Ralph Edwards, the TV star, who was in town for the opening kickoff of the Cancer Crusade in Ohio.

Edwards is wrapped up in his volunteer work for the American Cancer Society. He takes it seriously. He is not a figurehead. He's a working charman, and he seems to know whereof he speaks.

Ralph Edwards

"I'd like to tell you how I got into the cancer fight," Ralph told us. "For me the reason was a voice on a radio tape, a child's voice: 'And then I'd like a pony and a bike . . . and a balloon . . .' It was the faltering voice of a little boy who would soon die, the voice of Buster Roos, an eight-year-old cancer victim who, for a very brief moment, had some of his dreams come true on my radio program 'Truth or Consequences.'

"That was 16 years ago and the beginning of my interest in cancer. Last year when the American Cancer Society asked if I would be National Crusade chairman, I felt the time had come to step into this one big volunteer job," Edwards went on.

"My private memorial to Buster Roos is, very simply, a world free of cancer for the boys and girls of tomorrow," Ralph says.

"I have been fortunate in meeting many, many fine scientists who are conducting cancer research. In New York I met Dr. Rodney Heller, a director of Sloan-Kettering Memorial Cancer Center. He's a vigorous, robust man, who has had cancer — twice. Surgery and radiation cured him.

"In Houston, Dr. A. Clark Griffin of the University of Texas told me about the role viruses may play in cancer. Some of the evidence supporting this theory comes from investigations of leukemia, another form of cancer. The American Cancer Society is currently supporting leukemia-related research in the amount of $2,014,000," Edwards said.

"Here in Columbus I've met Dr. Charles A. Doan, one of the best-known leukemia researchers. Dr. Doan told me of progress being made in this field by use of new drugs and mentioned that patients are now being kept alive up to six and eight years, where the prognosis a few years ago would have been six months or so.

"Dr. Doan says it is this constant hope that the next drug might be the one to result in the ultimate answer which keeps physicians and researchers going at this problem," Edwards said.

Edwards talked more. It was interesting to hear him. He is a dedicated man. There is nothing phony about him. He wants to be a good Cancer Crusade chairman. He's one of two million volunteers working hard.

Some of our neighbors are joining him as volunteers, and when they come to your home in the next week or 10 days, they will be bringing you information which could save your life, and they will be asking for support for a program designed to save lives — research and education.

Physicians, housewives, businessmen, researchers . . . a great army which deals with cancer every day says this is the way cancer can be whipped..

Maybe they are right. It's the way we all joined together to wipe out polio.

Are You Another Little Card Carrier?

You know the type — the fellow who always distributes little cards or pamphlets bearing terse homilies, credos or verses on how to get along in life. He's usually a salesman, who probably hopes his Johnny Appleseed card-sowing will reap future sales.

I have such a pamphlet before me now. Given to me by a salesman, it obviously was written by a salesman for salesmen. Frankly, it's good. But I'm no salesman and assuming that most of us aren't, I have taken the liberty to rewrite it so that it pertains to a majority group — namely husbands.

McPeak

Except for a few key words, minor deletions and major distortions, the following credo, titled "The Art of Getting Along," is exactly as anonymously printed in the original. The parenthetical remarks, naturally, are mine:

1. Sooner or later, a husband discovers, if he is wise, that married life is a mixture of good days and bad, victory and defeat, give and take. (This is true. In nearly a dozen married years, I've had a few good days — none of which I can recall at the moment. I've also had a few victories — mostly when my wife was in late stages of pregnancy and before she took up karate. The give and take is a 50-50 thing — I give and she takes.)

2. He learns that it doesn't pay to be a too-sensitive soul; that he should let some things go over his head like water off a duck's (perhaps "chicken" is a better word) back. (A show of sensitivity paid off for me for several years. But now when I cry, my wife opens an umbrella and ignores me. I let many things go over my head. Just yesterday I ducked two pots, a package of frozen broccoli, and the fall-winter edition of Alden's mail-order catalog.)

3. He learns that he who loses his temper usually loses out. (He also learns that "she" who loses her temper always wins out.)

4. He learns that all husbands have burnt toast for breakfast now and then and that he shouldn't take his wife's grouch too seriously). (The only time I don't have burnt toast for breakfast is when my wife makes burnt oatmeal. If by "wife's grouch" the writer means mother-in-law, you certainly shouldn't take her seriously — or any other way, for that matter.)

5. He learns that carrying a chip (or a chippie's hair) on his shoulder is the easiest way to get in a fight. (No comment.)

6. He learns that buck-passing always turns out to be a boomerang and that it never pays. (That's right, it never pays . . . the husband. You pass the wife a few bucks and zing, like a boomerang, she's back for a few more.)

7. He comes to learn that he is not indispensable, that his home could run along perfectly well without him. (But not without his paycheck.)

8. He learns that his wife is a human being and that it does no harm to smile and say "good morning," even if it's raining. (True, it does no harm. Of course, it likely will do no good either.)

9. He learns to sympathize with the young nincompoop who just got married, because he remembers how bewildered he was when he first started out. (As years go by, a numbness sets in and the bewilderment is less disturbing.)

10. He learns not to worry when he loses a fight, because experience has shown that if he always gives his best, his average will break pretty well. (Re-read parenthetical remark about "victories" below Item 1.)

11. He learns that no husband ever got to first base alone, and that it is only through cooperative effort that he will move on to better things. (Like left field.)

12. He learns that wives are not any harder to get along with in one place than another, and that "getting along" depends about 98 per cent on his behavior. (The other two per cent depends on how fast he can run.)

13. He learns that wives are not monsters trying to get the last ounce of money out of their mates, but that they are usually pretty sharp operators who have succeeded through artful conniving and who want to do the right thing . . . for themselves. (Much justifiable distortion in this item.)

(Could there be any significance in the fact that the credo contains "13" items?)

EARTH PATTERN

Lovely my garden
Wears its bloom and tree and sod
Like star-bright jewels.
Yet it cannot be
My only inspiration
And consolation.
For always I must Go forth to a fellowship
Sharing loss and gain,
Then come back to rest
Renewing strength and valor
Spent in common cause.

Home is the base where we come back to renew our strength after spending it, for loss or gain, in the great fellowship of humanity. We are dependent upon one another more than we know, for the race is a family, each member giving and needing, sharing experiences more common to than unique to a few.

Wherever we may live, if we have a tree and a rose and a bit of grass, so much the better. As they look to the life-giving sun and adapt themselves to Nature's changing moods, so may we learn from them that things seen are an earnest of things yet unseen and that as

Foundations Of True Witnessing Suggested

I. True witnessing is rooted and grounded in faith in Jesus Christ as our Saviour and the Son of God. This faith can come only by hearing the Word.

The witness of the resurrection of our Lord receives power from on high. As a generator charges, revives and builds up a weak run-down battery so is a witness of our Lord built up with power from above; thus charged with spiritual power, we go forth to bring celestial light to a sin-laden world in suffering and misery.

Rev. Smith

The substance of power in our testimonial is His promise to give to every true believer Life everlasting, and a mansion where there are many mansions. He is a mansion of warmth to every stranger, to every one who is in need of a friend.

"Come unto Me," He said, "and I will give you rest; lay down, my weary one, lay down your head upon My breast."

II. Every true witness must have a little talk with Jesus. Tell Him all about your troubles; He will understand, and take you by the hand; He'll start a little fire burning, start a little prayer-wheel turning, just a little talk with Jesus makes everything right.

The foundation of all power to witness must come from close communion with Jesus. As the fires on the Temple altar were never allowed to go out, so Jesus as the Great High Priest will keep the fire of the Holy Spirit burning in our hearts if we pray for renewed zeal to serve Him in building His Kingdom.

III. Jesus gives to every true witness a perfect love that casts out fear:

Before we gain the victory we must struggle against the Red Sea of yearning for a new expression of our personalities; the Jericho of hidden desires; the Lion's Den of hatred and seeking after power to destroy all interference with our personal freedom; the Fiery Furnace of superiors who ever strive to dominate our lives; the ninth-hour crises in our own lives when some hidden foe puts us flat on our backs; the period when Satan will be "loosed for a little season"; the sting of death lurking in the wings waiting for the final drama of life to drop the curtain; the victory of the grave now shorn of its power.

The fullness of time has truly given new meaning to the "Great Commission," "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel . . . and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

These are the foundations of all true witnessing.

Get Ready For Some Strange Visitors

One of these days a swarthy gentleman in a turban is going to walk up to a hotel desk in—let's say—Cedar Rapids, sign the register and add: "Two wives, one concubine."

The desk clerk won't know whether to call the bellboy or the house dick. The U.S. Department of Commerce fervently hopes he'll call the bellboy.

For the drive to entice foreign visitors to the U.S.A. is now in full swing. The United States government is running come-hither ads in many foreign newspapers and periodicals. The airlines and steamship agencies are pushing the campaign. The hope is not only to fill unused travel space but also to whittle down in some measure the $1.1 billion deficit gap between what American tourists spent abroad last year and what we earned from foreign tourists on American soil.

Jones

It is quite a jolt to pick up The London Observer or the Paris Monde or the Neue Zurcher Zeitung and read a full page advertisement setting forth arguments on why you should see the United States. I saved a few tearsheets from a trip abroad last summer.

The London ad displayed a big picture of the Jefferson Memorial surrounded by blooming cherry trees. The blurb read: "How to take your wife on your next business trip to the U.S.A. for as little as five pounds a day." Five pounds is $14, and that requires a non-shopping wife.

Britishers were assured it wouldn't cost them a penny to visit the White House. Why should it? And then an American remembers that you can't go through Buckingham Palace or 10 Downing-st for any price.

British travelers must be keen on botany and bird-watching. Listen to this:

"You can picnic in the shade of Sequoia trees which were living in the time of Christ. You can see wild tiger lilies, gentians and azaleas, forget-me-nots, larkspur, pasqueflower, kalmia, cactus, lobelia, cardinalis and blue flax.

"American birds are worth seeing, too — roseate spoonbills, cardinals, scarlet tanagers, Baltimore orioles, snowy egrets, eagles, pelicans and ospreys galore. One hundred species in one day is not too much to expect."

How many Yanks could spot a pasqueflower, kalmia or roseate spoonbill?

The French ad from Le Monde appealed chiefly to women, apparently on the theory that stingy French husbands could be nagged into the trip. It showed a lovely lady in a 10-gallon hat astride a cow pony. It promised that for less than $10 a day you could live on a dude ranch with the horse thrown in.

Madame was assured that she could ride on the back of a mule to the bottom of Grand Canyon for 65 new francs, "mule comprise." Imagine calling one of those smart little burros a mule! For 15 cents, said the ad, one could voyage on the Staten Island ferry in the light of the moon, and you can get breakfast or "le snack" at a New York hotel for 60 cents. Some breakfast! Some snack! In Washington one can assist at the seances of Congress.

However astonishing these blandishments may be to Americans, the campaign is beginning to show some results. The Wall Street Journal reports that there were about 620,000 foreign visitors to the U.S. (not counting Canadians) in '62 as against 516,000 in '61. A Japanese travel agency estimates that 100,000 Japs are ready to see the U.S as soon as their government permits them to convert yen into dollars. This is expected this year, and thousands of special savings accounts have been established in Japanese banks.

The American Hotel Association is taking this travel seriously. It has put out a booklet to its members advising them that if Far Eastern visitors belch loudly after dinner it is their way of complimenting the food. South Americans, warns the A.H.A., clap their hands for service. This is not rudeness. Waiters must be reminded not to serve Moslems with the left hand, which is considered unclean.

America's airlines and railroads have special discounts for foreign visitors. But no one can top the Greyhound bus company's offer. For $99 it will give a foreigner the right to travel anywhere any time for 99 days. It has sold more than 12,000 tickets under this plan, and one bargain-hungry Australian family jammed in 16,000 miles of bus riding in 10 weeks.

But what does a foreign adventurer with shaky English do when he arrives in an American city where practically no one — not even the local travel agent—speaks anything else? Only a few communities have prepared for him.

The "Los Angeles at Home" club has 100 families on its list that speak a variety of languages and will invite visitors out to dinner. And the Fort Worth Council on World Affairs guarantees travelers a good time, including a trip to a cattle ranch where they can be photographed on a cutting horse, waving a lariat.

This is a wonderful idea. Most foreign visitors are both educated and interesting. They generally make appreciative guests. Any honest cross-section of any people, of course, would produce the counterparts of the loud-shirted American men who are noisy in the cantinas, and the bulging American women who wander into the ancient cathedrals wearing slacks. But prosperity abroad hasn't yet gotten down that far.

When it does, we'll be steering 'em and plucking 'em and snickering at 'em behind their backs, just as they do us.

Frosting On The Cake

Millions of literate minds all over the world are aware of the great importance of sane, rational diet for their general health. Too few are aware that much more priceless and important facts about a "balanced ration" for their minds and souls. No man can feed his mind and soul on trash or filth and not get the "diseases of the soul" that destroy so many. Habit is the heaviest word in our language and some words weigh a ton at least.

There is some excuse, perhaps, for people who were the victims of neglect in childhood and now battle daily with poverty. But what excuse can be offered for those who were brought up in good homes by conscientious parents, and who have most of the things necessary for family happiness? Yet these are some of the worst offenders among the Americans who refuse to discipline our growing children.

List Traffic Law Violation Areas

Increased enforcement of traffic laws in two districts on the East Side was called for in the Selective Enforcement Bulletin issued for the first 15 days of April by the Columbus Police Department.

District 60 was listed as an area requiring increased traffic law enforcement with special emphasis on Cleveland-av betwgen Gay and Grove. Special attention was called for between the hours of 9 p.m. and 1 a.m., with desired enforcement of laws concerning driving while under the influence of an intoxicating beverage and reckless operation of a motor vehicle.

Special attention was called for in district 61 on E. Main-st from 18th to Wilson. Hours of 7 to 10 a.m. were listed for special emphasis with attention to motorists who change lanes without safety and stop sign violations.

There were no fatal traffic accidents reported in the City of Columbus during the first 15 days of April, however the bulletin pointed out that 23 pedestrians were injured in traffic mishaps, 17 of which were children.

Get-Together Is Planned For Cubans

Cuban refugees in Columbus, through the cooperation of the Catholic Welfare Bureau, have planned a get-together Sunday, Apr. 28, from 4 to 10:30 p.m. at the Catholic Center, 80 S. Sixth-st.

The announcement was made by Joseph Gibboney, director of the Cuban Placement Program, who says that the event is open to all Cuban families in Columbus participating in the project.

This date is the same day of the regular monthly mass for Spanish speaking people, Gibboney added, which will be held at noon in Holy Cross Church, Fifth and Rich-sts, officiated by Fr. Paul Sicilia of Josephinum College.

THE SWEET SMELL OF SPRING

FOOLISH YOUNG BULLS might kick up their heels and wear themselves out when spring fever hits. But not "Ferdinand" who was spotted peacefully down on his knobby knees, crawling from grassy patch to grassy patch. The photographer, remembering a "Ferdinand" of 20 years ago, thoughtfully provided him with a daisy so that he could "just sit and smell the pretty flowers all day long."

Columbus Police Cite Three For 'Commie' Goods Sale

Managers of two of the three Columbus stores cited for violation of the city's "anti-red goods" ordinance have indicated that they will remove all Communist manufactured or processed merchandise from their stores.

First test of the ordinance passed on Apr. 8 came on Tuesday with issuance of summonses against Shoppers' Fair, 3610 E. Broad-st; Bargainland USA, 1909 E. Livingston-av, and Arlan's Department Store, 2361 Morse-rd.

In each case the charge was "offering for sale Communist manufactured or processed goods without a license, in violation of ordinance 203-63 of the city code."

Sgt. Will Daugherty of Safety Director Albert G. Giles' office reported that Detectives Allen Schilling and Robert DeWeese purchased goods at each of the stores on Monday.

In accordance with provisions of the ordinance, Daugherty said, registered letters had been sent to officials of each of the stores when an initial check indicated the presence of merchandise in violation of the ordinance. Purchases were made during rechecks which occurred at least one week following issuance of notice to comply with the ordinance, Daugherty said.

Meyer Hoffman of Bargainland USA told Hartley Newspapers that he was not aware that such material was still available at the store.

"We thought we had it all cleared out," he said. "We had three people go through the store.

"I would never apply for a license," Hoffman declared, and added, "It will never happen again."

David Schwartz, manager of Arlan's, said:

"We have no intention of obtaining a license and no intention of selling merchandise made in a Communist-controlled country. We started a check of that nature about six months ago, and our policy has been that we will not sell such items."

Schwartz explained that the items purchased by the detectives had apparently been placed in the store unintentionally.

The third manager and store named was Cornelius Barnes and the Shoppers' Fair.

Barnes said that he had "no comment," and that there would be no comment from any other store official.

Sgt. Daugherty reported that items purchased included the following:

Whisk brooms from Hungary, clothes baskets from Poland, various wooden items such as bread boards, broom sets and cutting boards, and wicker baskets from Yugoslavia.

Columbus City Attorney John Young reported that conviction on the violation carries a maximum penalty of $500 and/or six months in jail.

Young indicated that more such charges would be forthcoming.

NIPPERT IN RACE FOR SCHOOL POST

John E. Nippert

John E. Nippert, vice-president and treasurer of the Nippert Electric Products Co., 1759 W. Mound-st, today announced his first-time candidacy as member of the Columbus Board of Education.

His name will appear on the November ballot along with the names of Hilltopper Paul R. Langdon (president, incumbent) and two North Siders, Don Calhoun, Jr. (I) and Dr. William Logan.

Two veteran members of the board, Homer Trantham and Daniel W. DeHayes, have chosen not to run.

Nippert, 50, lives at 1615 Berkeley-rd. Born in the South Side, he was graduated from South High School and attended Ohio State and Franklin Universities. He moved to the Hilltop where he lived until 1951.

Two years ago he was committee Tuesday, was passed by legislators on two previous occasions but vetoed by Governors Frank J. Lausche and Michael V. DiSalle.

No official word has come from Governor Rhodes' office as to how he might act if the senators see fit to repeat their past performances. Of course, indications are strong that there won't be a repeat for the simple reason that there are different senators mulling over the matter this time and, in fact, five less lawmakers than in previous general assembly sessions.

"There's a lot of interest in this bill," Shaw said seriously. "I'm not going to say that I'm against the nurses' stand but I do think that the bill has some merit."

To date, the biggest urging for passage of the bill has come from Rev. Fr. John P. Gallagher, director of Catholic nurses in the Youngstown, O., Diocese.

Fr. Gallagher, in an article printed in the Youngstown Vindicator, said, "I appeal to all nurses of the Ohio State Nursing Association, out of a sense of loyalty to the institutions that trained them and in the interest of the general public, to ask their representatives in the Ohio Legislature to vote in favor of Sub. S.B. 66."

Mary Jo Grotenrath, attorney and legislative counsel for the OSNA, fired a telegram back to the Vindicator saying:

"In the light of the church's traditional and respected teachings in the area of social justice, I am somewhat appalled that Father would use the dignity of his office to promote contrary legislation.

"As recently as last week, in his encyclical 'Pacem In Terris' the Holy Father, Pope John XXIII, deplored special interest legislation. So do we."

There is much confusion, actually, over what the bill actually would do.

When contacted Tuesday, Senator Roberts stated that "the only thing the bill does is return the law to the same status that was in effect prior to a court decision in 1959 and makes a hospital or charitable institutions liable in the selection of its personnel."

The Cleveland Press, in an article Apr. 18 headlined "Ohio Hospitals Seek to Regain Immunity From Suits," took the same view and suggested that the bill would remove the personal liability of hospital employes for negligent acts committed by them.

"This is not true," Miss Grotenrath stated. "This article erroneously suggested that the hospital immunity bill in its present form would remove the personal liability of hospital administrators.

"This is not true," Miss Grotenrath stated. "The R.N.'s have never asked for such immunity from liability. As professional persons they abhor the very notion of irresponsibility in the area of patient care as morally and legally wrong.

"OSNA's opposition to the bill has been, is, and will continue to be based on its interest in promoting the efficient care of the sick, one of the purposes to which the organization and the individual R.N. is dedicated."

Seminars Scheduled

Just about the time of year when students start turning their minds toward things less academic, each of the 135 Columbus Public Schools will participate in a series of seminars during May.

According to school officials, the project has a dual objective. It is designed to:

(1) Broaden the understanding of the programs of the Columbus Public Schools, and

(2) Study the future financial needs of these schools.

In the South Side, seminars will be held at Barrett Junior High May 1, 8 and 15 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

A committee of 10 educators met Apr. 4 to plan the series. This committee included Rev. L. W. Bernhard, Buckley Carlin, R. P. Comer, Fred G. Erfurt, Roland Esswein, N. V. Goodman (chairman), John R. Holden, John R. Phillips, Judge Robert Schwarzwalder and Clifford A. Tyree.

Also included were the school's PTA officers, Mrs. Elmer Morte, Mrs. Earl Snyder, Mrs. Orland Sells, Mrs. Robert Rickard and Barrett Principal Kenneth Olbert.

The Neighborhood Seminar invitation list includes:

Chester Jones, Russell Jones, Eleanor Kirby, L. B. LaCour, Dr. William Krech, Mrs. W. F. Laird, Priscilla Lenox, John Maloney, Larry Nelson, Ron Pataky, Joseph Preberg, Frank Schneider, Rt. Rev. Msgr. F. J. Schwendeman, William Sheehan, Dave Shkolnik, Isadore Topper, Dr. A. Wright and R. R. Begland.

Install Teletype

Mrs. Frances Palmer, secretary to Ronald Hayes, announced that a teletype machine is being installed by the Ohio Bell telephone Co. in the office of Ron's Pizza and was to be in operation the first of this week.

Mrs. Palmer said that TWX's will be primarily used between Ron's Pizza Crust office in Pontiac, Mich., and with many other companies throughout the nation in business such as the New York banking and trucking firms the company deals with. In addition, she pointed out that Ron's Pizza Inc. sells only wholesale and have 42 distributors in 22 states.

Mrs. Palmer said she believes the machine will be the first one in operation within the city of Reynoldsburg.

'Mumbo-Jumbo' Begins For Weekend In Y-W Auditorium

Whitehall-Yearling High School's Senior class play opens today Thursday, Apr. 25, with a special matinee at Rosemoor School. Curtain goes up tomorrow and Saturday nights at W-Y in the auditorium.

The play, written in 1940 by Jack Bernard, is entitled "Mumbo-Jumbo."

The play is a comic-serious mystery full of intrigue and confusion, as the name implies. Director and producer C. W. Kline is pleased with the job which the budding thespians have done.

Included in the cast are Kim Heffelfinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert I. Heffelfinger of 118 N. Hamilton-rd; Linda Mason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Mason, 738 Martha-ln, Phil Schultz, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Schultz of 4364 Allen-dr; Mark Clark, son of Mrs. Clarissa Clark, 1007 Erickson-av; Dan McCarty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard T. McCarty of 140 S. Yearling-rd, and Jeannie Nairell, daughter of Major and Mrs. James E. Nairell, Defense Construction Supply Center.

The sets and lighting arrangement were designed by Kline and constructed by students connected with the production.

The Stamp Act was first repudiated Nov. 23, 1765, by the court of Frederick County, Md.

Both are working toward doctorates.

On leave of absence this semester are Donald Bensch, assistant professor of history; Mary Roess, dean of women, and Alice Schimpf, instructor in religion. Bensch is enrolled at the University of Rochester for doctorate study. Miss Roess is working on her doctorate at Ohio State and Miss Schimpf is studying at the Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., on her master's degree.

Enrolled at Conordia, St. Louis, for this full current year, is Paul Andrews, assistant professor of Greek working toward his doctorate.

cent for increased value of completed buildings.)

The attorney said the revision early this year of the CAO classification increased minimum lot areas from 600 to 1,000 feet and also eliminated joint use of commercial areas with office-apartment use.

Based on Maxwell's figures, the 28 apartment buildings would bring a total annual increase of $3,450,000 to the tax duplicate.

A breakdown of Whitehall real estate taxes, furnished from the office of Fred Dunn, Franklin County auditor, shows the following distribution for each $1,000 of revenue collected:

County, $5.30; state, 20 cents; Whitehall School District, $23.60; corporation rate (Whitehall's share), $1.90.

(Whitehall's share includes 90 cents to the general fund and 50 cents for the police and fire pension fund.)

for garbage collection, this would amount to about $14,000 each year.

"Now how can Whitehall be getting a tax duplicate break when we gain $5,000 and pay out $14,000 for garbage collection. And this is only one of the city services that would be charged to the city.

"It's all very well for Mr. Maxwell to use his special skills on council," Wright said, "but I don't think he ought to misadvise the public."

Wright explained that he is not against all apartment type construction, but that he feels "there is a point at which we must consider where these buildings are to be located and how many of these high-density, low-cost buildings should be permitted."

He contends that thought should be given to "preservation of what little land is left in the city for development of single family homes."

Wright sees the zoning revision eliminating the CAO (commercial - apartment - office) designation as it had stood for two years as a modification.

"Technically, I suppose, it (CAO) was repealed," he said, "but a new ordinance was passed containing a clause which could be just as objectionable."

Wright also commented on council's use of special permits for zoning. "I don't think that they had authority to do this. I don't doubt their good intentions, but the unfortunate part is that it creates a very bad precedent. That's what concerns me," he concluded.

It's 'Fiesta Time' At Shady Lane Friday

SHADY LANE PTA will sponsor its spring festival Friday, Apr. 26, 5 to 9 p.m. Theme is "Fiesta Time," and children from kindergarten through the sixth grades are participating by making bulletin boards and decorating their rooms. Mr. Duncan the Magician, cake walk, game rooms, home made candy shop, doll walk and country store will be featured. There will also be a make-up room, hat bar, silhouette room and Mexican spook room. Dinner will be served throughout the evening. Chairmen are, Mrs. Ted Puckey, ways and means; Mrs. Ray Wood, kitchen, and Mrs. Alex Powers, publicity. Shady Lane students pose in front of their class bulletin board.

Todd—

5,000 to more than 20,000 in the 10-year period, 1952 to 1962.

The primary change effected to date as a result of Todd's study has been to "provide better specifications for apartments and dwellings," he said.

In commenting on the CAO (commercial - apartment - office) designation, which was changed early this year by council action, Todd said:

"CAO was passed (by council) with the idea of Broad-st development." Todd said. "It was meant to allow both commercial and apartments, but had a minimum lot area requirement of only 600 square feet. This minimum has now been raised to 1,000 square feet."

Todd said the new minimum would tend to cut down the number of multi-unit buildings. He indicated that even tighter regulations will be recommended should his continuing study show present regulations to be inadequate.

Todd said he hoped to decreake the total number of classifications, while maintaining sufficient latitude to meet present and anticipated growth pattern of the city.

Todd said that he would study the report of the Franklin County Regional Planning Commission relative to rural zoning when that report is finalized. "We will check to see if Whitehall can adopt any of the revisions," he said.

He advocates removing new and used car lots and filling stations from the existing industrial classification. He would use, instead, the special permit section, with the suggestion that this section be more clearly defined.

Whitehall Council spends more time on zoning matters, he said, than for any other public business. All zoning requests coming before council are treated on individual merits, he added.

Todd said he felt the differences arising between recommendations of the Planning and Zoning Commission and council regarding zoning requests stem from two prime factors: a greater total number of requests, and a large number of requests for apartment buildings on undeveloped commercial land.

While Todd continues to work at the heart of the problem—Whitehall's zoning code—the controversy continues over the immediate future and long-range effects of present regulations.

probably get sunburned.)

Concerning item No. 1, I'm really not a rank amateur when it comes to acting (although my high school dramatics teacher did say I was pretty rank at times).

In college I had a part in a western. My line was: "I'll hold your horse, Tom." How's that for experience?

As far as item No. 2 is concerned, there's a part in the show that calls for a reporter. That's what it says on my press card, so at least I'm qualified there.

No. 3 is self-explanatory, although this is probably one fringe benefit of the job that's enough to cause one to think that he should be driving a beer truck.

To be perfectly truthful, the part is anything but the final scene from "Camille." I've advised my wife not to blink her eyes or she might miss my big bid for stardom.

The way the show is written, I make two appearances. The first time we're trying to interview Joe Hardy (played by Frank Johnson). In this scene I give a laugh (emoting all the way), and a few seconds later I utter, "How about that?"

As far as my second scene is concerned. Eisenstein said he'd "work something out." I assured him that any line would be all right but I'd be most appreciative if he could work in "I'll hold your horse, Tom," since I've had more experience at this one.

Seriously, it's an education being associated in sleeves-rolled-up fashion with the masterful Eisenstein, who is truly a magician when it comes to molding talent.

He works hard at perfection, frowns a lot, jumps up and down to demonstrate action and gives direction with the clarity of a Marine drill sergeant.

Like in my "How about that?" scene. "That's real broad and lousy," he shouts, "but we'll fill in to make it real." And, something tells me he will, too.

He's no freshman, this Eisenstein. He's tasted the "big time" — and, in quite satisfying proportions — but he's spit it out to concentrate on the Gallery Players. His work there is nearly a legend.

The story is similiar with the show's choreographer, Rick Norris. A Reynoldsburg resident and dance instructor there, Norris has proven himself before at the center and he's turned localite Lennie Schottenstein (she plays the female lead of Lola) into little less than a Gwen Verdon who played the part on Broadway.

Oh, by the way. Just so you'll know Hartley's little star, I'll be carrying a green Eastern Review in my pocket. Identification shouldn't be too hard, however. Just keep your eye on the reporter writing with the wrong end of the pencil. This show biz stuff is nerve racking.

Dear friends,

A speaker recently said, "The most prevalent community sin is lack of appreciation. Who ever thinks of thanking public officials, our school board members, the various commissioners, etc. for a job well done?"

Most of us are lax in this respect. Conscientious public servants deserve an occasional compliment and do certainly appreciate it.

Respectfully,

The Protecting LIGHT

This lighted tower is a light shining in the darkness to guide sailors and ships through the night. Our Lord is our light who guides us faithfully through life, even though it be as a stormy sea — He knows the way. His word, as proclaimed in His church, will light your way and bring peace, joy and comfort.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Psalm 119:105.

Attend the church of your choice this coming Sunday and receive the blessings awaiting you.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH ... THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Capital Rug Cleaning Now In 75th Year

RICHARD POENISCH

The Capital Rug Cleaning Co., 366 Zimpfer-st, is celebrating its 75th anniversary this year.

The firm was founded by Gustav Poenisch, grandfather of present owner, Richard O. Poenisch, in 1888. Since that time it has specialized in rug and furniture cleaning, remodeling and repairing rugs and pads, dyeing and wrapping rugs for storage.

Capital also offers carpeting installation, and has portable equipment for in-the-home carpet cleaning.

Gustav Poenisch, a rug weaver in Germany, came to America in the late 1800's to establish the business. At the time there were only three rug cleaning establishments in Columbus.

In 1923 Gustav's three sons, Otto, Oscar and Fred, took over the company. Originally known as Gustav Poenisch Sons, the name was changed to Capital in the mid-1920's. Richard joined the organization in 1949 and assumed control in 1954. Since that time he has been assisted by his wife, Mary.

Today the firm offers county-wide pick up and delivery service, free estimates, unconditional guarantees on its work, and complete insurance coverage.

Council Candidate Makes Sunday Sales Law Stand

Fourth Ward Democratic council candidate, Gilbert O'Shaughnessy, made clear his position on Sunday closing this week after issuing a statement of opposition in this newspaper Nov. 1, 1962.

"Often I am asked what my position on Sunday sales is," the Whitehall candidate said. "Simply, I stand for moderate Sunday sales such as we had before the coming of the discount stores.

"For years, if the wife or family needed milk, bread, bobby pins, medicine or other necessary items, there was a small corner store or drug store where they could be purchased.

"Now, as in the past, I stand for closing the taverns in Whitehall at 1 a.m. (or sooner) Sunday morning and keeping them closed all day Sunday unless they want to sell 'prepared food', but no beer or liquor to be consumed on the premises."

Crabgrass Can Be Stopped By Using Long-Range Plan

By DR. W. A. LIDDELL

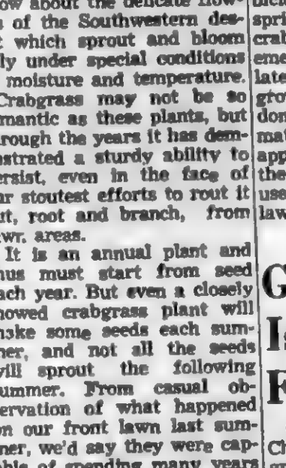
Last spring a contractor's bulldozer and shovel invaded our front lawn to dig up and replace a drainage bed. It was too late to reseed, so we let the area lie fallow the summer months. In no time at all a fine crop of assorted — or should we call them "sordid" — weeds had sprouted, where nothing but perennial grasses had been growing for many years.

Where did the weeds come from, and what has this to do with conquering crabgrass? Just this: through countless eons of natural selection, plant specials have developed many built-in characteristics which enable them to survive and reproduce.

One of these protections enables seeds of many kinds of plants to lie dormant for years, waiting for the right conditions to sprout and grow into the next generation of seed-bearing parents..

Many of us, probably, have read of lotus seeds, which sprouted and grew into normal plants, after lying for hundreds of years in a Manchurian lake bed. And we know about the delicate flowers of the Southwestern desert which sprout and bloom only under special conditions of moisture and temperature.

Crabgrass may not be so romantic as these plants, but through the years it has demonstrated a sturdy ability to persist, even in the face of our stoutest efforts to rout it out, root and branch, from lawn areas.



It is an annual plant and thus must start from seed each year. But even a closely mowed crabgrass plant will make some seeds each summer, and not all the seeds will sprout the following summer. From casual observation of what happened on our front lawn last summer, we'd say they were capable of spending many years in the soil. When brought to the surface by the bulldozer's blade they sprouted.

Crabgrass starts with the advent of warm sunny weather, and the plants thrive on plenty of exposure to hot sunshine in lawns which are not well cared for, except for their weekly scalping by over-zealous hoe-moaners. The closer they scalp the easier it is for the crabgrass to over-run the desirable turf grasses.

Does this mean that crabgrass control is hopeless? Certainly not! A dense growth of turf, if not shaved to within a half an inch of its life, is a most unfriendly place for crabgrass.

So, your main long-range program for conquering crabgrass should be to encourage the turf-making grasses in your lawn by a program of regular feeding and watering during the growing season. Early spring, early summer and early fall for the fertilizer; an inch of water every week or ten days through the summer.

A couple of seasons of this, combined with good mowing practices, will make it almost impossible for crabgrass to live in your lawn. While you are waiting for the turf grasses to take over, you can help matters with chemical crabgrass controls. Specially developed "pre-emergence" herbicides applied early in the spring will kill the young crabgrass seedlings. Post-emergence herbicides, applied later in the summer will kill growing plants, in case you don't use a pre-emergency material. Both types can be applied easily and safely with the same lawn spreader you use for fertilizer and other lawn products.

Welfare Board Supervisor Quits

Cuts in the budget were blamed for the resignation of Milton Kanzaki, 692 Wedgewood-dr, from the staff of the Franklin County Child Welfare Board after nearly three years of service. He served as a caseworker supervisor for the organization.

In a letter of resignation, Kanzaki said he could not compromise any longer with what he considered "sound concepts of services to children and families."

CWB Executive Secretary Charles Caton said he hoped this was not the beginning of the loss of other key members of his staff.

WHEELS FOR BIG BILL

BIG BILL has been with the Harry Miller family since a six-weeks-old pup, but his puppy days are long forgotten. When the degeneration of a dog's age caused him to drag his hind-quarters Miller designed a walker on wheels for him. A metal manufacturing company produced the frame, a shoe repair shop made the harness and the Groveport Hardware supplied the rest. Big Bill tried it on and showed his approval by walking with ease for the first time in many months.

Spring Clean-Up Week Now Being Observed In Columbus

A county-wide Spring Clean-up Campaign was launched this month with the signing of a proclamation by Columbus Mayor W. Ralston Westlake.

In the proclamation, which designated Apr. 19-27 as the 1963 Cleaner Columbus Week, Mayor Westlake extended an invitation to all "neighboring municipalities and suburban areas" to join with the city for a Spring Clean-Up Week throughout Franklin County. A copy of the proclamation was sent to each mayor in the county.

A Columbus City Council-appointed Cleaner Columbus Committee is conducting the clean-up effort which is aimed at rousing public awareness and stimulating individual action. Purpose of the drive is for the health, welfare and safety of the citizens and beautification of the community.

Cleaner Columbus Committee Chairman, Harold Kayne of the Home Builder's Association of Greater Columbus said, "While our goal is individual action of every citizen, we are seeking the support of civic clubs, neighborhood councils, trade associations and other local groups. Many of them are already participating and their organized support is adding more impetus each day to the campaign."

The Columbus Sanitation Department has announced that the Frank-rd landfill will be open during Spring Clean-Up Week so that local residents may dump trash free of charge. Hours are from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

Goodwill Industries, which is conducting a special collection drive in cooperation with nearly 70 local elementary schools, is also participating in Spring Clean-up by pickup service for large repairable items. Columbus and Franklin County residents who wish to dispose of such items may have them hauled away in a Goodwill truck by calling 294-5181. All materials collected will be used to help handicapped people employed at Goodwill Industries.

Columbus residents may also have pickup service for heavy or bulky non-repairable items by calling City Hall.

Two thousand posters bearing the 1963 campaign slogan "Clean up, fix up . . . for a cleaner community" are being distributed throughout Columbus and Franklin County.

Cleaner Columbus Chairman Kayne said, "We hope the efforts of our committee and the groups supporting this campaign will make Spring Clean-Up Week the beginning of a year-long effort of all local citizens to keep their homes and their communities—through neighbor-to-neighbor cooperation—cleaner, safer and more beautiful."

most of the effort by nurses is dispelling "false rumors" concerning the bill and what it actually means.

It may take an extra ounce of dispelling in the greater Columbus area where two of the senators — Kline Roberts (R) and Robert Shaw (R) — indicated to Hartley Newspapers Tuesday that the bill has "some merit."

The bill, still in the rules named chairman of the local Statehouse Conference on Education. He served on various committees for the Columbus Public School system and recently was elected president of the Marion-Franklin PTA. He was one of the founders of Smith Road PTA.

His other affiliations include West Gate Lodge of Masons; Columbus Chamber of Commerce (educational committee); Brookwood Presbyterian Church, elder and superintendent of Sunday School; Hilltop Business Association; and Hilltop Kiwanis Club.

Whitehall-Yearling RAM-blings

BY ANNE MALAY

The first staff meeting for next year's yearbook was held after school Wednesday, Apr. 10. The duties and purposes of the staff were outlined for new members. The staff consists of Sharon Bousman, editor; Kathie Trees, assistant editor; Linda Mason and Mary Jo Potts, layout editors; Barbara Spindler, Sharon Milligan, Margaret Leeseberg, Marlene Smith, Chris Winfrey, Tavie Holly, Bill Barnhill, Earl Hunter, Patty Eader and Patty White.

Twenty WYHS seniors took the GATB (General Aptitude Test Battery). It was organized by the Ohio State Employment Services and given to students who will be seeking full time employment after graduation. No fee was charged.

Ten happy and smiling Whitehall science students brought back "Superiors" from the District Science Fair held in the French Field House Saturday, Apr. 6. The 10 proud ones include Parry Matchett, Judy Wilmouth, Garry Stein, John Scott, Arnold Shaheen, Susan Swonger, Willa Hsueh, Robin Chestnut, Ken Lewis and Greg West. Garry is the first WYHS student to return to the State Science Fair after having been there previously.

Whitehall-Yearling also had 10 students who were awarded "Excellents." They are Carolyn Fuqua, Allan Winner, Carol Winner, Kathy Short, Ed Williams, John Mercer, John Andrews, Jackie Hanf, Margaret Irons and Dave Rohr. The three students receiving "Good" ratings are Albin Bell, Randy Srba and Bill Willis. The eight students who earned "Superior" ratings are now eligible to participate in the State Science Fair to be held Friday, Apr. 26, at Central State College. Students will leave at 7 a.m. and return Friday evening at 5:30.

As prom time once again draws near the WYHS junior class is intent on the usual prom problems and is also busy organizing committees. The decoration committee for this year's junior-senior prom has been chosen. It includes Marilyn Hopkins (chairman), Barbara Starrett, Marye Knight, Judi Bolon, Susan Graff, Anne Malay, Eric Ford, Bill Landis, Phyllis Gilbert, Linda Mason, Peggy Hayes, Mark Clark, Barbara Blackmore and Bob Ray.

A safe driving demonstration, sponsored by the Nationwide Insurance Co., was held Tuesday, Apr. 16.

Is smoking worth the risk involved? Is it easy to give up smoking after developing the habit? How does smoking actually affect the lungs? Why do teenagers smoke? Should teenagers start smoking? These questions and many others were discussed in the high school assembly Friday morning, Apr. 19. The assembly was sponsored by the GAA in cooperation with the American Cancer Society. Students presented four brief skits; a movie describing the relationship between lung cancer and smoking was shown and Dr. Hugenberger, a local physician, spoke about cancer and answered students' questions.

Band members and their parents had an enjoyable night out at the Dobb's House, site for this year's recognition dinner, held Tuesday evening, Apr. 23. A dance also followed the meal.

Local GOP Slates Meet

A meeting sponsored by Whitehall Republican Party Executive Committee to introduce the candidates to the public has been announced for Thursday, Apr. 25, in the Etna-rd School auditorium from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Toastmaster Joe Shannon said featured speakers for the evening will be Keith McNamara, speaking on this session of the Ohio legislature, and the Honorable Judge Wilbur Schul, of the Columbus Municipal Court, speaking on the dangers of Communism.

Whitehall Mayor Richard Moling will introduce the slate of candidates, running on the Republican ticket in the May primary elections.

Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the meeting. The public is invited to attend the open meeting and there will be no admission charge, according to toastmaster Shannon.

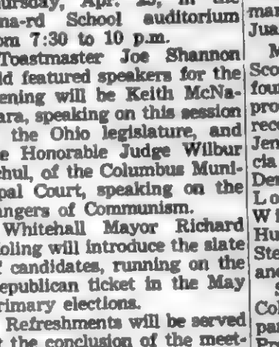
Girl Scout News

Girl Scout Troop 522, Shepard, went camping at Camp Ken-Jockety recently. The Girl Scouts cooked all their meals, learned the proper way to use an ax and a two-hand saw, cut wood, hiked and played games. A campfire was held and skits were presented by Jeannine Mays, Margaret Graetz and Rhonda Williams.

A "Scouts Own With Nature" was used as a theme Sunday morning at the Green Cathedral. Poems on nature were read by Beverly Turner, April Cliff and Roxyanne Cartier. Other Girl Scouts enjoying the activities were Valarie Van Cleaf, Shirley Peyton and Mona Hicks.

Mrs. Richard Peyton helped with transportation, and Mrs. James Turner, East Columbus Neighborhood chairman and Troop 522 committee chairman, assisted the leader, Mrs. Juanita W. Cartier.

Mrs. Juanita Johnston's Girl Scout Troop 82 completed a four-week Lazarus Self-Improvement Course. Girls who received diplomas were Joan Jenkins, Sharon Brooks, Marcia Turner, Julie Johnston, Denise Goodrich, Brenda Long, Donna Bates, Jill Windesheim, Rosemarie Hughes, Madelyn Callion, Stephanie Davis, Joyce Cherry and Diane Jordan.



Several troops from East Columbus and Shepard will participate in the Girl Scout Program Fair Saturday, Apr. 27, from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Veterans Memorial. There will be table displays of arts and crafts and folk dancing by the troops. Admission will be 25 cents per person.

Earns Certificate

Army Lt. Col. Jesse J. Trotter, whose wife, Peggy, lives at 2681 Vanderberg-av, received a certificate of achievement while attending the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Colonel Trotter received the award for outstanding performance of duty during his recent assignment with the U.S. Army Advisor Group at Fort Hayes, O.

Dickerson Is Named To Liquor Board

The new Ohio Liquor Control Commission has as one of its members J. Maynard Dickerson, 1471 Fair-av.

Governor James A. Rhodes announced the commission of three men in a letter Apr. 18. Other members of the commission include chairman Kenneth E. Thomas and vice-chairman Bernard T. Chupka.

The purpose of the new commission is to enforce Ohio liquor laws more strictly. According to the governor, the willful sales of intoxicating liquor to minors by tavern keepers has to go, as does the use of fradudulent identification to purchase the liquor.

The Liquor Control Commission, says Rhodes, "is neither to promote nor to discourage the sale of intoxicating liquors." He added that the choice of drinking or not drinking was up to the individual, but if one chose to imbibe, he "should be permitted to enjoy it, in pleasant, orderly company and amid relaxed surroundings."

Ample Money, Good Prices For Home Buyers

New Homes Accent Better Kitchen Plans

The impressive kitchens are eye-catchers in April's new homes. They'll appeal to the men as well as the women.

The growing enthusiasm among men and women for gourmet cooking as a hobby has given the kitchen new prominence and importance. Some people even like to do their entertaining in the kitchen—and play to an admiring audience as they prepare the menu.

Home builders have given great attention to the design of the new kitchens. Good planning on their part has made this focal point of the home glamorous as well as efficient and functional. Delightfully harmonizing colors extend from walls and floors to counter-tops and appliances. There is an abundance of storage space. Shining appliances are arranged for comfort and convenience. Kitchen lighting is vastly improved. Translucent panels in ceilings and recessed lighting over work counters are no longer a characteristic of only custom-built kitchens.

Probably the feature of the new kitchens that appeals most to the housewife is the tendency toward space for dining. Frequently this means room for a table. Sometimes it is counter space that doubles as an eating area. Surveys reveal that kitchens with enough room for family breakfasts or lunches come high on the list of Mrs. America's dream kitchen.

Here are points to keep in mind when inspecting new kitchens to see how well they are designed:

Sufficient counter space.

Good cabinet and storage space.

An adequate eating area.

Good lighting and ventilation.

Well arranged clean and mix centers.

A refrigerator with the latch side next to a counter—so that the refrigerator door opens away from the counter rather than blocks easy transfer of food stored in the refrigerator.

Space for easy traffic without one person having to squeeze by another.

Location of the kitchen so that groceries can be brought in without traffic through the living room or other part of the house.

Two-Story Homes May Come Back

A new look at an old favorite—the multi-story home—is predicted by a housing authority for one of the nation's leading manufacturers of building materials.

Builders are once again giving two-story and other multi-story home designs a renewed look after concentrating on one-story dwellings for the past 15 years.

One of the main reasons for the revival is the crowded conditions developing around large cities. A two-story home provides about the same living space as a single-story dwelling on about half the land. Other savings are possible in roof and foundation construction costs.

The multi-story house has been an American tradition since before the Revolutionary War and still offers more living area per dollar than any other design.

Two simple, but effective techniques being considered by architects to modify the box-like look of many two-story structures, are to extend planters for several feet beyond the sides of the house and to roof it with shingles that have extra-wide tabs.

Kitchen Color

It's just as important to have cheerful, colorful kitchen walls as it is to design a kitchen to save steps and work.

Today's trend is to make the kitchen area flow into the dining area. You can select two colors, one for dining room walls, the other a complementary color for kitchen walls.

If your kitchen is small, select bright colors such as red and yellow.

Try painting one wall a deep yellow, another a light red, and the ceiling sky blue.

The new pastel shades can fill a kitchen with a bouquet of charming color.

Your Land Can Wear Out, Too

People think of houses and furniture wearing out, but land also can wear out and its value depreciate if the land is not planted and conserved, advises the American Association of Nurserymen.

The best way to conserve land is by planting it. Otherwise it becomes bare, trodden and eroded. In such cases it loses much of its value.

Try this, advise the nurserymen. Walk around your neighborhood and observe other properties. People generally prefer well-planted properties.

SPRINGTIME FLOWERS

AMONG THE GAYEST decorations of the year are the many beautiful flowers and trees that bloom in the early spring. Attractively arranged gardens and plants can do much to beautify a home and raise the spirits of the occupants. Well-planned homes and gardens include many of the early-blooming plants.

Experimental House Contains New Ideas For The Future

THE 1963 EXPERIMENTAL HOUSE of the National Association of Home Builders at Rockville, Md., nears completion. This is NAHB's fifth research house to test new building materials and techniques intended to increase housing values and hold down construction costs. It is being built by NAHB's 1963 President W. Evans Buchanan.

Kitchen counter tops of adjustable heights may be one of many new features in the home of the future.

They are among the innovations being tried out in the Experimental House which the National Association of Home Builders has constructed at Rockville, Md., near Washington, D.C.

The two-story building is the fifth Research House built by the association to test new building materials, techniques and equipment. The objective of the research program is to find ways to build better and more economically. W. Evans Buchanan, NAHB president and the builder of the new Experimental House, said the dividends will go to the consumer, for "he will get a better home at less cost."

Adjustable To Work

The counter tops and cabinets of the new Experimental House are hung on the wall by brackets that can be moved up or down on a metal frame. The counters not only can be adjusted to the height desired by a housewife, but also to the kind of work done on them. The system permits different heights for the sink, the food preparation center, the mixing center and the work desk that is included in the house's kitchen.

Attention-getters in the three-bedroom house include the 2½ bathrooms, whose walls and fixtures are of reinforced plastic that came from the factory in sections.

The downstairs bathroom has a vanity running the length of the room, with a wall-to-wall mirror above it. At each end of the long vanity is a plastic medicine cabinet, recessed in its plastic wall. Each has a decorative door and six shallow shelves for handy and commodious storage.

Ready-Built Wall

One wall, which came complete from the factory, has a molded, decorative pattern and a recess for a "built-in" towel bar. The bathroom is white, but the plastic walls and fixtures can be obtained in color. It is not only attractive, but easy to clean.

Upstairs, there are one and one-half baths, two medium-sized bedrooms and a king-sized bedroom. The house has over 60 linear feet of closet space.

So many pre-finished materials were used in the house that virtually no inside painting was needed when the last nail was driven.

Panels with a vinyl plastic film laminated to gypsum board which is glued to light gauge steel studs, are used for the upstairs partitions. They came from the factory with colorful textured finishes that are durable and washable. The panels can be repainted if a change of color is desired, but the finish is long-lasting.

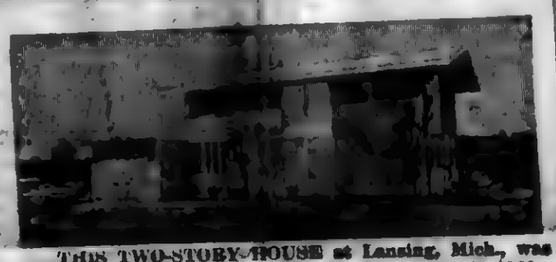
Aim To Cut Costs

"The idea," Buchanan said, "was to use as much pre-finished material in the house as possible, because this cuts down on-site labor and thus on costs. Materials finished in the factory under controlled conditions are proving to be exceedingly durable."

Exterior walls of the house are covered with plywood, coated with a plastic film laminated in the factory. They will require no repainting or other maintenance for 15 to 20 years at least.

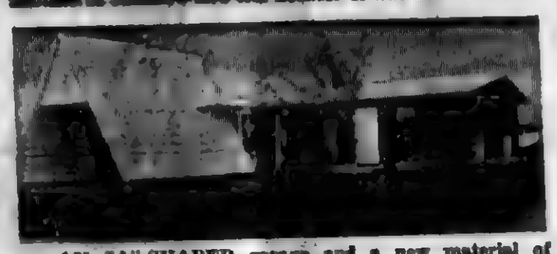
The roof, using an NAHB-developed truss system, has a wide overhang. The pre-finished roofing material, of a plastic film on plywood, was laid down in sheets.

The house has a free traffic pattern. From the front entranceway a visitor can turn right to the study, left to the kitchen or go straight ahead to the living area or up the stairs to the bedroom area.



Unusual Garage

The large living room and adjacent family room, which can serve as a formal dining room, open through sliding glass doors to a private, rear terrace. The kitchen also opens with sliding glass doors to a patio which connects with the garage.



The garage itself is unusual. On the street side it has storage for a car. But on the house side, it has an enclosed porch for summer living, complete with its own fireplace for summer barbecues. In the winter, this section can house a second car.

An economical flooring system also is used in the house, with one layer of flooring doing the duty of two. The flooring looks like a fine, conventional oak floor.

Like other Research Houses built by the NAHB, the 1963 Experimental House will be put to a lengthy test of wear and liveability by the family that eventually will become its owners. Periodic performance checks will be made by technicians to see how the innovations are working out and if they should be applied to general home construction.

THIS TWO-STORY HOUSE at Lansing, Mich., was another of NAHB's first test houses. It was built in 1960.

AN "A"-SHAPED garage and a new material of foamed plastic were tried in this 1958 house at South Bend, Ind.

and comfort at low cost were the goals of this widely copied house at Knoxville, Tenn., built in 1958.

NEW, MORE economical exterior walls were tested in this 1955 Research House, NAHB's first, at Kensington, Md.

Home Improvement Year Is Stressed

"There is real merit in an industry-wide drive which encourages Americans to remodel and improve their homes. Such a program also helps in the maintenance and enhancement of community life throughout the nation," stated President Kennedy in a telegram to the Home Improvement Council.

Landscaping and planting and beautifying home properties is an integral part of the home improvement drive in 1963. These improvements add to the liveability of individual properties as well as neighborhoods and communities.

"Plant a tree for '63" is a slogan of the American Association of Nurserymen.

Home May Take One Of Many Styles

Many different terms are used to describe the new homes. Split level, split foyer, ranch style, rambler, two-story, and Colonial are but some of them.

However, from an architectural standpoint, most homes fall into one of three general classifications. They are traditional, modern, and contemporary.

The traditional home suggests designs used in the early days of the country, when homes were rectangular, compact, and built of native materials. Favorite features of the traditional home today include small-paned windows, shutters, second-story dormer windows, formal entrances and interesting detail. The traditional home of 1963 will have many variations and innovations brought about by progress in home building. But basically it calls on the architecture of the past for inspiration.

The modern home is strictly a product of the 20th century. It has a low-pitched and flat roof, wide overhangs—or occasionally, no overhang—strong horizontal lines, much glass, and simple, structural planes. Usually, it is built of unadorned materials and it follows the open plan of interior arrangement.

The contemporary home is often referred to as a "middle of the road" design because it blends the best of the old and new. Its lines may be traditional; but it may use much glass to extend view and liveability beyond its walls. It often uses the open plan of interior design, but not necessarily. It shows the appreciation of detail that is our architectural inheritance from Colonial days. Perhaps more than any other, the contemporary home can be termed the "house of today."

Time Appears Right To Buy New Home

Homes at stable prices . . . homes more spacious and pleasing than ever before . . . ample mortgage money for loans at reasonable interest rates. . .

That seems to be the consensus of government officials, home builders, and private economists connected with the home building industry.

Recently, Joseph P. McMurray, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said that in 1963 "people will have an opportunity like they never have had in recent years to get mortgages and houses at bargain prices."

Favorable Rates

Another official, J. Stanley Baughman, president of the Federal National Mortgage Association, put it this way:

"I would expect mortgage rates to be generally favorable to home buyers in 1963 and that the supply of funds will be at least as plentiful in relation to demand for loans as it was in 1962."

What types of loans are available for the purchase of a home? There are three—conventional, FHA and VA.

The conventional loan, from a bank or savings and loan association, is the one most home buyers obtain. Predictions are that savings and loan associations will lend home buyers about $23.5 billion in 1963—or 12 per cent more than they did in 1962.

S&L Big Lender

McMurray is one of those who expect such an increase in loans by savings associations. He also said that savings and loan industry has been by far a more constant source of mortgage credit since the late 1940's than any other lending group. Thus, the thrift of Americans has helped substantially to make this a country of home owners, he pointed out.

Under FHA, the government insures loans for home purchase and improvement. The person getting the loan pays a fee of one-half of one per cent of the mortgage. However, the interest he pays on an FHA-insured mortgage is usually lower than he would pay on a conventional mortgage.

The third form of financing is the VA mortgage. The Veterans Administration guarantees repayment of 60 per cent of a loan made to a home-buyer or $7,500 of the loan, whichever is less.

Whichever type of loan a home buyer obtains, he builds up an equity in his home as he makes his monthly payments and has something to show for his money instead of merely collecting rent receipts.

Homes Reveal New Trends In Design

By W. EVANS BUCHANAN
President, National Assn. Of Home Builders

Fine new homes in all price brackets and many designs await the inspection of families throughout the country during the celebration of April as New Homes Month.

More than ever before, the new homes have been constructed with ease of liveability in mind. Blueprints were drawn with the enjoyment, comfort and convenience of the eventual owners as the guiding yardstick. The homes are unsually attractive, but also extremely functional.

Designs of the new homes vary according to regions, but nationally there appears to be something of a trend back to the two-story house. This is due to the fact that families are larger, while land prices are still rising. A two-story house provides more square footage of space for the same amount of money in many cases. However, ramblers and ranch houses are still favorites in some parts of the country, especially California and Florida, where indoor-outdoor living has virtually no dividing line.

The trend, too, is toward more bedrooms and bathrooms. There are many four-bedroom homes. Where previously you might have seen two big bedrooms and one small bedroom, you now likely will find a large master bedroom and more smaller bedrooms. The smaller bedrooms are entirely adequate to their purpose while providing the privacy of a separate room for more children.

It is impossible to single out one type of house and say it is the home of 1963. In the clothes world, you can point to a particular fashion as "the" spring style of the year. But people want more variety from which to choose when they select their homes, the center of family life.

At any rate, people resist drastic changes in the appearance of their homes. The multitude of changes that have come in recent years have been evolutionary rather than revolutionary. Many of the changes that contribute to the improved comfort of today's home regardless of its design are not apparent to the eye.

The changes include, for example, better insulation to make the homes tighter and warmer in winter while cutting cooling bills in summer. Materials used in build-

PLANNED COMMUNITIES OFFER ADVANTAGES

PLANNING for more advantageous use of land in suburban housing developments NAHB members gather around models of successful housing areas to compare modern ideas to the conventional plan shown in the foreground. Several hundred of the home builders and planners met recently for the annual NAHB convention. (See story, Page 8)

WORKING WALLS USED TO CONSERVE SPACE

A GARAGE LINER, prefinished with perforations above a wainscot, is useful in turning otherwise wasted space into an attractive working area by providing hanging space that eliminates storage. Heavy-duty hangers will bear the weight of bulky lawn and garden tools and equipment. The grooved panels, with a factory applied finish, come in man-sized four by eight sheets and can be nailed directly to studs.

BOY'S ROOM employs prefinished panels, decoratively designed to provide handsome and practical working walls within the home. Other designs and patterns of perforated hardboards are available, some with random spacing, tracery designs and even with square holes. In a child's room or a utility room an added feature is that the surfaces will wipe clean with just a damp cloth.

Carpet Styles Can Be Adapted To Fit Decor

Whether your home is elegant in the traditional manner, or smartly contemporary, again proving that the "wellery, carpets and rugs are dressed floor" is the perfect starting point for home decor.

Carpets and rugs for 1963 reveal two definite style trends: Traditional and contemporary. There's a return to elegance in a variety of traditional patterns, rich colors and soft, thick textures. At the same time, there are crisp colors, interesting textures and patterns done in the contemporary manner.

Several important color trends are seen throughout these varied stylings. Gold appears as the most important color family for 1963 — ranging from soft-burnished bronze tones to sharp clear golds, often mixed with a related color such as orange or russet.

There's a tinge of gold in other color families, too—notably in the greens, with avocado, moss and bronze greens appearing in many new styles.

Sharply contrasting colors are often seen in vivid area rugs, but in carpets there is a definite trend toward the subtle blends of color. Closely related color mixtures, such as turquoise and bronze, or reds with orange, are favored over the tweeds with a definite contrast, such as black-and-white, or the "salt-and-pepper" tweedy styles.

When carpets are not done in vivid colors, they are shown in a variety of interesting "neutrals" — mixtures of black with brown or charcoal; varying mixtures of browns and beiges. All of these have a definite color "character," however. The nondescript "neutrals" are waning in popularity.

Color, of course, goes hand in hand with texture, and the two together determine the total style effect of a carpet or rugs.

IN MANY CASES carpets and rugs are used together in today's homes to accomplish interesting contrasts in decorations. The matching is easy with the new coordinated groups. In the picture a shaggy area rug in blue and green tones is used in conjunction with a blue twist carpet.

Homes—

ing today's homes also are vastly improved. Even nails have greater holding power. The unsung, and sometimes unseen, ingredients that make today's home a better home include more durable finishes, longer-lasting roofing, and maintenance-free exterior materials.

Storage Space Organized

Home builders have been giving greater attention to the design of their houses. One of the happy by-products of this —especially from the housewife's standpoint — is the abundant storage space which the new homes feature.

Storage space is organized and planned for specific items. Clothes space, for instance, is larger. The average person today has more clothes to store than a generation ago.

Home builders keep in mind the changing habits of Americans so that the houses they build will meet the needs of growing families. Builders today are aware that many families require facilities for storing outdoor games and sports equipment, such as fishing rods or skis, garden tools, garden furniture, fuel, seasonal trimmings, such as Christmas ornaments, travel equipment, toys, including tricycles, sleds and doll furniture, and all of the other appurtenances that go with modern living.

Increased attention to design has paid dividends in another way. You will find that the new homes have excellent circulation or traffic patterns. The interior arrangement is such that you can go from room to room without having to pass needlessly through a third room. Groceries can be brought from the car to the kitchen without traffic to the formal part of the home. Good traffic patterns in a home not only save steps, but help keep the house clean.

The advances made by progressive home builders have been accompanied also by greater discrimination on the part of home buyers. They have a much better idea than ever before of what to look for in selecting a home.

Test your own house I.Q. by visiting some of April's new homes in your area. You will love them.

New Ideas

There are countless new ideas in bathroom decoration today. It is no longer a must, for example, to install the medicine cabinet over the wash bowl. Some put the cabinet on a side wall. This leaves space for an extra-wide mirror over the vanity.

Flood Insurance Difficult To Sell

Most people who buy insurance on their homes in the form of the popular "homeowners' package policy" are aware of the fact that the policy does not provide for damages caused by floods.

But few people understand why insurance companies do not offer such coverage, according to a study undertaken by the Ohio Insurance Information Service, Inc.

The fact is, says O.I.I.S., that insurance companies over the years repeatedly have tried to offer coverages for flood and others such as wavewash and high tides which now are specifically excluded from homeowners policies.

But insurance companies have found that few people are willing to pay premiums adequate to cover the catastrophic losses involved. Rates necessarily must be high because the only people who want to buy flood insurance are those whose property is located in areas almost certain to be flooded sooner or later. Hence, it is impossible to "spread the risk," the basic tenet of all insurance.

This is the reason, O.I.I.S. reports, that losses caused by floods, high tides and wavewash are omitted under commercial insurance policies on fixed property such as homes and stores, although movable property such as an automobile can be readily insured against water damage.

Make Entrance Inviting

A tiled entrance hall has many advantages. It is easy to keep clean. It can be dramatic. There are many decorative patterns available. Special thought given to an entrance will bring dividends to you and your guests. The first view of your home should be an inviting one.

Competitive Prices Expected To Influence Home Market

Many signs indicate the presence of a good selling market for homeowners for the balance of the year. Paul J. Falco, president of the Columbus Board of Realtors said that "an authoritative national survey of buyers' intentions has found that more families intend to buy a home this year than at any time in recent years, but at the same time, competition will be the trademark for 1963."

The National Association of Real Estate Boards' Department of Research, on this subject, found in a recent survey that potential home sellers in many areas of the country are today offering their houses at more realistic prices than they were a year ago, and more in line with the market. On the other hand, in other areas, price stability in the existing house market has started to be recognized only to a limited extent, home owners still thinking in terms of market trends experienced in periods of housing shortages.

The market for existing homes will expand in the future to the degree that owners become more conscious of the present market situation.

Falco also said that sales will be facilitated by a mortgage market characterized by an abundance of loan funds at moderate interest rates as the flow of savings in various financial institutions grows. The supply of older homes is more than adequate in most places and a homeowner can no longer count on an automotic profit when he sells his house. The seller must reconcile himself to the fact that overpricing is a major handicap to making a sale within a reasonable time.

Mr. Falco indicated that for the realtor who has become well established in his business, the outlook for 1963 is good and there are buyers waiting for many types of property—but they are selective; they are looking for bargains. Many realtors have expanded their business to the use of the trade-in program.

Falco added, owners, when talking of trading their home on another home, are now compelled to take into account in their sales price, the benefits they had received for living in the home during their period of ownership. Housing is definitely a consumption item the same as clothing and food and must be treated as such in arriving at values. Some of it has been consumed by the owner during his occupancy. Inflation has abated and supply has begun to catch up with the demand, according to Falco.

Conference Spotlights Role Of Storage In Modern Home

Home builders are well aware of the importance of storage space to a homemaker and 1963 homes are being constructed with this need uppermost in mind.

Kitchens with efficient work arrangements are also high on the list of what people want in the way of a home. Many like eating areas in the kitchen. A recent Women's Housing Conference, held in Virginia Beach, Va., spotlighted the role of the kitchen in the modern home.

More than 56 per cent of the women attending said they preferred to have their main meals in the kitchen. An even greater number — 65 per cent — said they would give up bedroom space to have a larger kitchen.

Housewives like color in their kitchen and the 1963 homes have light, bright and colorful kitchens with new counter tops and other materials in a beautiful array of colors.

Most families want a home that extends beyond its walls. More and more people tend to make the outdoor area a harmonious, flowing unit rather than separately divided.

The trend also is to more bathrooms and the new bathrooms are attractive, according to modern builders with plenty of mirrors and often with vanities with storage space for towels.

Most couples with children include a recreation or playroom among their house wants. This is particularly true in large families where both the children and the parents want to entertain with a measure of privacy and without disturbing the others.

Have A Question? Here Are Some Suggestions For Solving Your Decor Problems

Q. I have a copper-colored sofa and a moss-green chair in my living room. What do you suggest as a carpet color?

A. Since you have contrasting colors already, it would be better to choose a carpet in one of these tones, rather than introducing a third color. You might choose a carpet in a copper or moss green shade, or one blending these tones.

Q. I have a rug with a definite floral pattern. Can I also use patterned draperies?

A. Probably not. Although it is sometimes possible to use two definite patterns in a room — if one is large-scale and one is small-scale, for example — it's usually best to let one pattern dominate, especially in a large area such as the floor. Your draperies, however, might have a great deal of texture interest or a muted color combination.

Q. Should my walls and carpet be the same color?

A. This isn't necessary at all. They may be different tones of the same color—generally, with the darker shade used for the carpet—or they may be related colors. It's best to avoid directly contrasting colors in these two large areas unless the room is very large.

Q. Can tweed carpets be used with traditional furniture?

A. It depends on the variation of design. Many "tweed" carpets today are subtle mixtures of color and blend beautifully with the soft lines of traditional styling. Also, traditional furniture may be fairly simple rather than ornate. A sharp "salt-and-pepper" tweed would probably not be compatible with very elaborate period furniture — but between these two extremes, there are many possibilities.

Q. I would like to use a room-sized rug in a living room with a bay window. Would it look awkward?

A. Room-size rugs leave a border of floor showing all around the room — usually, eight to 10 inches from the wall. You might prefer a room-fit rug—cut to fit the contours of the room, including the bay window. Or you might use a rug showing a narrow border of floor and accent the bay window area with a handsome area rug.

Carpets Have Proven A Comfortable And Welcome Addition To The Kitchen

It finally happened. Carpet has made it to the kitchen.

And so now it is entirely possible to make the midnight raid on the family refrigerator and not make a sound . . . unless you fall over the kitchen table or something.

Yes, a carpeted kitchen is quieter and reportedly more comfortable to work in. In many cases the kitchen has become a pleasant second family room after the addition of a carpet.

Satisfied users say maintenance is a pleasant surprise. Vacuum-cleaning takes the place of scrubbing, waxing and polishing. Spot cleaning is a matter of just a few minutes.

Practically all spots and stains can be removed from the normal carpet with a detergent and water solution, or a cleaning fluid for oily stains. Best of all, routine cleaning can be done at regular intervals. If you're interrupted there's no problem like with waxing or a scrubbing job. Just come back later and take up where you've left off.

The quick and easy use of a vacuum cleaner or carpet sweeper instantly gives the kitchen a neat "picked-up" look which is a head start on the spotless appearance of any room.

Experts say that nylon carpets are most frequently used in the kitchen since they resist rapid moisture absorption and can be readily cleaned of any water stains.

Comfort, quiet, beauty and easy maintenance are all factors that are especially important to the room where a housewife spends a big part of her busy day. This fact probably accounts for the reason that many homemakers who have tried carpeted kitchens are no longer skeptical, but are enthusiastic about their discovery.

THE LATEST in kitchen floor covering is shown in this comfortable area of the home where carpets are utilized to make the dining area more livable.

Chemicals Can Take The Place Of Constant Weeding

If you've been a shareholder in "Weekend Weeding" for the past couple of summers, the advice of this column is swell—but fast. And invest instead in chemicals—lawn and garden chemicals.

They'll earn the plaudits of your neighbors, and your dividends — in the form of a healthy, green lawn — will be constant and appreciable.

When you "bought" WW (a wild "growth" issue, incidentally), you rationalized that you'd save money. But did you? And what about your time? Apply the yardstick of the going rate on your regular job, and you'll find that you've been employing a pretty high-priced weed control system. And probably a none too effective one at that.

This year why not let the chemicals do your feeding and weeding, while you put your time to more profitable and enjoyable use?

Feeding plants is like feeding people. Both need easily accessible sources of nutrition in their youth and a continuous balanced diet during their entire life.

More than 15 food elements are considered essential to plant growth. Of these, 12 come from the soil, and three are obtained from air and water. The primary food elements are nitrogen, phosphorus, and potash.

Nitrogen gives the dark green coloring to plants, promotes rapid growth and fullness. Phosphorous stimulates early root formation and growth. Potash (potassium) provides plant vigor and disease resistance, as well as stepped-up food production.

Mother Nature supplies the air and — in most cases — the water. (She uses chemical compounds, too.) So that just leaves the feeding and weeding — and in some instances disease control.

An excellent food for all lawns is a 20-10-10 turf food, a balanced combination of nitrogen, phosphorous, and potash, fortified with iron to impart deep greening and combat chlorosis. Phosphorous and potash are long lasting, but nitrogen isn't always. Modern turf food formulations, however, contain "Uramite M" fertilizer compound, a unique fertilizer developed by Du Pont to control the release of nitrogen to the grass as it is needed. Such turf food provides an immediate feeding to the soil that greens grasses quickly, and a long-lasting feeding that keeps it green and healthy for months.

Turf food should be applied in early spring, again in the summer, and — for best results — once more in the fall. One 22-pound bag covers 5,000 square feet of lawn area.

Good turf food is textured for steady flow through your spreader. There should be a handy chart on each package that shows the correct setting for your particular spreader. To avoid unsightly strips of unfed lawn, you might want to set the spreader at half the recommended opening and cover the area twice. The second time walk at right angles to the first.

If your lawn has been invaded by broadleaf weeds like plantain, dandelion, buttercup, and chickweed, you can feed and weed in one application of 20-10-10 turf food containing 2,4-D weed killer. Apply in the same manner as turf food, and one 22-pound bag treats the same 5,000-square-foot area.

Most lawns look best if kept to a height of one and a half to two inches. If the lawn is to be used as a play area for children, you will be wise to keep it somewhat higher, from two to two and a half inches.

CLEAN NAILS

Scratch fingernails along the surface of a bar of soap before starting any paint job or greasy project. Soap keeps paint or grease out of nails.

Fence Brings Value, Beauty

A good fence makes good sense, in terms of creating a feeling of privacy, visually defining property lines, and adding a design dimension to the homesite.

Fences help integrate the relationship of house to lot, and contribute much to the landscape planning and the overall architectural scheme.

For the new house, fencing and patio screens or walls immediately take away the awkward "unfinished" look new houses have until landscaping is completed. And if your house looks too similar to those next door, distinctive fencing will make it stand out as individual.

An excellent material for decorative fences and for patio enclosures, sun traps and windbreaks is tempered hardboard. Tempered hardboard has been specially treated at the factory to make it harder and tougher. Thus it is more resistant to changing hot summer and cold winter weather conditions.

The smooth surface of tempered hardboard panels takes paint well and paint will lend beauty and long life to exterior applications of this moisture-resistant material.

There are many functions that a fence can serve, as definition of lot lines and yard areas, as a background for planting, to shut out sun and wind. For wind and sun, fence design directly affects the temperature you feel. The sun will feel warmer, for example, if the fence screens the wind.

For wind control, a solid fence is only one-third as efficient in protecting against high winds as a slat fence. This is because a solid fence creates a wave of air that splashes over the fence, whereas a slat fence diffuses, or filters, the stream of air.

Solid fences erected to provide privacy can deflect the wind better if a slanting baffle is added to the top to force air to flow over the fence in a gentle arc.

Painting Can Solve Room Size And Shape Problems

You can "change a room's dimensions" if you know the magic tricks of paint color. In this day, when every room may not be the answer to your dream-house architecturally these problem-solving hints from the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association come in handy, indeed.

First, some basic color facts.

The lightness or darkness of a color radically affects the illusion of size. Try this test yourself to see how it works. Place side by side identical objects, one in black, the other in white, since these are dark and light extremes. See how the white seems larger and farther away, the black smaller and closer.

So it is with walls.

White or pastels (which are only colors tinted generously with white) will open up a small area and "enlarge" it. But if you wish to diminish the wide open spaces of a cavernous room, deeep shades will seem to draw the walls cosily together.

Now the color itself.

You may have heard them described as "warm" or "cool." The easiest way to tell which is which, is to relate them to familiar things. Like the sun, like flame, the warm colors are variations of orange, red or yellow. They seem nearer to you and make rooms smaller.

Conversely, like the sky, like water, variations of blue, violet, green and gray are the airier "cools." They make objects appear to recede. Therefore, rooms look larger.

These colors will actually make you feel warmer or cooler mentally. So take this into consideration along with the size of the room before you paint. For instance, a pastel yellow will seem to enclose you more than a pastel blue, even though they are both pale. So if you're painting a long, narrow corridor you might very well prefer choosing your pastel from the cool family.

Speaking of long, narrow rooms, it is best to break them up with color. Favorite decorator tricks are painting the two narrow ends in a deep, warm shade and keeping walls light. This shortens the length considerably to your mind's eye. If the ceiling is abnormally high, pull it together with the floor by painting them both in the same deep shade.

In any room, this ceiling rule holds true: too high, keep the color deep; too low, lift it with a light color.

A half-wall jutting out from nowhere splits a room's symmetry. Since you can't disguise this architecture, dramatize it with a bright, warm shade. This might be the focal point of a furniture grouping or prize painting. More interest is added to a too-square room with this technique, too.

You can afford to chop up space with contrasting-color woodwork and doors only if the room is big enough to take it. Otherwise, paint all. Everything blends. The same goes for radiators, pipes, lighting fixtures, extraneous molding and other such eyesores foisted upon you. They will fade away.

Using top quality paint and cover properly.

Protect Your Plants They Add Value To Your Home

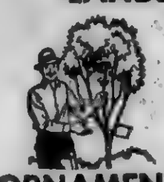
Not many things consumers purchase will become more valuable with time. However this is true with well-cared-for trees and shrubs on a home owner's property, says the American Association of Nurserymen.

A $10 tree, properly cared for, in a period of 10 years or more may cost up to $100 or more to replace. There are reasons for this. Not only is the growing tree an investment, increasing in value, but the labor costs for planting trees multiplies as the trees get larger.

Most home owners prefer to plant the average sizes, usually from one to one and a half inch diameter of the trunk, while other prefer larger trunk diameter of two and a half inches and upward, in order to provide immediate fruit, or shade as the case may be.

These trees of course [illegible], but the home owners are willing to pay more for immediate results.

Other home owners, especially young couples, can watch their trees grow in size and value.



If they wish to sell the home, good landscaping will increase the total value considerably, up to 20 per cent more being reported in some cases.

On the other hand, houses poorly planted or without any planting of significance deteriorate in value more rapidly.

Good landscaping often can be worth up to 10 times its cost after the first 10 years or so; and, when and if the house is sold, can be one of the best investments a family can make.

Nurserymen members of the association are equipped with the proper knowledge to advise home owners on how to plant properly to increase real estate value.

The Swiss Alps Farm House

The mountainous terrain of South Switzerland is the locale for this geranium bedecked farm house. The extremely cold winters explain the small windows and thick stone wall construction. Hay, cured on the mountain side the summer before, is stored in the attic and proves to be valuable insulation. The timbers of the upper stories and gables have a handsome coloration due to the drying effects of the sun in the thin atmosphere. The economy of the area is dominated by dairy cattle, producers of world-famous Swiss cheeses.

300 New Homes Now Being Built By Vilardo Builders

A new housing area known as Asbury Heights is being developed by Vilardo Builders on Noe-Bixby-rd to offer the well-known Vilardo Homes at moderate prices to the discriminating buyers.

According to Vilardo President Phillip J. Vilardo, many persons have been interested in buying a Vilardo home in the past but have found the prices to be prohibitive. Now, said Vilardo, the firm is developing Asbury Park to offer new homes with prices starting at $15,750.

Asbury Park, to be opened May 5, will feature six new model homes, all containing one and a half or two baths. The area is located one-half mile north of route 33 (Canal Winchester-pk), from 3521 to 3567 Noe-Bixby-rd. When completed Asbury Park will be a 300 home community.

Vilardo Builders was founded as a family business consisting of the father, Frank Vilardo, and his sons, Phillip and Danny. A third son, Samuel, heads Sam Vilardo and Co., Realtors, 1341 S. Hamilton-rd, the exclusive agent for Vilardo Homes.

Asbury Park will be completely constructed by the trained crew of Vilardo Builders and sold only by Sam Vilardo and Company.

Recipes

A beautiful home-made cake, tender, moist and delicious, is a source of pride and pleasure for the woman who created it.

Fudge Cupcakes

Shortening, ¼ cup
Unsweetened chocolate, 2 sqs.
Water, ½ cup
Sugar, ½ cup
Vanilla, 1 teaspoon
Cake flour, 1 cup
Salt, ½ teaspoon
Baking powder, ½ teaspoon
Baking soda, ½ teaspoon
Egg, 1
Sour or buttermilk, ¼ cup.

Melt shortening and chocolate in 1½-qt. saucepan over low heat; blend in water and sugar; cool to rooom temperature; add vanilla. Sift flour, measure, add salt, baking powder and soda; sift again. Add egg to chocolate mixture in sauce pan; beat well.

Add flour mixture alternately with milk, blend well after each addition; beat till smooth. Fill muffin pans greased or lined with paper baking cups two-thirds full. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) about 18 minutes. Makes one dozen medium or one-and-one-half dozen small cupcakes.

Richmond Chocolate Frosting

1½ tablespoons cornstarch
½ cup sugar
1 one-ounce unsweetened chocolate grated
Dash salt
⅔ cup boiling water
1½ tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon vanilla

Mix sugar and cornstarch; add chocolate and salt. Add water, cook until mixture thickens. Remove from heat; add butter and vanilla. Spread on cake while hot for a glossy frosting which remains soft and smooth.

Nowadays there's no trick to making perfect cakes. Even amateur cooks can bake cakes that meet with the approval of experienced cake-eaters. With today's carefully tested food products such as double-acting baking powder and delicate cake flour, plus modern kitchen appliances such as mixers and automatic electric ovens, even the inexperienced cook can enjoy consistently excellent cake-baking results.

Modern electric ovens, especially, have taken the guesswork out of baking cakes. Since accurately controlled heat that's evenly distributed throughout the oven is a vital part of perfect cake making, any woman—or her teenage daughter—who will follow directions carefully can bake perfect cakes consistently.

RESEMBLING NATURAL brook pebbles, small chips of translucent vinyl provide an intriguing design effect for this new vinyl flooring. True wall-to-wall beauty can be obtained with durable vinyl flooring that is manufactured in sheet form six-feet wide. Custom designs of contrasting colors in the same flooring material add an attractive decorating extra. Sheet vinyl flooring, installed virtually without seams, offers an extremely easy-to-maintain floor for this remodeled breakfast area.

New Designs And Brighter Colors For Floor Coverings To Be Produced In 1963

The "beige age" in resilient flooring is still going strong, but 1963 is certain to see brighter colors and more design make a noticeable appearance.

As home owners this year prepare for their various remodeling and fix-up projects, they will find a much wider selection of new types of flooring products with more pattern and more vivid colors than have been available in recent years, according to interior designers.

Parallel to the desire for more design in other home furnishings, the resilient flooring industry is reflecting consumer interest in a wider range of more pronounced patterns. Both realistic and stylized versions of traditional flooring effects, such as marble, ceramic tile, small scale geometrics and stone, should continue to be popular.

Consistent with the trend toward more design in flooring, 1963 should find an increased use of specified insets, feature strips and other custom effects to provide floors with individuality. This trend will be most noticeable in luxury tile and vinyl flooring in sheet form six-feet wide, but custom designs are also making an appearance this year in the less expensive installations where materials such as vinyl-asbestos tile are selected.

The use of more vivid colors will become especially noticeable in resilient flooring materials in 1963. In the past, resilient flooring color preferences followed color trends established in other areas of residential interior design. In 1963, color choices in resilient flooring will start to "lead" other color trends.

This new interest in brighter colors and unusual designs in resilient flooring has developed partially from the changes in residential construction with the advent of ranch houses and open-plan construction. The versatility of vinyl has permitted flooring manufacturers to offer the consumer a wider choice of colors and unusual design effects.

"Because the floor occupies such a large physical portion of any room," Mrs. Margaret Gordon Dana, A.I.D., supervisor of Armstrong's Bureau of Interior Design, says, "the selection of flooring material is one of the first considerations in decorating."

The role of the floor in residential interior design has changed considerably in recent years. It has changed from merely "something to walk on" to a vital part of interior design. Flooring materials must coordinate and complement all of the elements involved in modern interiors.

Resilient flooring, with its broad selection of colors and designs, has introduced many new products in recent years and is on the threshold of announcing other exciting effects in new, versatile materials that only a few years ago were not much more than dreams.

A Retreat From City Life Offered By Suburban Living

By Ron Barlow

I guess it's pretty hard for a boy from the country to get used to big-city living. The hustle and bustle of metropolitan life, the tall buildings, the lost feeling of being a stranger, the continual racket of traffic and the enormous size are almost too much for someone used to a little town, where everybody knows everybody else and you can throw a stone from the center of town to the city limits in any direction.

This probably is reason No. 1 for my speedy retreat to a suburb almost before the ink was dry on my application for a job in the city.

I was looking for a quiet street, grass-filled lawns and small-town friendliness you find in a suburban community. Even though I had nine hours a day to spend in the hustle and bustle I wanted to get back to a small town on my own time. It all added up to the fact I wanted to get away from it all. All, in this case, meaning the city.

We found a little nest in the west (West Side of Columbus), and moved in. It was a nearly new home, comfortably constructed, with adequate conveniences and the usual amount of crab grass. Even the trees and shrubs were new and the fun of watching them grow was included in the price of the house. (Who buys an old tree?)

The things I didn't like about my new domain I figured I could change myself, and I immediately made elaborate plans to spend many relaxing hours in the yard planting, replanting and adding personal improvements. My back might get sore but I would be relaxed.

My neighbors turned out to be folks just like me. They had kids, liked to get together for an evening of cards, enjoyed getting away from it all and had sore backs from working in the yard.

And like me the neighbors are mostly from small communities and like to include atmosphere of home-town living in the neighborhood.

Those would be main reasons suburban living appeals to me. Ask a dozen suburbanites why they like to live away from the city and you'll probably get a dozen different answers. And you can bet they'll all be good ones.

Forest Park Offers Homes By Many Columbus Builders

Forest Park, now being developed by Metzger Brothers Co. Inc., 4160 Indianola-av, has the distinction of being the first self-contained community in Columbus.

The community has been developed in such a manner that it will include a nature trail park, playground, elementary and junior high school, swim and tennis club, 16-lane bowling center and a grocery covering a 7000-square foot area. Every possible service and convenience is being planned and offered to residents of this new community.

Another interesting concept in the development is the diversified and varied selection of homes being offered to buyers. At present homes have been built in the community by 53 different builders who in some cases have constructed as many as 11 different types of homes. The large volume of quality homes each builder produces enables them to construct custom homes for near project prices.

Home sales in the new area are being handled by Metzger Brothers Realty Co. and have so far averaged more than one new home per day since the beginning of the project two years ago.

Many persons buying homes in Forest Park already own homes in another location and these properties must be sold or traded in order to buy a new home. Metzger Brothers have tailored their organization to include an existing home sales department which has proven very successful in finding buyers for trade-in homes.

A spokesman for Metzger Brothers said the plan has been so successful that the department is constantly in need of additional existing homes.

The 1961 committee for the Columbus Home Builders "Parade of Homes" selected Forest Park to display 38 different model homes. At the present time 19 model homes are on display in the Forest Park area and several builders are in the process of preparing 34 new models for display in June.

Anyone interested in purchasing a new home is invited to visit Forest Park and see the many model homes on display by various local builders. This area has proven to be a new and successful concept in construction and development within easy driving distance, up the north freeway, of anyone in the Columbus area.

OLD BEDFRAME USE

Top of a discarded bedframe with a few 4" boards, and it makes a great off-the-floor storage platform for screens, storm windows, fireplace logs or bags of fertilizer, cement, etc.

Three Ways To Buy Insulation

Batts (in 4 and 8-foot lengths) are usually preferred for installation in walls.

Blankets (usually in 50-foot rolls) are often best adapted for ceilings or for floors above crawl spaces.

"Fill type" insulation comes loose in bags. It is simply poured between the attic floor joists and smoothed to any even depth.

Insulation materials are made of mineral wool, rock wool, fiber glass, slag, paper pulp, gypsum, asbestos, cork, aluminum foils, vermiculite, cotton and other vegetable and mineral matter.

Proper Mowing Important In Planning Healthy Lawn

By DR. W. A. LIDDELL

In the good old days, mowing the lawn used to be work, but the power mower — gasoline or electric — has changed all that. Today, it is a mild form of exercise — not even that, if you have one with a sulky seat and a fringe on top! — giving us time to concentrate on some of the whys and therefores of this gentle art.

Each is good. The reel type is good for maintaining a close-cropped, even-textured, well graded lawn. The rotary has the edge for lawns with uneven grades and for hard-to-get-at-places. The rotary type is usually less espensive, easier to sharpen, and better at cutting tall grass; but it can be a dangerous instrument if not handled carefully. Whichever kind you choose, keep the cutting edges sharp.

How High to Cut?

Unless you prefer to adjust the machine according to the season — lower for close clipping in the spring and fall, higher for the stress conditions of midsummer — a good average is a cutting height of 1¼ to 1½ inches, providing of course, that your lawn receives its normal requirements of plant food during the season.

On most reel mowers the height of the cut is controlled by adjusting the roller next to the stationary blade. Some are adjusted by shims or shoes extending in front of the machine. Always make adjustments on a level surface, so you can accurately measure the height between the stationary blade and the ground. For rotary mowers, the height is often controlled by adjusting the wheels.

How Often?

This depends a lot on how fast your lawn is growing, but generally, frequent light clipping tends to stimulate leaf growth, provided soil fertility and moisture are ample. Since leaves play an important part in photosynthesis, the process by which plants use light to create plant tissue, it is a poor practice to remove more than a third of the leaf growth at one time. This again argues for frequent clipping rather than occasional heroic scalping.

Mowing a New Lawn

Wait until the grass is about three inches high. By then the plants should be well established, but it is most important to use a sharp mower, as they may not be firmly anchored and may be torn from the soil easily by a dull or poorly adjusted machine.

If possible, roll the new lawn area with a very light or even empty, water-ballast roller the day before the first mowing, to firm the plants in the soil, and help prevent them from being yanked up by the mower.

Mow when the grass is either dry or only slightly moist, and plan to remove excess clippings to prevent smothering of the young plants. After the first mowing, you can follow the practice for regular mowing recommended above.

If you mow often, leave the clippings. They won't be unsightly and in time will add organic matter to your soil. After a two-week vacation, though you may want to remove the clippings to prevent smothering the growing grass. Clippings make an excellent mulch for the garden, if your lawn is big enough to yield a significant volume and if you don't mind the small effort involved in raking.

To give your lawn an even texture, and to prevent the development of a "grain," or striped pattern, plan to mow at a different angle each time. This will encourage the grass to grow erect, preventing a more even and attractive appearance.

1. Use a good, sharp mower.
2. Mow at a height of 1¼-1½ in.
3. Remove only ⅓ to ¾ inch at a time.
4. Suit yourself about the clippings.

NOISE CAN BE SOFTENED

YOUNG GLADIATORS are nice, but noisy to have around the house—especially when people are trying to carry on a conversation nearby. Fortunately though, there's a way to keep this noise under control without relegating the kids to a back bedroom. Modern acoustical ceilings are designed to "soak up" unwanted sounds and keep them from spreading all over the house. An average acoustical ceiling costs little, and can be put up by the family do-it-yourselfer in less than a weekend.

PAINT STRAINER

Strain lumps and sediments out of a can of paint by pouring slowly through a double thickness of cheesecloth that has been tied over the mouth of an empty jar or pail.

CARE FOR MARBLE

Prevent stains and abrasions on marble furniture tops by washing frequently with a mild, neutral detergent and keeping waxed with a thin coat of paste wax.

Built-In Storage Units End Home Clutteration

Is your family always looking for things? If the time spent by families searching for missing articles could be computed, it would undoubtedly run into millions of hours each year.

Which, in many a home, points up the importance of somewhere, somehow developing additional storage facilities, to the end that there shall be "a place for everything, and every thing in its place."

One of the most versatile and adaptable forms of storage unit is the storage wall. This type of storage, which would be equally at home if placed in any room in the house, may be either straight storage or a combination storage and activity center (known as a "living wall").

The key to successful storage walls, be they "living walls" or straight storage, lie in careful planning and assessment of individual needs plus correct choice of construction material.

If solid lumber is used for a storage wall, the wall can be effectively integrated with the rest of the room—particularly if the room is paneled with matching lumber.

As for the where and what of storage walls, straight storage is most commonly incorporated in kitchens, bedrooms (or dressing rooms) and bathrooms; "living walls" are adapted to family and living rooms.

The beauty of the straight storage wall is the fact that it assures that all the items to be stored are consolidated, keeps the articles within easy reach out of sight, and it obviates the necessity for a full complement of bulky furniture.

Although the straight storage wall is usually built along one wall in a room, it may also serve as a room divider, perhaps separating sleeping from dressing area or creating separate activity areas in a child's room.

Combination, or living, walls are limited only by family interests and imagination.

The activity wall is self-explanatory. It might be dedicated to a hobby or series of hobbies such as tropical fish aquariums, the storage of paraphernalia for painting or flower arranging, for photographic equipment or might even include a built-in sewing machine.

On the other hand, the activity wall might be, in essence, an entertainment wall which would include built-in television, a movie screen, stereo and hi-fi equipment, etc. Or it might be built around a large stationary object such as a piano or organ.

Obviously, ending "clutteration" via built-in storage units can, at the same time, make a home much more livable.

Fine-Tooth Comb

Starting brads is one of the hardest of chores. There is always the danger of hitting a finger. Try holding the brad with a comb until it gets started. It may make the job easier and faster.

BUILT-INS store anything from sportswear to hobby gear in this boy's room. Wood is western pine.

OUTDOOR storage is provided in this combination workshop, potting corner built at rear of carport.

FIT FOR A QUEEN

Built-in automatic dishwashers, which fit into standard size cabinet spaces, make it easy to include automatic dishwashing in your new kitchen plans. Or you can choose a convertible model that fits flush with counter tops and fronts on adjoining cabinets, or a portable unit that rolls under the counter when you're not using it.

The Yardener

Flowers Forever, Almost

Try this way to preserve those choice blooms from your garden: Mix one part glycerine and two parts water, put into proper size container and submerge flower stems in the solution for about two weeks.

Attic Fan Helps Cool Warm Night

The installation of an attic fan has proved an inexpensive means of cooling a home, and one that is especially effective on those hot, steamy nights of summer that sometimes make sleeping extremely difficult.

Here's the principle on which an attic fan operates. During a hot day, most roofs absorb a great deal of heat. The temperature in the attic can soar as high as 30 degrees. Then, in the evening, when outdoor temperatures may drop as much as 20 degrees, this accumulated heat is radiated downward, through the rest of the house, so that living areas scarcely have a chance to cool off.

An attic fan will dissipate this heat by exhausting the heat, while drawing air through downstairs windows. As the cool air flows through the house, it draws heat out of the walls, ceilings and furnishings. This lowers the temperature throughout the house.

Attic fans range in size from 24 to 48 inches in diameter. Each is rated as to the number of cubic feet of air it can exhaust per minute.

In most areas, it is recommended that fans be large enough to effect one air change per minute, which means that a fan should have a rating equal to the cubic content of the living area of the house. This can be determined by multiplying the length and width of each floor of the home to compute its total floor area. Then multiply this figure by the ceiling height.

The best location for the fan is on the attic floor, near the center of the house. The fan is installed horizontally over a square opening which is cut through the top floor ceiling.

PART OF A ROOF is being tested for fire resistance as the first step in making sure asphalt shingles qualify for a UL label. The panel of roofing pictured is being exposed to a 1300-degree blast of flame to determine its resistance to heat and fire.

Approved Materials Should Be Considered In Contruction

Most families who live in large cities are protected by building codes that bar the use of unsafe building materials. But what about the millions who live beyond city limits, where the biggest shockwaves of the building boom have been felt?

A tragic rash of conflagrations that devastated many cities years ago spurred the adoption of ordinances calling for fire-resistant roofing on all homes in many cities. But equally strict codes have never been adopted for residential construction in many suburban areas that have sprung up in recent years.

To be on the safe side, a family planning to build or buy a home outside city limits, should see to it that the builder or contractor uses approved materials.

For example, they should insist on roofing approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories. The UL label on a bundle of asphalt shingles means that the shingles have met UL specifications for materials and have passed a rigid series of laboratory tests for fire resistance. Only those asphalt shingles that pass these stiff tests receive the UL label.

UL technicians also make frequent unannounced inspections at the asphalt roofing plants, conducting further tests to make sure the shingles continue to be manufactured according to UL specifications and that they will perform with "reasonable satisfaction."

How To Choose Contractor For An Improvement Job

Before entering into any agreement for home improvement work, it is wise to make a number of checks to be sure you are dealing with a reliable contractor.

Here are some "do's and don'ts" to guide you in selecting a contractor, which are suggested by NERSICA (National, Established Repair, Service, Improvement Contractors Association) a national association of home contractors.

Check Points

1) Deal only with established firms in the community.

2) Visit the office or showroom of the home improvement contractor to be sure that he has a financial stake in your community.

3) Ask about the contractor at your local Chamber of Commerce, Better Business Bureau, etc.

4) Check with your banker about the contractor's reputation, the number of financing jobs the bank has handled for him, and whether there have been any complaints on these jobs.

5) Speak with the sales manager of the supply company whose material the contractor plans to use. This will help you to ascertain if the contractor will deliver the grades of materials stipulated for use in the work. Ask, too, about the contractor's credit and standing.

6) Be wary of the contractor offering to cut his price if you sign immediately.

7) Be wary of the man who says, "If you sign tonight, we'll start tomorrow." Good contractors are usually busy, and complete their work in the order they get it.

8) Be wary of limited customer "recommendations" offered by the contractor. The only reliable check of this type is a list of all his customers with the privilege of checking with any of them you please.

9) Look for adequate insurance coverage. Have the contractor provide proof of public liability insurance coverage, workman's compensation, etc.

10) See detailed drawings. Have the contractor show you sketches of the planned alteration or improvement.

11) Get a completely filled-in contract. Written contract should specify the products to be used, work to be done, full price of the job. Contractor should also give you, in writing, dates of start and completion of work.

"Brush Clean" Item

12) Arrange for the "clean up." Most good contractors will include a "brush clean" item in your contract—if you want it. This guarantees the cleaning up of all debris, usually for a small sum. It is wise to include this in your contract since cleaning up, yourself, can be an arduous task.

Lot-O-Lite Is Now Available

Is there a thief lurking in your area? The easiest, most economical way to outwit him and others of his "ilk" is to have installed a new "Lot-O-Lite."

Whether you live on a farm, operate a factory, want your home or small business protected, or have a need for an automatic dusk to dawn light for school or church, "Lot-O-Lite" is the answer to your problem.

There's no investment and no down payment, and "Lot-O-Lite" can be installed for as low as $3.50 a month. This low price includes free maintenance, lamp replacement and installation, as well as the cost of electricity to operate it. "Lot-O-Lite" provides modern light for driveway, garage, livestock and grain handling areas, machine storage and other outbuildings.

For industrial use, it helps prevent accidents on loading docks and other service areas, provides convenience and protection for night-shift employes and helps ward off theft and vandalism.

For residential — ideal for suburban and rural residences in lighting drives and rear yard areas.

Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Company, 215 N. Front-st, can give you all the details about installing "Lot-O-Lite."

BRIGHTEN UP BASEMENTS

WHEN BRIGHTER BASEMENTS are built it's very likely glass blocks will be used to build them, in part at least. Since glass blocks can be installed in any size opening, they are a versatile way to introduce natural daylight into an area of the house that is most often dependent on electricity for proper illumination. Installed in a former window area or in a horizontal row to bring out the long, low lines of contemporary architecture, glass blocks can be beautiful as well as functional. Their four-inch thickness provides an insulation value equivalent to an eight-inch masonry wall. An additional advantage is the safety factor this type of unit provides by eliminating the easy slip-open type of entrance frequently used for illegal home entry.

Keep Lines Clean And Sharp Painting Walls And Ceilings

One mark of a good paint job is the skill with which the walls and ceilings are "cut in" — the distinct separation between the two areas. This is particularly important when different colors are used. The same is true of the sharpness of the separation in corners where walls of the same or different colors meet.

Here are some hints on how to prevent the ceiling color from getting on the walls, and vice versa, as well as on how to obtain a sharp demarcation between adjacent walls.

It's always best to paint the ceiling first so that splatters will not mar your newly painted walls. If you are using a latex paint, which has the virtue of not showing lapmarks, the first step is to paint a narrow strip all around the perimeter of the ceiling where it meets the walls.

You can keep the paint off the wall by protecting it with a metal strip known as a "painter's time saver" or with pieces of cardboard like the ones which the laundry uses with men's shirts. Hold the strip or cardboard against the well as you brush or roll the paint on the ceiling. Change cardboards frequently to prevent smearing the wall and clean the under surface of the metal strip with a damp rag before moving it to a new spot.

An even easier method is to buy an edging roller which is so constructed that it is impossible to deposit paaint on the walls while the strip is being painted on the ceiling.

Using a roller or brush, paint the entire ceiling, working across the width of the room. You'll find that you save a lot of time if you place a sturdy plank on the steps of two-step ladders and work on it rather than climbing up and down a single ladder. Your paint dealer also has an extension handle that screws into the roller and permits you to paint the average ceiling while standing on the floor.

If you are using an alkyd paint instead of a latex, you go about the job differently. Instead of painting a strip around the perimeter, you brush or roll on a strip only two feed wide next to the wall and then paint across the width of the ceiling. You protect the walls at either end of the room in the same way.

Once the ceiling is completely dry, an hour or less for latex (read the label) and several hours for the alkyds, you are read to paint the walls. The procedure is just the reverse of that already described. Protect the ceiling with the metal strip or cardboard while you apply the paint to the walls. Again, if you are using a latex, you can paint a strip all around the perimeter of the room and then complete the job. If you're applying an alkyd paint, paint an area two feet wide or so, working from the ceiling toward the baseboard.

Whatever paint you use, always work from a dry area into a wet one.

The same techniques are used in painting two walls that meet at right angles and which are to be of different colors or even when the same wall is being painted in two colors to define different areas. Using the cardboard guard, or edging roller, protect the already painted wall (after making sure it is completely dry) and apply a narrow strip of the second color to the adjacent wall.

U-L Label Needed For FHA Or VA Loan

If you finance a new house with an FHA-insured mortgage, the asphalt roof shingles must bear an Underwriters' Laboratories label. The Federal Housing Administration makes this requirement in its standards, which are intended to result in "better and more economical housing for American families."

The Veterans Administration has a similar requirement for new homes purchased with VA mortgages. Federal specifications exert the same control for buildings built for the U.S. government itself.

Home buyers who buy houses with mortgages in which the government is not involved can be sure they have roofing of the same quality if they themselves check to make sure that UL-labeled roofing material is used.

Color Schemes Easy To Make

There are three kinds of color schemes you can plan for your home: Monochromatic, related and contrasting.

Monochromatic schemes are made up of the various tints and shades of one color —light, medium and dark green, for example. It's always a good idea to use a dash of contrasting color in accessories.

Related schemes are made up of closely-related colors —blue with green, or orange with gold. These color schemes are easy to plan, and you'll see related colors combined in a variety of carpets and decorative fabrics.

Contrasting schemes are made up of directly opposite colors — such as red with Green, or blue with gold. It's advisable to have the walls and the floor in shades of the same color.

Builders Now Seek Better Planning For Use Of Land

America, the spacious, is running out of elbow room.

Land has become a limited resource. Its cost is soaring. Our population is increasing. Wasteful and extravagant uses of land are the main causes of this economic problem which confronts virtually every section of the country.

What can be done about it so as to provide more homes for more families at all income levels?

For years, the National Association of Home Builders has been making a serious effort to promote ways of community development that will eliminate land waste and keep costs within reach of lower and moderate income families, according to Robert C. Ledermann, Director, Community Facilities Department, NAHB.

It is clear that residential zoning in the conventional sense cannot do this job. Regulations that require a half acre or an acre lot for every home are so unrealistic as to be ridiculous.

Some of the new concepts in land development are as exciting as they are promising, says Ledermann.

One is the cluster plan. Homes are grouped or clustered in a manner that makes it possible to build on a smaller lot and yet have greater privacy for each home. The frontage of a lot under this plan may be reduced 20 per cent and one-third in overall dimension. The saving in lot size makes possible an open area for park or playground. This green stretch not only offers recreational opportunities but enhances the appearance of the community.

To show what can be done, the NAHB plotted the development of a theoretical 50-acre subdivision using the conventional concept, and then replanned the same subdivision using the cluster idea.

Under the conventional plan, 102 lots were laid out. But the cluster plan made possible 125 lots. In addition, a total of 16½ acres or just about one-third of the entire tract became, under the cluster plan, common, usable open space. Under the conventional development, there was no such open space.

Intersections — possible points of hazard—were reduced from seven in the conventional layout to four in the cluster plan. Street frontage similarly was cut from 5,840 linear feet to 5,425 linear feet. The total street area was shrunk by almost two acres so that it comprised only 14 per cent of the total tract area instead of 17 per cent under the conventional development.

Length of sewer and water lines also were cut — representing substantial savings.

Not all cluster developments would follow this plan. However, many variations are possible. It is generally recognized now that diversity is desirable and that communities benefit from the blending of different types of housing.

Town houses — or, as they once were called, row houses —can be included in the new pattern of community development. They appeal to those who do not want much grass to mow and who are looking for a minimum of maintenance responsibility.

Town or row houses today, properly grouped, can be an attractive addition to a neighborhood, while still providing economical housing. They offer especially good housing for older or retired persons.

It isn't likely or possible that every subdivision can be converted into this particular type of development. But some means can be found to increase the density of development in certain suburban areas to prevent the spread of "urban sprawl" and make it possible for municipal services such as bus lines, police, fire fighting, street lighting, garbage collection and all the rest, to be economically maintained rather than spread out in an even thinner net.

In years ahead, says Ledermann, we must be able to accommodate more people in a given area, rather than just the same number, as is now so often the case. In many areas this will require revision of local governmental policies which now increase housing costs and decrease efficient use of land.

To a large degree, responsibility rests upon local municipal officials to take a long and understanding look at the future.

IN THE KITCHEN

Modernizing Job Gets High Priority

Napoleon said an army "travels on its stomach"—and most mothers will tell you that the same thing is true of a family. Which makes the cook and her "theater of operations" mighty important, and is why so many families in setting up their schedules of home improvement, give top priority to the modernization or remodeling of the kitchen.

A good approach to the whole subject of "re-doing" the kitchen is to ask yourself this question — if you were buying a new home, what kind of kitchen would you want? Then compare this "dream room" with your present kitchen. The chances are the two rooms are not very much alike, but they could be.

Remodeling and modernization can change the size, shape and efficiency of your kitchen as well as its appearance, at a cost that may well be considerably less than you now think.

One of the first things you should do is to make a list of everything you wish to replace, together with all of the additional appliances or fixtures you want.

Very early in your planning it is a good idea to consult with specialists. There is an abundance of professional help available to you. You can work with an architect or kitchen designer, a kitchen cabinet dealer, a store which may offer you a complete "kitchen package" or the home economists of a utility company. Do not hesitate to ask for bids or estimates, especially if the job will involve major structural changes.

Depending on financial or other factors, you can do an overall job of remodeling or modernization at one time, or can make your desired changes a step at a time, major appliance center by appliance center, until the job is finished.

If you take the latter course, be sure to plan ahead for the future installations of wiring and plumbing that will be required to complete the picture of your "dream kitchen."

The newest concept in kitchen planning is to analyze the kitchen according to work there in number, (1) basically threein number, (1) the stove or cooking area, (2) the sink or cleaning area, and (3) the storage area.

A dining and food planning area is often included. To plan a kitchen that is easiest to use, the first step is to decide exactly what is needed in each area. The best coordination of the work areas with one another will follow naturally.

Worth considering in planning a program of kitchen modernization are these basic characteristics of the up-to-date kitchen.

(1) Step-saving. Kitchens are planned for time-and-step-saving convenience. Appliances, counter space and storage units are grouped so that the house-wife can quickly turn from one to another, enabling her to prepare a meal on a "turn-around" basis.

(2) Easy-to-maintain surfaces. Plastic laminates are used extensively for cabinets, wall surfaces and countertops. The housewife appreciates the advantages of a surface that can be kept clean with a damp cloth.

(3) Lighting where it should be. No homemaker likes to work in her own shadow. For this reason the trend is to get away from center lights and instead have them under the cabinets. The ideal arrangement is to have a light for every countertop.

With respect to major kitchen appliances, manufacturers are offering a wider variety of units than ever before, and designing compact units that can be used for many chores, rather than several different chores. Whether these units are free-standing or built-in, they have a built-in look for easy coordination.

Compact units mean less steps and more room for storage. The variety or design means that it is possible to find just the right major appliance for the needs of the family.

A good example of the trend to multi-functional units is the new type of range that does a number of cooking tasks, from baking and broiling to grilling to range-top cooking.

Cooling Unit Can Utilize Heating Line

Cooling engineers have developed a variety of systems so that air conditioning can be installed in any type of house, regardless of the type of heating system used.

A combination hydronic system uses heating-cooling convector units installed in each room of the house. The central power source — a boiler and water chiller — is usually located in the basement.

Hot water and chilled water are circulated to the units through a common tubing system. Each convector unit has a fan, filter, cooling-heating coil and a thermostat for room by room temperature control.

Same Ducts Used

Combination warm air systems use a furnace and cooling unit, usually located in the basement, as the power source. Warm air and cool air are circulated through the same duct system. It's important, however, that ducts be accurately sized. Cooling requires larger ducts than those used for heating alone. If ducts are sized for heating only, the cooling system may not operate efficiently.

Combination heating-cooling systems are not always more economical to install than separate heating and cooling systems. In certain types of construction, for instance, a separate hot water baseboard heating system with a separate cooling system may be more economical than a combination heating-cooling duct system.

To combine cooling equipment with a heating system at a later time, special provisions for air conditioning must be made when the house is constructed. If these provisions are not made, then a separate cooling system may be required.

Some cooling equipment is especially designed for installation independently of the heating system. This equipment also can be installed during construction or later.

For instance, a separate chilled air unit can be used with any type heating system since it functions independently of the heating system. This central cooling system is suitable for modernization in small or medium size homes.

Unit Placement

The cooling unit can be installed in unused space in the attic, garage, hall or closet. Cooling registers, or outlets, are usually located near the ceiling of each room.

A separate chilled water unit can also be used with any type of heating system. It also functions independently of the heating system, and is easily installed in homes located in regions not requiring heating. This unit is suitable for central cooling for new construction or modernization, but especially for multi-story or rambling designs in which zone control is necessary for best results.

This system contains a single cooling unit, remotely located in the basement, which sends chilled water through small tubing to several heavy-duty convectors which have individual temperature controls.

LARGER ROOM

You can make your room look larger by painting the baseboard the same color as your wall-to-wall carpeting. To protect the carpet use a curved metal shield known as a "painter's time saver" or use the cardboards which laundries insert in men's shirts. You'll find it easier to apply the paint with a roller than with a brush, and there are rollers with guards which will prevent paint from getting on the rug. Incidentally, protect the wall above the baseboard the same way.

CLEAN SOLDERING IRON

Keep a piece of emery cloth or sandpaper tacked in one corner of work bench, and wipe hot soldering iron across the abrasive occasionally while working. This keeps hot surfaces free of scale.

Nutcraker's Use

Grasping the bottle cap tightly with a nutcracker and giving a twist is a good way to open tightly closed bottles.

Let Wallpaper Key Your Color Scheme

Whether you are decorating one room or the whole house, almost the first thing to consider is the color scheme. With today's wide range of new colors and unusual combinations, the choice is often difficult. How to choose colors that combine well and are neither too strident nor too nondescript?

Choosing a color scheme can be looked at from two angles: first, if you are starting completely from scratch with all new furnishings, and second, if you do have existing furnishings to consider, such as draperies, carpet or upholstery.

If you are starting from scratch, you will find that wallpaper can be a good starting point.

Today's wallpapers have a range of color and design to please all tastes: when you have selected your pattern, choose a major color in the pattern for your main colos. Use this on the floor, which is the next largest area to your walls.

Then choose a second color from the pattern for your secondary color areas, such as large upholstery pieces in the living room, the bedspread in the bedroom, and the draperies.

Finally choose a third color from your pattern for accent, to be used in small effects such as lamps, cushions and accessories. Remember these patterns are created by trained artists who know how to use color: you are using their knowledge to create your own color scheme.

Living Room Decor

For example, you might choose for your living room a traditional medallion pattern that uses burnt orange, black and beige against a warm tan background. By using warm tan for the carpet, black and beige for the large upholstered pieces and draperies, and accent touches of burnt orange, a harmonious color scheme is achieved. If a more vibrant look is desired, then the burnt orange could be used for the carpet, with the other colors used for major furnishings and accents.

If you already have furnishings that must be used, wallpaper can help you set your scheme around the existing colors.

Supposing you have a leaf green rug in your bedroom. Choose a wallpaper design that includes this color, and you may be sure that the other colors in the design will form a good color scheme that will tie in with your rug. Your choice here might be a pretty floral design in sky blue, lavender and leaf green against a white background.

Color Coordination

By using the blue for the bedspread and curtains, with accents of lavender in lamps, small chairs and accessories, your bedroom will have a new and attractive color scheme, even though your green rug is still with you.

If you have more than one color to consider in your present furnishings, you can tie these together by choosing a wallpaper that incorporates both these colors. If they are unusually strong and vivid colors, however, you may prefer a neutral background.

Cathedral Ceiling Becomes Popular

The striking beauty of a ceiling with exposed wood beams is now within reach of everyone planning a home, because of a 3-in-1 product called "insulating roof deck."

In all areas of the nation, people are asking their architects, builders and lumber dealers to plan their new homes with exposed beams in the ceiling because:

(1) Exposed beam or cathedral ceilings are highly representative of today's contemporary architecture.

(2) Exposed beam ceilings are among the most beautiful devised. They have been a part of the chalets of Switzerland and the cathedrals of Europe for centuries. The natural or stained beauty of the framing members stand out in rugged contrast to the ceiling itself.

(3) A ceiling with exposed beams seems to add spaciousness and grace to any house.

(4) The system of exposed beams enables the use of windows in the gables, which makes a bright and cheerful house—even on rainy days.

(5) With insulating roof deck, an exposed beam ceiling is actually less costly than most conventional roof systems.

Insulating roof deck — which makes a cathedral ceiling an economical possibility —comes in individual 2x8 ft. panels, either 1½, 2 or 3 inches in thickness. These units give your exposed beam roof (1) structural strength, (2) more than adequate insulation, and weather tightness and (3) the factory-finished inside ceiling.

You can have a perforated or fissured sound absorbing ceiling if you desire. And, the ceiling can be painted with a non-bridging paint without damaging acoustical properties if you wish to redecorate at some later date.

A roof made with insulating roof deck units is less costly than conventional roofs partially because the builder can put it up faster. The large, strong panels interlock. Once the insulating roof deck units are in place, your inside ceiling is complete — without plaster or paint. To finish the roof on the outside, the builder may use asphalt shingles, a built-up roof, or composition roll roofing.

In colder climates, insulating roof deck units must be the type with a built-in vapor barrier. You can get insulating roof reck units from your building materials dealer who is supplied by one or more of America's largest insulation board manufacturers.

Large 'Woof' Featured In Modern Tepee Design Home

California has fathered a host of gracious, easy-living ideas. One of them is the A-frame house.

Easy to build, low in cost, and practical to live in, the A-frame gained popularity on the West Coast as a vacation lodge. Because it's perfect for beach house, ski lodge, or lakeside living, it is now catching on all over the country.

The A-frame, long favored by woodsmen, is ideal for areas that suffer severe winters. Its high-pitched roof-wall sheds rain and snow easily and rebuffs high winds.

The company which makes precut A-frame houses, uses asphalt shingle roofing because of its durability, wind and fire resistance, and wide choice of colors. They select wind-resistant asphalt shingles with a factory-applied adhesive. The self-sealing shingles are applied in the usual way, but the adhesive bonds each layer of shingles to the next.

A BROAD EXPANSE of asphalt shingles on this A-frame home adds space to the interior and is designed to resist high winds, rain and snow.

Since the largest exterior area of an A-frame house is the "woof," or wall-roof, its appearance is important. If the house is at the beach or in any area exposed to beating sun, white or pastel asphalt shingles are best because they reflect much of the sun's heat. In shadier areas, any of the many asphalt shingle colors can be chosen to suit individual tastes.

One advantage of the A-frame is that there are no pillars, posts, or load-bearing walls. This simplifies construction, lowers costs, and adds to living space. Non-supporting partitions can be moveable, making it easy to arrange floor space to suit individual needs.

A 24x30-foot A-frame can be arranged to include two bedrooms in the second floor and a large living room, dining area, kitchen and bath on the first floor. If more space is needed, two or more of the structures can be placed end to end, or, with passages added, side by side.

According to the builder, their homes are simple enough to be built by the average do-it-yourselfer. Construction is simplified and costs kept down by using stock window units of Ponderosa pine.

New Windows Aid Old Homes

An older house takes on a remarkably new aspect, inside and out, when new windows are installed.

The exterior looks more welcoming and up-to-date, and the interior gains a sense of space, light and air. If the new windows are made of wood, they add a feeling of warmth and become a contributing part of the decor.

If you are remodeling an older house, replacing old windows with new is an effective way to add beauty and to increase winter comfort.

Today's wood windows have weather tightness built into them at the factory, and, since wood is an efficient natural insulating material, they help keep a house warmer in winter. Ponderosa pine, from which most stock wood windows are made, transmits 1800 times less heat or cold than metal.

Because of this they are not susceptible to the formation of condensation which can damage draperies and walls. In addition, they lend themselves to a variety of decorative treatments since they can be painted, waxed or stained, and with wood frames it's easier to install curtains and draperies.

Stock wood windows are chemically treated in the factory to last indefinitely. Factory-installed weather stripping and locking devices make windows tight when closed, yet wood window units are engineered to operate easily and quietly.

Addition of Desk Will Aid Kitchen Efficiency

A work-corner in the kitchen for correspondence, filing and all sorts of paper-homework is a tremendous contribution to housewifely efficiency.

If desk construction is in your new kitchen plans, arrange for a panel of pegboard backing. This will serve as a bulletin board, to post grocery lists and specials. A rack for magazines and a cookbook shelf will also be useful. A drawer deep enough to hold a standard office file will quickly organize such household necessities as tax records; two shallower drawers will accommodate paper supplies.

Acoustical Ceiling Can Add Beauty, Lower Noise Level Of Any Room

Modern American homes are designed for a feeling of spaciousness and grace. Large expanses of glass, long walls and high ceilings are the eye-appealing result.

Unfortunately, many of these hard, flat surfaces reflect sound and seem to intensify it, unless it is properly controlled.

You can eliminate the sound amplifying qualities of large windows and walls without much trouble. Furniture, drapes and tapestries take care of walls and windows. A carpet will quiet the floor. Ceilings are the "last frontiers."

The most effective way to keep sound from reflecting off your ceilings back into the room is to install an insulation board acoustical tile ceiling. The job is so easy that many homeowners make it a family project.

There are three simple ways to install insulation board acoustical ceiling tile:

1. Adhesive method: The ceiling should be level and unbroken. Determine the center of the ceiling by snapping a chalk line in both directions. Apply the first tile in the center at the junction of the chalk lines. Use insulation board tile with flat (or "butt") edges for adhesive installations.

Apply adhesive daubs about the size of a walnut to each corner of the 12x12x½-inch tiles. Press the first tile up to ceiling to line with the chalk lines. Apply the remaining tile to line up with the first one.

If borders require less than full-sized tiles, you can easily cut the tile with a hand saw or fiberboard knife. You may apply a wood molding at the junction of the wall and ceiling to trim out the room. If the tile is carefully cut flush to the mall, moudling is not needed.

Good Walls Defy Kiddie Scuffing

Children's rooms need not be drab or lack decorative appeal just because they are subjected to a lot of wear and tear over the active years of growing up.

By selecting suitable materials for wall and ceiling surfaces, the home builder can combine durability with good looks that will last.

With hardboard paneling, for example, there is a minimum of maintenance, both in cleaning and in refurbishing. Scuff-proof hardboard is tough enough to take the rough treatment that goes with hard play, and is simple to keep clean with just a wipe of a damp sponge or cloth.

Storage is always a problem for any bedroom. In a child's room, built-ins are a natural solution. One idea is to build a long counter the full length of one wall. Topped with plastic-coated hardboard, it makes a durable desk and hobby work table with wash-and-wear ease of care. Portions of the space beneath can be enclosed for toy and equipment storage with sliding doors of hardboard, hard to dent or scuff.

Building in a blackboard in a child's room provides a wonderful source of amusement and creative exercise for a youngster. And it's practical, too, with new blackboard made of lightweight, warp-free hardboard.

Trees Are Valuable Assets To Be Treated With Care

In the real estate business, they have a ready one-word answer for any question of respective lot values: location.

Then when two lots are in the same general area (but one is priced higher), the justification is just as brief and to the point: trees.

Trees are valuable assets. They should be treated as such. If they're not, the home owner is shortchanging himself.

A complete tree care program starts with pruning and includes feeding and pest control as well.

Pruning controls trees — their size and shape, their flowering, and the amount of fruit they yield. But more important, pruning preserves trees from injury and prevents defective growth.

A good rule of thumb is: prune nonflowering varieties in the spring, and flowering varieties after their blooming period. Never — repeat never —prune the center shoot of an evergreen tree. This will only cause side shoots to extend upward and result in malformation of the trunk.

The tool and equipment list —like the answers of the real estate man —is short and simple: a sharp saw, a pair of pruning shears, a can of tree wound dressing and a stepladder. (If anything higher than a stepladder is needed, chances are a tree surgeon is too).

Cut off the low or unwanted branches. Those that interfere with mowing or normal traffic. Remove dead or diseased wood and cut out branches that hamper the growth of other branches. Cut off all diseased branches at least six to eight inches below the infected area. Where trunks or main branches are damaged or decayed in spots, cut out the damaged area. Then apply tree wound dressing to all cut areas immediately to promote healing.

Where two leads appear, cut one off. This is not a problem when the tree is small, but such a structure forms a weak joint when both limbs reach mature size. There is a right and a wrong way to do this, too. The latter usually results in the weight of the falling limb stripping a foot or so of bark from the main branch or trunk when it falls.

First, notch the underside of the limb about three or four inches from where it grows out of the tree. Then make a second cut from the top — an inch or two farther out. Saw until the limb falls off. Then cut the stub flush with the main branch or the trunk, and spray. Peeling of bark allows moisture to enter and fungus diseases to decay the wood. Certain borers are also attracted by the odor of newly pruned trees. The aerosol tree wound dressing forms a protective seal which prevents the flow of sap and the entry of foreign matter while natural healing is taking place.

Your deciduous trees will benefit from a spring feeding with a balanced fertilizer such as turf food, while evergreens respond well to azalea and evergreen food. Do not, however, feed evergreens in the fall in regions with cold winters. The new growth encouraged will only be killed by the frost.

Insect damage to trees can be stopped by spraying insecticide at seven-to-10-day intervals. The task is made much easier with the use of a garden sprayer or a garden hose.

Rainbow Colors Made For Roofs

"White is easily the most popular color for roofing today," according to Howard Ketcham, noted color authority. "However," Ketcham said, "a recent survey of manufacturers of asphalt shingles indicates that other colors are on their way up.

Ketcham, who was the color engineer for the first colored telephones, attributes the national preference for white roofs to three basic reasons:

1. Since white is a neutral color compatible with all others, its use on the roof permits the widest selection of house body and trim colors.

2. White provides maximum heat reflection, which helps keep a house cooler in summer and lowers air conditioning costs.

3. White is "safe." Many home owners are afraid to trust their own judgment when it comes to colors. They hesitate to use colors that might leave them open to ridicule.

"I feel the increasing use of colorful asphalt shingles is a good sign. It means that more and more families are becoming color conscious and are learning to take advantage of the qualities that only color can provide." Ketcham said.

"White obviously has its place, but according to the survey, an increasing number of families have found that a complementary shade of green may be just right for a house surrounded by nature's greens and browns. And in many southern states light shades of tan are being chosen by families who want both variety and a high degree of heat reflectivity.

"Not too many years ago," Ketcham explained, "Asphalt roofing was available in only a limited number of colors—red, black and the grey-green of natural slate. Today, however the development of synthetic colored granules has led to the production of a wide range of roofing colors, including pastels and blends.

"Blended color asphalt shingles are becoming more popular because they harmonize with a wider variety of exterior trim and sidewall colors than do many, solid shades," Ketcham explained.

Some blends consist of several shades of one color, while others are a mixture of two or more different colors. Another type of blend is achieved by using colors that differ from shingle to shingle.

ADD AN EXTRA HINGE

Making a door for a room? Or buying a ready-made one? You'll have less trouble with it over the years if you add a third hinge midway between the conventional top and bottom hinges.

PREVENTS ACCIDENT

Caution: always place a pail or other container under the sink cleanout plug when you remove it. Even though the faucet has been turned off, there's always a certain amount of water still in the pipe.

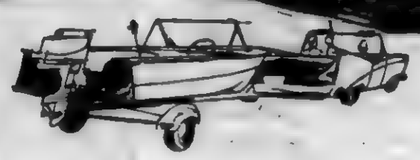
FEATURED AT HOME SHOW

FEATURED HOME of the American Institute of Architects at the 1963 Cleveland Home and Flower Show was this beautifully landscaped one-floor house. Designed by a Berea, O., firm, the floor plan shows the compact grouping of three bedrooms, a dressing room, two baths and a utility room in one wing, separated from the living area by a foyer. The exterior shows the development of the garden areas to become an integral part of the living areas.

TIP TO STOP SPLATTER

Protect door knobs and hardware from splattering paint by coating them liberally with damp soap. Paint after soap dries. A wet cloth removes paint spatters along with the soap.

Here's How Special Ceiling Traps Sound



Insulation board acoustical ceiling tile is made of natural wood or cane fibers that are matted into large sheets during manufacture. Specific products, including acoustical insulation board ceiling tile are cut from the large sheets, which are either ½-inch or ¾-inch thick.

Acoustical ceiling tile can absorb up to 70 per cent of the excess noise that strikes it. Drilled, cut or molded openings in the surface of the tile permit sound to enter. When sound waves hit the fibers inside these acoustical openings, friction slows down and absorbs its further movement, preventing it from bouncing back into the room.

Ohio Bell Offers Convenience, Beauty In Home Communications

Does needless shouting disturb the quiet of your home? Do wasted steps try the patience of your family?

Probably one of the most neglected elements in the home today is improvement of home communications—a relatively easy way to make your life simpler, safer and more convenient.

Families, especially those moving into new or larger homes, could benefit in greater comfort and convenience by reviewing their telephone needs in terms of newly available services.

Local Ohio Bell business offices are ready, willing and able to inform homeowners about the number and variety of telephone servants which are at their beck and call.

Perhaps the most revolutionary new service available today is Home Interphone. This new system permits a wide range of intercom services, from answering the front door to minding the baby, plus the handling of outside calls from every phone in the house.

It is particularly useful in emergencies, such as reporting a fire or accident, or calling for help within the home.

For those who would like a telephone chime instead of a ring, Bell Chime is available. At the flick of a switch, Bell Chime provides a choice of three sounds — a loud bell, a low bell or a melodic chime. Another useful device is the outside bell which lets you know the phone is ringing when you're outdoors.

Today's homemaker also has her choice of new, streamlined telephone instruments. With the one-phone family rapidly becoming a thing of the past, families are striving to integrate the style of extension phones to the decor and needs of special locations. This is especially true in new homes.

The compact Princess phone, with built-in night light on the dial, is most often found in the bedroom, while the handy wall model is especially appropriate for kitchen or basement use.

Another convenience device becoming increasingly popular in the multi-phone household is the exclusion key which automatically cuts out other extensions, insuring complete privacy for important calls. When the receiver is put back, the key is pushed down and the other extensions are returned to the line.

Several products originally designed for limited or business purposes are finding useful applications in the home. A boon to the hard-of-hearing, the new volume control handset has also been gratefully received by mothers with overly vocal young children.

Ohio Bell advises those people who are planning to build new homes to look into the advantages of concealing wiring and adding extra outlets for future phone needs. Advance wiring of a house, like concealed wiring, should be considered in the early planning stages. The result is a neater, more finished final appearance.

The popularity of color phones is further testimony to the growing role the telephone is playing in decorating plans. At the request of color-conscious home owners, the Bell System has installed more than 15 million color phones since their introduction several years ago.

Research has revealed a changing location pattern for telephones in recent years. The trend is to kitchen, bedroom and basement and away from traditional living room or dining room locations. Among the most frequent users of the upstairs phone is the teenage member of the family. Some parents present teenagers with a private phone and listing as a special incentive award for help around the house, good grades or other desirable performance.

Since today's telephone service can be fitted exactly to almost any way of life, families can win extra comfort and convenience dividends by looking over their current phone needs.

DAPPER DOORWAY

ENTRANCES SET THE MOOD for the entire home, and this dapper doorway gives the feeling of an interior that is light, bright and full of life. Glass blocks, framing a wood-panel door, make a king-size entrance out of an ordinary doorway. Homeowners can choose transparent or translucent glass blocks for varied degrees of privacy. Transparent glass blocks admit light as well as vision. Translucent glass blocks bring in plenty of light but eliminate all vision for maximum privacy.

18th Century Design Interpretations New Aid In Revival Of Traditional Furniture

The trend toward Traditional furnishings is being perpetrated by the elegant new interpretations of the 18th century English designs. It is natural that designers should seek inspiration in that era, says the Home Furnishings Industry Committee. Many feel some of the world's finest cabinet-makers were producing between 1680 and 1820.

Some authorities divide the periods of decorative arts according to the popular wood of the time, such as the Age of Walnut (1680-1710), Age of Mahogany (1710-1770) and the Age of Satinwood (1770-1820).

Other writers in the field prefer to designate these periods by rulers: Queen Anne, Georgian (Early, Middle and Late), Regency and Victorian.

Our designers are looking for style motifs from the Early Georgian through the Regency periods (the Ages of Mahogany and Satinwood).

There is no clear-cut demarcation between Queen Anne and the Early Georgian periods, although the tendency graduated toward somewhat heavier structures and more subtle curves. The beautiful mahogany furniture made by Chippendale and his followers has stimulated many to call this the golden age of furniture design.

The "reign" of Hepplewhite was next. His beautiful executions in Satinwood exerted profound influence on the furniture of that time.

Sheraton ranks with Chippendale and Hepplewhite in designers' hall of fame. Many of his creations are characterized by straight lines and classical elements as well as decorative motifs from France.

Everything went classical in the last portion of the 18th century. Trend setters for the time were James and Robert Adam whose furniture was classically simple, restrained and delicately crafted.

The classical forms continued into the Regency Period (Early 19th century) which marks the end of this era of outstanding designs.

Modern manufacturers are adapting these gracious designs from a civilized age for use in our homes. Their quality, flexibility, comfort and practicality are pure 20th century.

INSPIRED BY MASTERS, the "Piedmont" collection of furniture embodies the treasured motifs of England's golden era of design and the honest comfort and simplicity of the 20th century. Mahogany, aristocrat of the hardwoods, is exploited for all of its many variations in grain and pattern. Rounding out these 75 pieces of distinctive furniture is a splendid selection of upholstered armchairs and sofas.

LOWER WITH COLOR

There are two ways to "lower" an overly high ceiling visually with paint color. The first is to paint the ceiling a darker color than walls. The second is to extend the ceiling color down the side walls in a band of whatever width looks attractive.

Patio Becomes Family Haven For Relaxing And Entertaining

One of the easiest and most economical ways to add both comfort and value to your home is to build a patio.

A patio can be as simple or as complex as you want to make it. By using wood, it's possible for a weekend carpenter, using simple tools, to do the whole job himself.

Flagstones are frequently used for patio floors, but, in some cases, wood will harmonize better with the color and styling of your home. The deck should simply be laid on a framework of naturally durable or preservatively treated 2x4s partly imbedded in the ground. It's a good idea to put a layer of sand between the ground and the underside of the decking.

Before embarking on the construction job, though, plan the patio carefully. Decide first of all what it will be used for — dining, sun-bathing, reading? Patios also serve, of course, as children's play areas and make ideal settings for summer parties.

Some patios have built-in storage areas which are used for such things as gardening tools and outdoor furniture.

If the family is going to be using the patio at night, you'll probably want to install electric outlets and screening. Sunbathing calls for a patio with a western or eastern exposure. If very young children will be playing in the area, you may want to make it easily visible from the kitchen. Another point to remember in picking a location is that existing walls and fences can provide part or all of the enclosure needed.

If an additional enclosure is desired, it can be built in a number of ways, since one of the big advantages of wood is that it provides almost infinite design variety. You can cut it to satisfy any set of dimensions, shape it or assemble it into a variety of attractive patterns and obtain additional variety through the use of the natural grain by applying paint or stain.

Wood is also easily available and economical. A lumber yard or building materials dealer is probably only a short distance away from where you are right now.

Some very attractive patio enclosures can be built by forming an open lattice of horizontal and vertical 2x4s spaced six to 12 inches apart. Another idea is to build a framework of 2x4s and then panel it on one or both sides.

A patio or sundeck might be free-standing, attached to the house or detached but connected via a series of protected decking walk-ways. Whichever it is to be, consideration must be given to the existing landscaping, property lines and the direction of the sun's rays and the prevailing winds.

And when selecting the actual design of the structure, these factors must also be taken into account. That is, the functional must be considered as well as the aesthetic.

Perhaps for example, the windward side of the patio, deck or pool ought to be sheltered. Such protection can be achieved by incorporating a distinctive solid lumber screen along the windward side. By using a lattice-work design, vertical louvers or a basket weave design for the screen, protection can be achieved without cutting off the supply of light and air completely.

Whether or not the decking is to be placed directly on the ground or raised is another question that depends largely upon the general lay of the land. It may be constructed either way, but if the yard slopes appreciably, it would be better to raise the decking on posts. Solid lumber is ideally suited to this type of construction.

"Hot Wires" Bill Needs Short Circuit

A total of 506 cities and villages of Ohio as represented by the Ohio Municipal League are seeking a short circuit in the "Hot Wires" bill passed by the Ohio Senate and soon to be acted upon by the Ohio House of Representatives.

The bill as pushed through the senate would permit a public utility to go directly to the Public Utilities Commission here for judgment in disputes between utilities and municipalities. Right of appeal would be only to the Ohio Supreme Court.

The three-member Public Utilities Commission is appointed by the governor and serves as a regulatory, not a judicial body.

Passage of the bill would take from councils, zoning boards and county courts the right to determine where power lines, poles, gas mains, etc. should go.

We have the feeling that the House of Representatives is made up of persons who believe in home rule and it is hoped they will "short circuit" this bill quickly.

Council Gives Two Zoning Issues Okay

Two zoning requests were introduced and two others approved in Monday night action by the Zoning Committee of Columbus City Council.

A change within the residential classification was approved to allow construction of a duplex dwelling on each of two lots in the Kensington Gardens Addition. The lots are located on each side of Keller-rd, north of the first alley north of E. Main-st.

Also approved was a petition for rezoning from residential to employe parking a lot of the Caldwell Main-st Addition. The lot extends from the southeast corner of Elizabeth-av to the first alley north of E. Main-st.

Zoning petitions introduced for council consideration included the following:

Rezoning of the south side of E. Mound-st, between Waverly-st and Weyant-av, from residential to two-family rental.

Rezoning from residential to two-family apartments for a 1.1-acre tract on the south side of E. Mound-st, east of Hampton-rd.

Both petitions were recommended for disapproval by the city zoning staff and commission.

Want A New Flag? Here's Your Chance

Why not try for an "avenue of flags" in your neighborhood by Armed Forces Day, May 18? If you've been in the embarrassing position of being the only one on your block not displaying the flag on patriotic days . . . now is the time to do something about it.

Let's revive the old-time pride in displaying "Old Glory" every chance we get . . . there's no better way to promote good citizenship.

A special offer by Hartley Newspapers now makes it possible for you and your neighbors to display a quality-constructed American flag at very low cost.

For a limited time the cost of a one-year subscription, which is $3 for any Hartley Newspaper, and an added $2 will bring your community newspaper to your home and a beautiful 3x5-foot American flag, valued at $5.50, ready for display. This offer is open to both old and new subscribers.

This means that for a total of $5, cash, check or money order, you will receive 52 issues of your Hartley Newspaper and a big colorfast, cotton, 50-star American flag. The flag is complete . . . it has a six-foot hardwood staff, halyard, metal window socket, top decoration and flag etiquette pamphlet.

Many neighborhoods have competed, in a joint effort, to make sure every house in the block has an American flag on display for patriotic days. Coming up soon, these dates include: Armed Forces Day, May 18; Memorial Day, May 30; Flag Day, June 14, and Independence Day, July 4.

You can obtain your new flag by sending your name, address and check or money order to Hartley Newspapers, 2465 W. Broad-st. Be sure and specify which paper you wish sent to your home. Your flag will be sent to you by return mail and your subscription will start immediately.

Apartments Will Be Whitehall Dem Issue

Lewis Oliver, president of the Whitehall Democratic Club, emphasized two points this week in the controversial apartment house development activity in Whitehall. Mainly:

1. That Whitehall Councilman James M. Toomey, 4390 Kumler-dr, was responsible for the action to re-evaluate the "long-range impact" of the mushrooming apartment developments, and

2. That the apartment building plans would be prime issues in the upcoming fall election campaign.

"There were times," Oliver said, "when Jim (lone Democrat on council) could have cast a 'no' vote on some of these apartment issues, but he knew that the issue would pass with or without his support. This left him in the position of cooperating in matters that were, for all practical purposes, decided. Because of this, his voice in council was the more effective when he sought to serve his third ward constituents in particular and all Whitehall residents generally.

"How far do you think he'd

'NO PLANS TO QUIT P & Z POST' – WRIGHT

All present indications point to the continued service of Craig Wright, 433 Country Club-rd, as a member of the Whitehall Planning and Zoning Commission.

A demand for Wright's resignation was issued by James Maxwell, Jr., 4042 E. Mound-st, who accused Wright of a conflict of interest arising out of a zoning commission decision rendered in August, 1961.

Each man is an attorney, and each has served in city government. Wright is a former safety director, and Maxwell, a former city attorney.

Maxwell has also filed a $100,000 lawsuit (Apr. 26) against Wright, charging that he was libeled by a comment made by Wright and carried in the Eastern Review (Apr. 25).

Two Charter Issues Need Consideration

Two Columbus City Charter amendments will be submitted for voter action at the Tuesday, May 7 primary election. One would equalize assessment payments for sidewalk, sewer and water main improvements, while the other would pave the way for expansion of the municipal light plant.

The amendment relative to improvements was explained by Carl Kaiser, senior civil engineer of the sewage and drainage division.

Kaiser said that the city is presently required to pay two per cent of all such project costs plus the full cost of improvements at intersections. At present, he said, division of the remaining costs places a heavier burden against petition signers than those who share equal benefits but do not sign petitions.

Under the proposed charter change, Kaiser said, all residents who benefit from a given improvement would share equally in the total cost, including the portion presently borne by the city.

The charter change was drafted by Columbus City Councilman William Fornof and has strong bi-partisan support. Fornof explained that the present method of assessing benefiting property owners is inequitable. Many property owners who want such improvements refuse to sign petitions because their assessments will be less as non-signers, he said.

The second charter amendment issue would allow Columbus to include franchise provisions as part of the security for issuance of mortgage revenue bonds to finance activities relative to city-owned utilities.

Howard J. Stemm, electricity division superintendent, said that approval of the amendment would enable the city to expand present facilities.

Stemm said that the city cannot offer potential revenue bond investors the full credit of the city. This means that no payment of revenue bond indebtedness may be paid from general obligation funds.

Stemm explained that any revenue bonds sold to finance expansion of the municipal light plant must be repaid only from profits derived from the city-owned utility. The amendment, he said, offers potential revenue bond investors the protection of taking over the facility should it prove incapable of showing sufficient profit to repay the investors.

SHIFTS FOR HERSELF IN CLUTCH

FEARFUL OF the approach of a clutching hand is Margaret Smith, who will portray the part of Helena in Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" to be presented by the Capital University Masquers as their May Day play, May 3 and 4. THREE EDUCATORS from India visited four days last week at Whitehall High to observe school practices there. They are shown here with that school's principal, Austin Peel (third from left), and Whitehall's industrial arts teacher, Norman Reading (at saw). The men are, from left, S. G. Mathur, S. P. Ram and B. Gopalan. The Indian school men were singled out for this mission by the Indian Ministry and are in this country under the Agency for International Development (AID) and will return to their homeland to take up faculty positions in new teacher education colleges.

Whitehall High Does Its Bit For Better School Practices In India

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Whitehall High did its share last week in upgrading the educational standards of India.

Three educational leaders, appointed by the India Ministry, spent four days at the Whitehall school to view practices there, with the ultimate idea of employing said practices in their homeland.

The trio, including S. P. Ram, B. Gopalan and S. G. Mathur, were operating here under the auspices of the Agency for International Development (AID) and brought to this country with the help of Ohio State University.

"This is a program that the ministry of education has conceived and developed," according to Donald P. Cottrell, dean of the Education College at Ohio State University.

"The effort is being made to upgrade the professional preparation of teachers for multi-purpose secondary school teaching assignments in India," Dean Cottrell continued.

This "multi-purpose secondary school" concept is very similar to this country's so-called "comprehensive" high schools, where students participate in a work-half-day-study-half-day vocational program.

Whitehall has been a vocational idea leader in the Central Ohio area.

It should be mentioned that the trio at Whitehall won't return to teach vocational education in Indian high schools.

Instead, four new model "regional teacher education colleges" are being built in India and the threesome visitors will occupy faculty positions in these schools to teach teachers the "whys" and "wherefores" of vocational education.

Perhaps the most significant observance by the Indian educators at Whitehall was that school's "friendly" teacher-student relationships. They were outwardly impressed with the way students converse freely with teachers in this country.

"In India," Gopalan related, "the teacher occupies a high place in respect. It's not uncommon for students to bow to teachers when meeting on the streets."

They liked the American way, however. Gopalan said he saw "a great need" for more 'to and fro coming to the suit said:

"It's all very well for Mr. Maxwell to use his special skills on council, but I don't think he ought to misadvise the public."

Maxwell called for Wright's resignation from the Zoning Commission in a letter to Mayor Walter B. Moling.

Mayor Moling said he considers the matter "a discussion between two attorneys." He said that he feels that the "whole (zoning) commission has been in general agreement" both on issues that have been approved and those which have been denied.

"Not only Craig Wright, but the whole commission voted their own minds. I don't think they're swayed by anybody," the mayor said.

When asked if he felt that Wright was guilty of a conflict of interest in the Fairway-blvd vote, Mayor Moling said: "I don't think so."

Wright, replying to Maxwell's charge, said that a check of the commission meeting minutes would show that the Fairway Boulevard decision in question was rejected by a 4-1 vote; that he had not been asked to disqualify himself, and that Maxwell had no official connection with that particular case.

Of the Maxwell letter to Mayor Moling, Wright said:

"Portions of it are inaccurate and inconsistent. The letter is insulting and not worthy of further comment.

"Our commission has always done a conscientious job," he said, "and I intend to continue to contribute to its orderly process."

Maxwell continued his advocacy of more apartment building for Whitehall, pointing out that the Whitehall school district would benefit from money added to the local tax duplicate.

"The money coming to the Whitehall School District was not mentioned," he said. "That's $81,420 each year (based on 28 apartment buildings). And they (the buildings) don't add one single child."

Maxwell's position was backed by Raymond E. Shipley, 4077 Powell-av. The Whitehall councilman-at-large cited his own position as a homeowner resident. In a letter to the editor (carried in full in this edition) Shipley said in part:

"The schools get $23.60 per $1,000 valuation. In my case, they get $118 per year. I had five children in school. The schools' operating cost is $322 for each pupil per year. The cost for five children to go to school for one year is $1,610."

"Someone has to pay the difference. Commercial, industrial and apartment property do this."

Go Fly Kite— But Carefully Warns Chief

This spring weather brings out hundreds of kite flyers. If a few simple rules are not followed, many will be injured, some fatally, warned Whitehall Fire Chief Arthur T. Reddy.

Kites should be flown only where ground is level and away from buildings, streets and electric wires, he said.

They should be made of wood, without the use of any metal parts, even to the string.

If it gets fastened in a power line, let it stay there and buy another one—your life could depend on it, the chief stated.

have progressed with his ordinance to repeal CAO if he had compiled a record of consistently bucking a steamroller council?" Oliver asked.

Toomey confirmed that he initiated legislation in August 1962, seeking repeal of the CAO zoning classification.

"CAO was loosely drawn," Toomey said. "Its limitations were few and its interpretations broad."

Toomey explained that his proposal was tabled when council members wanted to hold up action until a substitute classification could be prepared.

CAO was subsequently repealed when a replacing classification was approved by council early this year. The new ordinance contains a "saving clause" permitting completion of all CAO projects authorized by council prior to revision of the classification.

"I will not go into this with a negative attitude," Toomey said. "But I do not subscribe to the theory that rezoning should be approved merely to erect something on vacant ground."

Toomey said he is concerned with the broad powers of legislative authority in such matters. He said his attention had been drawn recently to a number of court decisions (outside Whitehall) against taxpayer suits attempting to overrule council actions. Courts, he said, seem to have adopted a general policy reluctance to second-guess councils on specific legislative acts.

Toomey suggested a means of improving the line of communications between council and the Planning and Zoning Commission. "Perhaps it would be advisable," he said, "for council to send one representative to each commission meeting to report back to council on activities."

Unofficial public hearings will be conducted as part of future Whitehall Planning and Zoning Commission meetings, according to Mayor Walter B. Moling.

Mayor Moling said that, beginning with the May 14 meeting, persons owning property abutting, or adjacent to areas affected by rezoning requests will be invited to attend the commission hearing. Letters will be sent to property owners prior to each commission meeting.

"We are confined in area," Toomey stated. "We know what we have to work with in establishing proper planning to balance residential, commercial and industrial growth patterns."

Toomey describes one of the prime planning and zoning problems facing Whitehall as the realization that "Whitehall has been hit harder and faster than anticipated when council passed legislation," precipitating the current apartment building boom.

Meeting Tonight

Meanwhile, Oliver indicated that tonight's (Thursday) meeting of the Whitehall Democrats will be highlighted by a preview of what can be expected for the fall campaign to unseat Republican councilmen. (The Democrats do not have a candidate for mayor. Mayor Walter B. Moling will be opposed by William Holzhause, 4239 Mayflower, who will run as an independent.)

"What gaineth Whitehall if the city officials have more money to spend and a city of unhappy people?" Oliver asked. He said he will discuss with local Democrats "this utter disregard for the people" which, he says, "has filtered down to some city departments."

In commenting on the apartment issue, Oliver said: "This attitude (by council) places Whitehall in the ridiculous, un-American position of government versus the people, instead of government for the people. The Whitehall Democrats," he said, "want to give back to the people their rightful voice in their own government concerning the apartments and all other issues."

munications" between teachers and students in India.

Naturally, the many vocational and industrial arts facilities at Whitehall impressed them. They won't be able to employ all of our ideas since, as one said, "there are financial restrictions."

But, they added:

"We are gradually building up our educational program. We're setting up good and new colleges every year."

Just for the record, India inherited from the days of British rule a kind of limited secondary school system. It's limited in that it merely prepares students for university study.

Following the independence of India, school officials have been seeking ways to enlarge the "vocational streams" for high school students.

They have an ocean full of ideas to work with now.

movement to stir up interest in politics.

There will be lots of complaining about the outcome. Many will say that in the final races this fall they must take the lesser of two evils.

We are able through independent citizen groups to get out a vote for bond issues and we can always find a wealth of capable talent available to serve on recommending groups. It is time for some group to step up with a similar plan to encourage better qualified men and women to take an active part in politics.

In the meantime, take time to go to the polls next Tuesday and send the best candidates into the election this fall.

"CHARGE IT!" No Down Payment Months to Pay

You Can Win As Much As $138 In This Week's Hartley Newspaper 'Confederate' Cash Jackpot

The grand total waiting for the winner of the Hartley Newspaper's "Confederate" Money jackpot has now climbed to 138 "Confederate" dollars, good for merchandise or services at any place of business of any advertiser in a Hartley Newspaper during the week the winner wishes to spend it.

Now's the time to begin looking for the "5" emblem just like the one printed in this column, in a color other than black, hidden in the white space of one of the advertisements inside the paper.

Now is also the time to subscribe to a Hartley Newspaper, if not already a subscriber, because only paid subscribers are eligible to win the big money.

Each week 20 insignia with the number "1" are placed inside the advertisements of Hartley Newspapers. These insignia can be redeemed by any reader, subscriber or not, for one "Confederate" dollar, if the page containing the emblem is mailed or brought into the Hartley Newspaper Office, 2465 W. Broad-st.

The holder of the lucky "5" insignia will receive five "Confederate" dollars if it is brought into the Hartley Newspaper Office in person. If that holder is a paid subscriber to one of the seven Hartley Newspapers, that "5" emblem also becomes worth the total amount of the current "Confederate" jackpot . . . this week that is $138.

This contest is not open to employes or carriers of Hartley Newspapers or their families.

With all that cash now waiting for the winner of the big jackpot the few minutes spent looking for the confederate insignia could be well worth the effort. You have nothing to lose and 138 "Confederate" dollars to win. And remember, those Hartley Newspaper "Confederate" bills are as good as money in the bank with any Hartley advertiser.

The South has risen . . . and you can, too, by searching for the lucky emblems in your favorite Hartley Newspaper.

Rabbi Zelizer To Attend Assembly

Rabbi Nathan Zelizer of Tifereth Israel Congregation will be one of the participants in the 63rd annual convention of the Rabbinical Assembly, international association of conservative rabbis.

Theme of the convention, to be held at the Pioneer Country Club, New York, from May 5 to 9, will be "Jewish Tradition and the Contemporary World."

Specific contemporary issues to be discussed at the coming convention include the conflict between church and state, with particular reference to such topics as federal aid to parochial education, and prayers and Bible reading in the schools.

In response to a mandate from last year's convention, one full session will be devoted to the problems of world peace, the threat of nuclear warfare, and of total destruction of the human race.

Outside experts will discuss various perspectives of these problems with the members of the assembly, and the rabbis will attempt to focus the wisdom of Jewish tradition upon the issues.

"The opportunity to study our heritage and to join with rabbinic colleagues in searching out its insights into the moral dilemmas of our day is one of the rewards of our annual convention," said Rabbi Zelizer.

Rabbi and Mrs. Nathan Zelizer will leave Columbus Sunday, May 5.

Following the convention, the Zelizers will travel to New York City where the rabbi will attend the National Convention of Correctional Chaplains to be held May 13 and 14. They will return to Columbus May 15.

GOING UP...

A building is being erected. It is made of strong materials, steel and concrete. The foundation is firm and deep. The edifice is built to endure.

We need to build our homes to endure. They need a strong foundation. They need to be built on the rock of Christ. Psalm 127:1 reads, Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it." Attend church regularly that your house may be instructed in the ways of the Lord.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for men and of His demand for men to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH ..... THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

Lower Gas Rates Affect Columbus

The cost of fuel gas will drop another one and a half cents on June 4 for Columbus gas consumers, according to a recent announcement by the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. This makes a total of four cents in decreases since last September.

The rate cuts have been made possible from refunds to the gas company from interstate gas transmission firms ordered by the Federal Power Commission. The refunds total $16.2 million.

City Service Director Howard Johnson said the benefit to the average consumer would be about eight cents per month on their gas bill.

The rate decrease will also apply in Bexley, Grandview Heights, Marble Cliff, Riverlea, Upper Arlington, Valley View, Worthington, Reynoldsburg, Canal Winchester, Grove City and Minerva Park.

Brice consumers will get a four-cent decrease and Whitehall customers will get a one-cent decrease.

GOLF CAN be fun—especially at Putt Putt Golf Courses when you're giving pointers to pretty gals like Miss Putt Putt Barbara Klein. Actually Mr. Putt Putt Tom Rohm is checking over the Hamilton-rd course in preparation for the upcoming first-ever Celebrity Tournament planned for Sunday, May 5.

Sports, Entertainment 'Pros' Compete In Putt-Putt Match

The nearly unbelievable popularity of Putt-Putt golf in the Greater Columbus area has prompted a celebration. More specifically, a celebration by celebrities.

Columbus' Mr. Putt-Putt, Tom Rohm, has announced that a "Celebrity Tournament" — a first-ever for the area — is scheduled Sunday at 2 p.m.

ROHM SAYS that a host of celebrities from the Columbus area have agreed to participate in the "big show" which will be staged at the original Putt-Putt Course in Columbus at 599 S. Hamilton-rd in Whitehall.

"We hope to give local residents a chance to see their favorite people from the athletic and entertainment world —as well as press, radio and television personalities," Rohm said.

Included in the list of Columbus favorites from the world of sports are Ohio State basketball coach, Fred Taylor, and Capital University coach, Harold "Whitey" Regan.

THE COACHES will bring such "pupils" with them as Dick Reasbeck, Jim Doughty, Dick Taylor, Don DeVoe, Jim Schaeffer, Tom Bowman, Carter Castilow, Dick Thies, Dick Ricketts, Dave Francis, Bob Butts, Bob Vogel, Gary Moeller, Eugene Ricardi and Dick Braun.

Newspaper personalities include Lou Berliner, John Auble, Jr., Paul Hornung, Tom Keys and Jack Wittenmeier.

From television comes Jim Steer, Stan Robinson, Nick Basso, Clay Eager, Clark Smith, Chet Long and Bob (Flippo) Marvin.

Radio representatives slated to tee off Sunday are Bill Teague, Spook Beckman and Phil Schaefer.

ROHM SAID that he is negotiating with other personalities — all familiar to Columbus residents.

Lowest medal score for the 18-holes will determine the winner with each entrant competing for a set of McGregor golf clubs.

Rohm, who is also managing pro for Columbus Putt-Putt golf courses, added a "cordial invitation to all" and predicted an "afternoon of enjoyment for both contestants and spectators."

Franklin Park Joins In City ProgramPlan

Opening date for the 31 city-run playgrounds is Wednesday, June 12. Hours are 12:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Each play area will be staffed with at least two college-trained supervisors who will conduct daily recreation programs of crafts, dramatics, physical training, games and special events. A traveling zoo and bike safety courses will be featured at each playground at some time during the season.

Soon after the playgrounds open, registration will begin for Indian Village Day Camp. James Road and Leawood school areas will attend during the week of July 29. Youngsters from Krum Park area will go there the week of July 22.

Expert Testifies In Murder Trial

An Ohio State University pathologist, Dr. Emmerich Von Haam, testified Wednesday in the second degree murder trial of Andrew Koscho that the accused man's wife had been hit in the head with a blunt instrument and suffered other body injuries either before death or within three months after death.

The skeleton of Mrs. Cecile Koscho was uncovered on the grounds of the Boys' Industrial School, near Lancaster, last October. Koscho admitted burying the body after he said his wife died when he struck her in the throat during an argument in Dec., 1961.

A Primary Obligation--

Tuesday, May 7, is Primary Election Day. It is a more important day of decision than most people seem to realize. It is the individual voter's opportunity to say who will represent the political parties in November.

Primary Day is the truest form of grass roots politics; an invitation to each qualified citizen to take an active part in the beginning processes of government.

We all recognize our constitutional right to free and open elections. Let's also remember that proper "political physical fitness" calls for exercising of our voting rights at every opportunity.

Voting is not only a right and a privilege—it is also a responsibility and a duty.

Show Pride In The Colors

The quality of love is measured by its endurance, rather than its intensity. It is not necessary that we exhibit constant and boisterous mouthings to show our true love of country.

There is, for example, one quiet, sincere, effective manner by which we show an enduring love and respect for the principles of our democratic republic — the flying of our flag.

Upcoming dates on which our flag should be displayed include:

Armed Forces Day, May 18; Memorial Day, May 30; Flag Day, June 14; Independence Day, July 4; Labor Day, Sept. 2; Columbus Day, Oct. 12, and Veteran's Day, Nov. 11.

Six Rules Check Molesters

How many times, we wonder, could these deplorable and revolting incidents of child molesting be circumvented with more careful instructions to children and more caution by parents?

Here are six rules we feel all parents would do well to utilize to better protect our defenseless children.

1. Instruct children to decline any offer of candy, money or rides from anyone who is not known to both the child and the parents.

2. Tell them to report to you any such offers.

3. Don't permit young children to be outside, unattended, after dark.

4. Don't permit children to go alone to unsupervised play areas.

5. Don't send a child on any errand after dark.

6. If your child is too young to understand these instructions and rules, then he is too young to be without adult supervision at all times.

ABOUT OHIO

"Beautiful Ohio." We often hear and speak about that phrase. And with good reason. Ohio is beautiful. And more.

We have scenery, industries, farmlands, recreation areas, airports, and traffic. We have railroads, good highways, history, a growing tradition—and above all, people, some of them famous.

Figures may be boring. But risking that, here are a few about Ohio. This "Empire within an Empire" has almost 45,000 square miles of which over 3,000 lie within Lake Erie. Almost square, the four boundaries are about 200 miles each and none is more than about 150 miles from Columbus. Average temperature is 51 and yearly moisture fall is 38 inches.

Ohio ranks eighth in agriculture with nearly 300,000 farm people on 20 million acres. Their annual income is a billion dollars.

Ohio is "The Crossroads of the Nation." We have 29 railroads reaching all 88 counties. Thirteen airlines land on 201 certified ports and another 200 private fields serve unscheduled flying. Besides the 241 miles of turnpike, we have over 18,000 miles of good roads. Heavy goods are carried on Lake Erie and the Ohio River in ships and barges.

Yes, Ohio has had a great past and will have a greater future. It's nice to be a Buckeye.

It says here . . . The pasture is not always greener on the other side.

An Editor's Outlook . . .

Folklore Of Liberals Full Of Delusions

Self-styled "liberals" are generally nicer people than sour-puss reactionaries.

It would be better to be cast away on a desert island with an outgoing and out-giving liberal than with a guy who's against everything including the construction of a raft. But this doesn't mean that "liberal" government is a good recipe for equity or human happiness. Many liberals suffer from smug assumptions about human behavior and political theory that simply don't jibe with reality.

Jones

They are capable of a great degree of dogma. They honestly believe themselves to be champions of liberty while they favor creeping coercion as long as they can be the authors of coercion. They are so sure their theories are good for you that they think they are only doing you a favor when they tie you to a post, pry open your jaws, and pour their nostrums down your throat.

Willie Howard, the late great Jewish comedian, had a skit in which he impersonated a Communist holding forth in Union Square.

"Comes da revolution," shouted Willie, "you'll eat strawberries and cream."

"But," protested someone in his stage audience, "I don't like strawberries and cream."

Willie assumed a contemptuous sneer: "Comes da revolution and YOU'LL EAT strawberries and cream!"

This is not a bad description of the "liberal" formula for human happiness.

One of the chief characteristics of the professional liberal in America is his naive belief in the corrective power of law. Every time he sees social maladjustment or a personal tragedy he wants to pass a law to correct it. Gradually and with the best intentions he weaves a net of verbotens and must-dos that paralyzes the individual.

I once served on a Navy ship under a chief communications officer who had this compulsion. Every time an error was made in the radio shack or coding room he promulgated a new edict to correct the fault—another carbon copy, a triple check, a new log to keep. Pretty soon we were so busy with safeguards that we began to miss messages to the ship. In short, our prime purpose broke down.

If you keep on passing laws to obviate every possible injustice, eventually you arrive at the ultimate injustice, the police state.

Although the "liberal" often professes a contempt for money, he has almost a childlike faith in its power. What he can't cure with a law he thinks he can cure with an appropriation. When mulish taxpayers balk at such expenditures at the local level, he demands that the federal government take over, on the sound theory that the farther the taxing agency is removed from the individual the more chance there is that the individual will be complacent about the tax. The argument: "If Oklahoma doesn't take the money, Maine will," is a potent one.

Therefore, the "liberal" arrives quite logically at his advocacy of centralized power. Centralized power is the device by which the normal caution of the taxpayer is overwhelmed by his greed. Federal aid to schools will provide more teachers without raising school district taxes. Ninety-ten federal highway money means that we won't have to pay the bond issue. Increased federal relief means that local government can be shirked. And so super-government grows and the "liberal" is delighted.

He is delighted because he questions whether local government will ever have adequate "social vision." But he will see to it that the super-government has. There will be plans, bold plans of new frontiers entered into with vigor.

The "liberal" also seems to hold a double standard in the matter of human behavior. He is irate about the "greed" of corporations and the evils of stock options. But the mugger in the park who stabs for $20 is a "deprived" person who wouldn't have gone wrong if there had been enough social legislation.

The "liberal" can't believe that removing the penalties for misbehavior or lack of performance could increase human cussedness and sloth. Instead, according to his theory, what we need are more social workers, more public housing, more youth clubs. And with them we keep getting more chiselers, more illegitimate children, more delinquency and crime.

One problem with the "liberal" is that he's getting way behind the times. He can't adjust his dogmas to new forces. He looks at labor-management problems as though the Pinkertons were still shooting the strikers at Homestead. The significance of Jimmy Hoffa eludes him. He is furious at the price-raising attempt by U. S. Steel, but unable to comprehend the cost-fixing capabilities of the United Steel Workers. He is still chasing Commodore Vanderbilt and the beef trust.

The "liberal" thus deludes himself with the comfortable assurance that he is far-seeing, a "progressive," a man of the future. In his effort to cure injustices by piling on more government he forgets that all the great struggles for freedom have been directed against the overblown force of government.

He has, with minor interruptions, been in power in America for 30 years. He is getting gray, and even a little quaint. He won't admit error or consider pragmatic results. He has concocted his medicine, and as our colic increases he merely calls for bigger doses.

The "liberal" is a nice guy. He is loving us to death.

Don't Knock Junk Mail; It Pampers Your Ego

Who says junk mail is a nuisance?

Some of it, in addition to breaking the monotony of receiving bills, is great for morale boosting — especially if you suffer recurrent doubts about your ability.

Sages, seers, poets and wives through the ages have been telling man there is nothing he cannot accomplish if he so desires. But most of them couldn't hold a snuffbox to the junk mail artists who daily deluge us with learn-by-mail appeals.

McPeek

For one who is buffeted by an inferiority complex of such proportions as mine, it's like downing a psychotherapeutic highball to read a letter telling you that you have the qualities and ability to "lead the adventurous, romantic life of a private detective"—even if it is addressed to "occupant."

So convincing was the become-a-shamus pitch with its promise also of an "official" badge and diploma, I rushed out and bought a trench coat and was about to send in my money when a similar proposal came from a photographic operation in the East that assured me that I could, through 12 easy correspondence lessons, gain fame and wealth as a photographer of "beautiful girls and exotic places."

I immediately lost all interest in becoming a detective and was about to send for more information on how to become famously rich and cavort with beautiful dolls when my wife got hold of the letter.

An emergency three-minute brainwashing session administered by her, punctuated with threats of physical violence, aborted my photographic career before it even got off the launching pad.

But, nurtured by thoughts of possibly signing up for Charles Atlas' muscle building course, I soon recovered from the bitter disappointment. (Who needs fame, wealth and . . .?)

Other learn-by-mail propositions I've received assured me that I could become a glassblower, a famous artist, an electrician, a hairdresser, an announcer, a criminal lawyer, a glamorous model (this one sounded interesting, too, but in view of Christine Jorgensen's questionable publicity, I rejected the idea), a nuclear scientist (build your own A-bomb for fun and profit?), and a recent one from a theatrical agency which is convinced that I, the "occupant," belong in show business and they are just the people to put me there . . . for a price.

But after more than a decade of marriage, I'm sure there is nothing they can teach me about theatrics. Besides, look how acting has botched up Richard Burton's life.

Yeah, look at it!

Disputes Article

To the Editor:

The article by Charles Claybaugh, president of the National Editorial Association ("Creeping Socialism," Editorial page, Apr. 17, 18) I must challenge.

If free enterprise has no better argument or defender than the ones he gives, it is lost.

He mentions public schools, school buses, school cafeteria, U.S. Army and Navy, state universities, public health systems, public hospitals, veterans' land programs, Social Security, old age assistance, R.E.A. power for farms, stocking fish ponds, aid to cities' renewal programs, and cities' sewer plants, post office and civil service.

If all these things were abolished free enterprise would collapse. I wonder if he remembers the depression of 1930?

He never mentioned all the things that the government does for industries, transportation, banks and building and housing concerns.

Government ownership of business is not socialism. Socialism is the collective ownership of the means of production, transportation and the land, controlled democratically by the people that work in them by brain and hand. It also means the abolishing of rent, interest and profit.

Mr. Claybaugh better inform himself before he speaks on a subject. He makes a poor defender of free enterprise.

The members of District Twelve of the Ohio State Nurses Association want to take this opportunity to thank you for the excellent article (Who Is Responsible . . . Hospital or Nurses?) which appeared in your papers Apr. 11.

We received many favorable comments from friends, senators, and members of the allied health professions. Many of our friends admired the excellent photographs of the nurses.

We were happy that you handled such a controversial topic in such a tactful way.

Frosting On The Cake

By "UNCLE DOC" ROSS of U.S.A.

In our own nearly 200 years of social evolution, paralleled by political unfoldment, every fine thing has happened in spite of stupidity, venal behavior, and downright cussedness in every generation. Giants in any field of usefulness have always paid a tremendous price for their own health of soul and indomitable courage to "keep on keeping on" regardless of every abuse, insult, or political chicanery.

Inspired and inspiring leaders of the constant forward march have survived only because of the very "compulsion" of their souls. Nothing dissuaded them and too many never lived long enough to see how right they had been all along. Uncounted thousands of truly great individuals have gone to unmarked and unsung graves, devoid of any real recognition and success, as the world measures success.

But, "what they did here" lived on after their departure from the human scene because priceless foundations were laid down, upon which succeeding giants could build. No man or woman ever enjoyed any greater immortality than eventual recognition that Divine Providence had travelled with all such lives.

God's Grace Allows Us To Change

WHAT ARE YOU? Perhaps only you and God know. But this is not to say that you cannot become someone other than the person you now are. The apostle Paul was a persecutor of the church. He used the power at his disposal to destroy any and all potential that the early church might have had. I do not mean to imply that this was Paul's only fault. I am sure other weaknesses were revealed as he experienced the power of Christ's confrontation on the road to Damascus. But for once he became honest. He realized that what he was wasn't what he should be. Thus, Paul with humiliating conviction of his own unworthiness, was united with the consciousness of that Higher Power which worked on and in him. It wasn't that Paul worked out his salvation as many of us attempt to do by becoming a "good person," but rather by accepting the grace of God which was revealed in Jesus Christ. This experience later caused him to write in his letter to the church at Corinth; "For I am the last of the apostles, unfit to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God. But by the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace toward me was not in vain. On the contrary, I worked harder than any of them, though it was not I, but the grace of God which is with me. (Acts 15:9-10).

Rev. Dunaway

SCRIPTURE: For I am the least of the apostles, unfit to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God. But by the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace toward me was not in vain. On the contrary, I worked harder than any of them, though it was not I, but the grace of God which is with me. (Acts 15:9-10).

WHAT ARE YOU? Has some legalistic evangel made you aware of what you are, leaving you in despair and with little hope of becoming a better person? My friend, your hope does not lie in your becoming a better person, it lies in the grace of God. Even if the sanctified evangels relied upon their goodness to bring hope and salvation they would probably fall shorter toward the goal than you.

Let us be honest as was Paul. The church is not a legalistic workshop. God is not the proud owner of a new IBM machine that keeps a day-by-day record of your life. God is your Father. Does that mean anything to you? It is as a father that He comes to us, not as a judge. It is to His grace that we should respond, not to the miserable concept of what we know ourselves to be. It is God's grace that allows us to come to Him in spite of what we are. This is the message, the good news of the Christian faith, that God accepts us for what we are, and His grace allows Him to do so.

Let me hasten to add, lest I be misunderstood by some brethren that once this grace has been applied and realized, there should come a desire to walk in the light of spiritual living as revealed in God's word. But, this is not to say that God's grace does not continue to accept us as sinners. For if it did discontinue to accept us, who of us would be accepted?

Wizard Sees Derby $ In Never Bend Stable

In direct defiance of the warnings of Senator McClellan and Pete Rozelle, we visited the dwelling of one of our friends (labeled as an "undesirable" these days) last week in hopes of "getting the word" on the 89th Kentucky Derby Saturday.

Wading through stacks of racing forms, we confronted "Gary Go-Broke" with the obligation of converting our rectangular Thomas Jefferson into the proverbial pot of gold.

UP UNTIL THAT visit, it had been a two-horse race between Capt. Harry F. Guggenheim's '62 champion juvenile Never Bend and Rex C. Ellsworth's unbeaten Candy Spots.

But now the situation has changed completely. "No Robbery scares me," GG confided, carrying another stack of forms down to the furnace.

"He's developed quickly. His last race was just two-fifths off the track record, good enough to drop the odds from 10-1 to 3-1."

"OF COURSE, Never Bend still has to be my pick," GG pointed out, indicating with his red pencil that the "best in the East" had covered five furlongs in :58 in a Derby workout.

"On the other hand; Candy Spots (the best in the West) beat Never Bend as a two-year-old at Arlington last summer. But Spots has run only when the tracks were fast and Churchill Downs is an Eastern Track, slower due to its dirt composition if there's any moisture."

"The two things to consider," he continued, "are a good speed rating in a recent race (within 10 days) and conditioning. Those two factors indicate more than anything else if a horse looks good for a particular race."

THE ROOM was getting uncomfortably warm but GG continued jamming the forms into the furnace door. "I'm a chalk player (short odds) myself. That's the closest you ever come to winning. The long-odds player is an automatic loser."

"How about the jockey? Shouldn't that be a consideration?" we asked.

"Just like a baseball All-Star game. Only the top boys ride the Derby horses," GG answered.

"There's a real good chance for a track record if the conditions are right," GG continued, stacking some more forms in my arms. "The horses get better every year—more trim, more streamlined. The feed's a lot better."

AFTER WE HAD transacted our business, we asked GG how his profit and loss ledger was standing this year.

"Do you realize that $596,914.520 was spent in 1962 on horse race betting in New York State's 296-day season alone?"

"How have you been doing?"

"OF COURSE, horse players are like fishermen — all liars."

"Won a lot of money lately?"

"I never remember winning but—"

We left assured that we'll never find that pot of gold at the Kentucky Derby.

The venture wasn't a complete loss, however. Thanks to GG, we've laid in a large enough stock of old racing forms to knock the edge off even the chilliest spring evening.

Last Saturday Opening For Boat Filing Copies

Saturday morning office hours for the Division of Watercraft at 1800 W. Fifth-av, will end Saturday.

In recent weeks the office has been kept open on Saturday mornings as a service to boaters who found it necessary to secure a duplicate copy of their previous boat and motor certificates so they might get their 1963 registration certificates.

Jewish Center Teams In Hospital Day Lineup

The Jewish Center will send two of its outstanding swimming groups to provide visitors to Hospital Day at the Chillicothe Veterans Administration Hospital Sunday with two pool exhibitions.

Mermaids of the Nereides Club will present a water ballet and Torpedoes Club members will demonstrate abilities that enable them to set new records at recent AAU meets.

The exhibitions are set for 1 and 2 p.m. Their performances will help focus public attention on the hospital's facilities for physical fitness as part of overall patient treatment programs.

Scottie Banquet May 20

Walnut Ridge will hold its All-Sports Dinner at the high school, Monday, May 20, at 6:30 p.m. The banquet will be sponsored by the Scottie Booster Assn. Guest speaker for the evening will be Hugh Hindman, OSU assistant football coach.

Jets Vs. Atlanta

The Columbus Jets' curernt two-game home stand closes Thursday evening, May 2, with a single game against Harry Walker's Atlanta Crackers at 8 p.m.

It is estimated 14,000 children have been born at the University of Arkansas Medical Center in Little Rock.

ACADEM-IC ADVANCEMENT—Academy baserunner Tim Beaua (left) pulls up at third base ahead of the tag of Canal Winchester third baseman Scott Guiler in sixth inning play of the Viking-Indian County League face off last week. Beaua advanced on a wild pitch when the catcher's throw to third was wide.

ONE OF THE six Whitehall Relay Queens, Sandy Sambrook, holds an armful of trophies that some 200 area high school track and fieldsters will compete for during this first-ever event at the Rams school Friday. With Sandy are Whitehall's senior hopes, including from left, miler Don Smith (a transfer from London High where he was Mid-Eight champion), hurdle, sprinter and broad jumper Clark Fuller and shot put and discus ace Mike Short.

First-Ever Whitehall Relays Expects Large Field Tomorrow

Whitehall track coach Pat McMillin has worked hard for his sport and its advancement.

He's taking about four giant steps forward Friday when he initiates that school's first-ever Whitehall Relays and features some of the top track talent from eight schools.

"I WAS AT the NCAA and AAU meets last year," McMillin related, "and I decided that track had to be built up in the Whitehall district."

As McMillin sees it now, there'll be upwards to 200 boys competing for a bushel-basket full of trophies. The schools to be represented include Bexley, Brookhaven, DeSales, Hartley, Gahanna, Walnut Ridge and Westerville.

The seven-year Ram track mentor contacted a host of local merchants in the Whitehall area and solicitated them to sponsor events and award trophies.

ANOTHER UNIQUE feature of the meet is that it'll be run under the lights. Field events will start at 6 p.m. with running events getting underway at 7:30 p.m.

There is a 50-cent admission price to all spectators.

Biggest competition should come from the large 26-man Gahanna squad. The Lions are favored to win the relay wing-ding what with shot putter Steeve Shaffer (who tosses 52 feet 5 inches) and their good overall balance in relay and field events.

ACTUALLY, THE shot put event should provide the most spectator interest with Shaffer competing against Whitehall's Mike Short who's no pill himself. He hurls 51 feet, 11 inches on good days.

The meet will show 18 events, including the regular competitive track categories along with special 440, shuttle hurdle and two-mile relay stanzas. There'll also be an eighth grade 880 relay.

Whitehall has selected six relay queens to present trophies, including Sandy and Sharon Sambrook, Charlotte Orr, Ruth Finley, Marlene Smith and Glenna Henson.

There will be no preliminary events. Each team was allowed to enter one boy in each bracket so that all runnings will be final.

CLARK TOP VAULTER . . .

East Sets Two Marks At Riverside; Lions Win

Two record shattering running victories by East and another top pole vault effort by Eastmoor's Jim Clark highlighted area cendermen's performances in the Riverside Relays won by host Central Friday.

The Pirates copped the Relays with a total of 38½ points as compared to third-place East's 27½ and sixth-place Eastmoor's 11 markers. Walnut Ridge collected six points for ninth place.

MARKS IN ALL seven of the track events fell by the wayside as Central (four), East (two) and West toured the oval in record times.

The Tigers stayed in the thick of the competition through the first four running events, winning both the shuttle hurdle relay (Martin, McClendon, Schoolfield and Godfrey) and the mile relay.

A six-year mark fell in the later event as Mike Gordon, John Bailey, Steve Robinson and Jim Zackery clipped almost two full seconds off the old mark with a 3:32.5 finish.

CLARK'S POLE vault effort Thursday went for 13'-7¾", less than two inches under the state mark. Eastmoor's best effort in the running events came in the runnerup finish in the distance medley relay, one of five wins by Central.

East had two second place finishes in the Friday track events in the 440 and 880 relay events.

Elsewhere around the area, Bexley maintained its unspotted cinder mark with a tight 63-55 verdict over Westerville.

THE LIONS weren't assured of victory until the final event when they copped the mile relay in 3:45.7 to pile up their winning margin.

Individual winners were Rick Harbold (high jump), Roger Williamson (high hurdles), Van Snider (440) and Tom Leukart (discus).

Bexley's win streak ended at seven Tuesday, however, as Worthington won, 80 2/3 - 37 1/3, despite Jay Maupin's 11¼ points.

DESALES EKED out a 53-52 margin over St. Charles to win the Hartley Invitational Saturday as the host Hawks finished in third place with 28 markers. Kirk Sharrock's 21 points sparked the winners.

In other area cinder action Saturday, Whitehall picked up eight points and Eastmoor two as Cleveland Glenville picked up the Bellaire Relay title with 42 points.

East scored three points to finish in a three-way tie for 11th place in the Springfield Relays won by Dayton Dunbar (39).

AREA BASEBALL BEAT

Eastmoor Tops City; Rams Edge Bexley

Prior to the opening of the '63 baseball season, a report out of Eastmoor indicated pessimism concerning the Warriors' chances for a City League pennant.

The report's prediction suggested that coach Marsh Mobberly's baseballers would be "lucky to break even" in the CL diamond race.

LEAGUE STANDINGS at press time indicate something entirely different. In fact, the club at the top of the loop heap is no other than the "break even" Warriors, sporting a 3-1 record.

Although the season is still a long way from completion, Eastmoor can strengthen its position with a win over co-leader Linden tomorrow on the Warrior diamond.

The week's wrapup found the Warriors splitting a pair in league competition while losing, 4-3, to Watterson in a non-league contest.

AQUINAS MADE the most of three hits off Jerry Myers to win, 2-1, with the help of three Warrior bobbles. But Eastmoor bounced back Friday to trounce Marion-Franklin, 10-3, thanks to eight runs in the first two innings and a combined one-hit mound performance by Doug Cromer and Myers.

Whitehall yielded the CBL lead to Grandview as the Bobcat batters got to Bill Dildine for 11 hits and a 5-1 win. The Rams bounced back Friday, however, to hand Bexley its first loop loss, 2-0, in the area's top diamond game.

JAY KETZMIER and Dildine of Whitehall hooked up with Bexley's Joel Brandt in an air-tight pitchers' battle that went 14 innings before the Rams could push across their winning runs.

Ketzmier had a no-hitter going until pitcher Brandt doubled with two gone in the sixth. Between them, the two Whitehall hurlers scattered six Lion hits.

It was a tough loss for Brandt, who fanned 21 batters and split up six Ram hits until the fatal 14th. In that frame, Larry Tedder, Dildine and pinch-hitter Bob Sherman singled, the former two scoring on a bunt that ended the three-hour marathon.

ELSEWHERE AROUND the City League, East won one while losing two, while Walnut Ridge split a pair. The light-hitting Bengals could collect only seven hits in losses to North (16-2) and Linden (3-0).

East managed only two more hits off Marion-Franklin but they were enough to provide a 2-1 win, both runs scored on Rollie Martin's two-bagger.

JOHN McQUAID and Jim Pyles teamed up to nab the Scotties' 5-3 win over then CL leader Central. McQuaid flipped a four hitter while Pyles pounded out three of W-R's eight bingles.

The Scots could manage only three hits total off South hurling Friday, however, dropping a 7-2 verdict to the Rebels.

THE AREA'S two Central Catholic League entries — St. Charles and Hartley — won a total of two games while losing three.

The Hawks gained a split on the week, toppling Watterson, 2-0, before losing a tight 3-0 decision to a tough Linden nine. Jack Diamond's four-hitter set the pace in the Watterson win.

The Cardinals pounded out 14 hits in a 10-2 win over DeSales but could manufacture only half that total while dropping a doubleheader to Lancaster Saturday, 4-0 and 7-1.

Bexley had the same hitting difficulty Saturday also, collecting only three in an 8-3 loss to visiting Huntington, W. Va.

ACADEMY DROPPED into the County League's second division with a triple loss during the week. The Viking batsmen could make only 11 hits in losses to Dublin (15-0), Hamilton Township (3-2) and Canal Winchester (6-1).

The Vikings' best effort came in the Hamilton game as Mike Leahy coasted along on a 2-0 lead for five innings. The Rangers applied the spoiler, however, in the sixth, coming up with three runs.

Hamilton Lanes Plan Fall Bowling Opening

Last week the Columbus City Council rezoned a tract of land at the northwest corner of Hamilton and Groveards for 50 new bowling lanes to be called Hamilton Lanes.

The new lanes are sponsored by a group of East Side businessmen to provide additional bowling facilities for the fast growing population in the Southeast section of the city.

The lanes will include a completely new type of pinsetter, sparemakers and tell-scores. Completion is anticipated early in the fall to accommodate bowlers for the '63-'64 season.

Anyone desiring information on the lanes should call 237-8475.

Frog Gone But Hawks Stalk Spring Scenery

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors By ROB COCHRAN

OBSERVED—Two ospreys circling over Big Darby Creek—a magnificent sight as the large hawks wheeled in a clear spring sky. These are often called fish hawks, for they eat dead fish they find along waterways. They are noted for harassing an eagle until it drops a fish it is carrying, and then the osprey steals the meal.

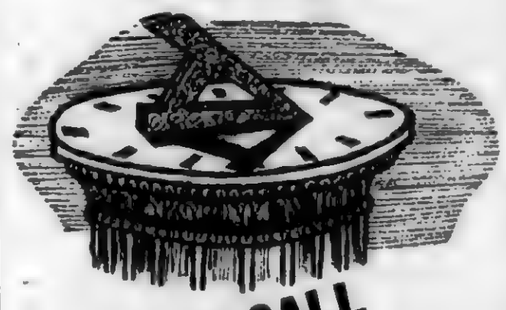
An osprey was reported earlier from Big Darby Park. These are probably transients and will not nest here. They like bigger waters.

OBSERVED: The torrential rains made local streams too muddy for anglers to gig suckers when the time was just right. Gigging and spearing rough fish is permitted, and the best time to get suckers is when they gather on riffles to spawn.

It still may not be too late to gather a mess, if the water clears. Suckers make a fine springtime meal. They should be filleted and scored, that is criss-cross cuts made across the fillets. Deep-frying then eliminates most of the bones.

TOLD ME: Time is here for finding sponge mushrooms. Also called morels, these tasty tid-bits often grow under dead elm or ash trees. Old apple orchards are also good prospecting places.

OBSERVED: Frog season closed, midnight Apr. 30, without much chance of catching bullfrogs. Apparently the cool weather kept them inactive, and I have not yet heard the booming voice of a granddaddy bullfrog. You will hear them soon, however, for spawning season is here. The season opens on frogs again June 15. The limit is 10 frogs per night.



TOLD ME: Boaters are out in numbers on local waters, outnumbering fishermen. The launching ramp at O'Shaughnessy Dam was crowded, and you had to wait 40 minutes to get your boat in the water last Sunday.

TOLD ME: A patent for the first water skis was granted in 1924 to Fred Waller, the same man who invented Cinerama. There must be a lesson here somewhere—maybe after a few excursions of water skiing the movies look pretty good as a pastime.

TOLD ME: The Cortland Line Co. writes that they have had a request from a lady in Vermont. She wants some of that "miracle additive" they have been applying to their Seven Star Monofilament. "My husband is out in the sun a lot and I'd like to feed him some so he won't get stiff, wiry and hard to manage."

OBSERVED: A car heading west on Route 40, pulling a camping trailer and hauling a boat on top. On the side was scrawled "California Or Bust." Sounds like a summer of fun.

Junior Achievers To Be Honored

An original poem will be recited by Beverly Jones, 603 E. Gates-st, at the Future Unlimited Banquet, Wednesday, May 8, at the Ohio Union honoring outstanding Junior Achievers in the Columbus South High School.

Approximately 1,000 persons are expected to attend the annual banquet during the annual banquet during which college scholarships, trophies, plaques and citations will be awarded to Junior Achievers with the best management, industrial and sales records in the local program.

"I DENY EVERYTHING" is the statement from Lt. Dana M. Lansing, left, of Moling and Associates Investigation and Guard Services, who agreed to be the "suspect" for a demonstration of the latest polygraph (lie detector) equipment in the Moling offices. "That's not true," said Alvin S. Kimball, behind desk, chief of Polygraph Section, Bureau of Criminal Identification, who acted as a consultant for the test. "Tell the truth," said W. Richard Moling, president of the investigation firm as he read the meter standing on the desk. "The lie detector doesn't lie."

If You're Going To Tell A Fib Don't Be Connected To Polygraph

It's almost impossible to beat the "lie box" anymore. A guy can't even move his finger without notifying the machine through a system of wires and tubes leading from his body to the polygraph.

One of the latest in the polygraph lie detectors was demonstrated by one of Ohio's leading experts on the subject in the office of Moling and Associates, Inc. Detective Agency, 2427 E. Main.

The Moling agency is adding the new machine to its already complete line of detective services.

W. Richard Moling, president of the firm, said "even our own guards will be tested every 90 days to determine their competency on the job. Each of our new applicants will undergo a lie detector test to establish his honesty and qualifications for a job with our agency."

During the demonstration of the lie box an expert tester explained how it works. Three things are tested, according to the expert. Tubes or wires are connected to the persons being tested and show responses to a question by respiration, blood pressure and perspiration.

"Each of these responses from a suspect can indicate whether or not he is telling the truth," according to the expert. "An operator can also tell if a suspect is under medication, tranquilizers or a stimulant by a lack of reaction," he added.

"While giving polygraph examination," he explained, "the tester has to practically keep one eye on the machine and one on the subject. Some persons try to "beat" the machine, for instance, by clenching their fists. Although certain lines of the machine's graph will indicate movement, a meter connected to the tester will tell it sooner and save the tester unnecessary observation problems."

It is often desirable to tape record questions and answers during a lengthy examination, so the tester can compare the conversation with the answer graph after the test.

"Putting a michophone and recording equipment in front of a subject causes problems," he said. "Therefore, the latest equipment has a microphone built right into it All that is necessary is to plug in a concealed recorder."

The latest in lie detector equipment is not necessarily a step toward making polygraph examination results admissable in court. The expert explained "many unqualified persons now give tests so that testing standards are not as stringent as they should be. Until high qualifications and licensing laws are set, polygraph will not be a court procedure."

Testing has other problems, too, involving mental capacity of some sumjects, who cannot take a test because the machine will not register properly.

The tester, who has given over 12,000 polygraph tests in 16 years in state law enforcement, pointed out, however, that polygraphs are not really "lie detectors." It has been his experience that polygraph tests "clear" over 65 per cent of those tested. The latest device promises to make it tougher for most felon suspects, because they are the ones who frequently try to "trick" the machine.

The new model of polygraph weighs less than 15 pounds, is fully transistorized and can be transported on a few seconds notice.

Now in full use by Moling and Associates, W. Richard Moling said he expects the new unit to be invaluable in crime detection and to clear any suspect who has been unjustly charged with committing a crime. In addition, Moling predicted, the polygraph will aid his company's service to its clients who often have crime problems for detectives to solve.

Tri State Meeting Promotes Sale Of Florida Development

Nearly 90 sales agency officials and sales personnel, representing the General Development Corp. in Ohio, Indiana and Pennsylvania, converged on Columbus for an all-day sales meeting Wednesday, Apr. 24.

Host for the meeting, called to present a merchandising program for the largest single offering of Florida homesites ever put on the market, was Columbus real estate man Marvin Yearke, and associates, local representative of General Development Corp.

During the meeting the importance of an honest approach to selling the offering of 25,000 homesites in the Gulf Section of Port Charlatte, Fla., was brought out. It was stressed that General Development Corp. is the largest and considered one of the most reputable community builders in America.

The tri-state meeting, which started 9 a.m., was held in the meeting rooms above the Florida Furniture Co., 229 S. Fourth-st. Also attending the meeting were executives of General Development Corp., from Miami, Fla.

Area Kiwanians In On 'Biggest' Interclub Ever Seen Locally

"The biggest operation of its kind" takes to the road at 6 a.m. Tuesday, May 7, bound for Windsor, Ont.

The "operation" is a mass interclub meeting by area Kiwanians with the Windsor Kiwanis Club.

At least 75 local Kiwanis members, in two buses, are expected to make the day-long trip that also includes an interclub with the Marion Town and Country Kiwanis Club on the return journey.

Sponsor of the trip is the West Franklin club, and organizer Ford Adam, secretary of the group, says it is the biggest interclub in local Kiwanis history.

The interclub is being made in conjunction with Canada—U.S. Goodwill Week, Adam said, and was intended originally as only a local club venture.

Other area clubs heard about the plans, though, and asked if they could go along.

The tally of representatives, as of last Tuesday was as follows: Ashville, four; Downtown, four; Grove City, five; London, two; Southern, four; Washington CH, seven; West Franklin, 22; West Jefferson, five; West Side seven; Northern, four; Eastern, four and Kenneth Weeks, District secretary.

The group will arrive about 11:30 a.m., have lunch with their hosts at the Prince Edward Hotel in downtown Windsor, then leave immediately after lunch for Marion.

Adam said the buses are scheduled to arrive in Marion about 5:30 p.m. for the 6 o'clock dinner meeting with Town and Country.

About 8 p.m., the local men will leave Marion and arrive at the Great Western Shopping Center around 9:30.

Adam estimated the cost per individual at about $10.

West Franklin is taking along a gavel for their Windsor counterparts, made from the famous Logan Elm, which bears U.S. — Canadian significance in history.

Movie-Famed Books Now At Shepard

Recently when "Mutiny on the Bounty," the screen adaptation of Nordhoff and Hall's famous novel, played in this area, the Shepard Branch of the Columbus Public Library built up a long waiting list for the book.

Another well-known classic, Tolstoy's "War and Peace," was widely requested when it was shown here.

"That little note at the beginning of the movie, 'Based on the novel by Ernest Hemingway or John Steinbeck or some other famous author,' almost always brings requests for the book," Librarian Mary Elizabeth Bird explained.

Other classics that have been filmed in recent years include "Of Human Bondage," "State Fair," "Barabbas," "The Raven," "A Farewell to Arms," "The Brothers Karamazov," "Moby Dick," and "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea."

A surge of interest in the books upon which they were based has also been brought about by such moving pictures as "The Longest Day," "Advise and Consent," "The Ugly American," "PT 109," "To Kill a Mockingbird," "The War Lover," "Guns of Navaronne" and "Nine Hours to Rama."

Plays that have been the basis for recent films and that can be found at the Shepard Branch at 2185 E. Fifth-av, are "The Music Man," "Raisin in the Sun," "West Side Story," "A Taste of Honey" and "Toys in the Attic."

LETTER TO EDITOR

To the Editor:

Some of the statements made in your paper last week under the heading of J. Craig Wright were only partial information about the property tax in Whitehall.

It is true that it costs $10.50 a year to pick up the rubbish from each living unit once a week. A living unit includes single homes as well as each unit in an apartment house. This cost is paid by the city.

Take my own home for an example. It's worth $15,000 and it's on the tax duplicate for $5,000 valuation. For each $1,000 valuation there is 90 cents that goes into the city's General Fund. This means that the city's General Fund gets five times 90 cents or $4.50 per year from my property tax. Yet it costs $10.58 per year for my rubbish collection.

The schools get $23.60 per $1,000 valuation. In my case they get $118 per year. I had five children in school. The school's operating cost is $322 for each pupil per year. The cost for five children to go to school for one year is $1610.

Someone has to pay the difference. Commercial, industrial and apartment property does this. Look at the 42-unit building on Yearling-rd and find out how many school children live there. None. This one apartment building will pay a total of $3,894 per year to the schools.

Our city services include police, fire, streets, garbage collection and street lights. If each resident of Whitehall had to pay for all these services and the schools with his property tax, nobody could afford to live in Whitehall.

If you are a member of the PTA check there yourself. Or call a member of the Board of Education. But get all the facts yourself. Then anyone can see why we have good schools and service and the lowest property tax rate in Franklin County.

(Signed) Raymond E. Shipley
Councilman-at-large
City of Whitehall

Gets Badge

Army Pfc. Roy A. Karnes, whose wife, Judith, lives at 1082 Eastmoor, recently was awarded a mechanic's badge for attaining a high degree of skill in the maintenance and operation of motor vehicles while assigned to the 78th Engineer Battalion in Germany. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Karnes, live at 1709 Barnet-rd.

Shot at 'Party'

Troy Edward Walton, 33, 247 Detroit-av, was shot to death by a friend who was "just trying to scare" the victim in the home of Robert Coger, 36, of 768 Leonard-av. Police arrested Lindsey Jenkins, 37, 1478 Bryden-rd, who admitted the shooting a short time after the Sunday afternoon incident.

★ IN THREE WHITEHALL WARDS . . . . ★

To Vote Or Not Was Dem Plight

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Whitehall Democrats, obviously not bewitched, were nonetheless bothered and bewildered Tuesday.

They're plight was at the polls in three Whitehall Wards (1, 3 and 4) during the recent May primary elections.

Eastern Review sources indicated Tuesday that many Democrats were "misinformed and uninformed" in the political races.

Reports said that polling officials in the three districts were giving out incorrect information, despite the fact that spot checks by this newspaper failed to find any discrepencies.

The problem in the three wards was that there were no Democratic candidates on the ballot. Dems did, anyway, go to the polls in these areas and were told that they should vote regardless. Naturally, the only names on the ballot were Republican.

County election spokesmen reported that Democrats in those three wards need not have gone to the polls at all unless they were willing to swear that they voted at least 50 per cent Republican in the last election.

Democrats didn't have to worry about loosing their election standing through failure to register, as reports said many believed.

The confusion in Whitehall did spark comment from Jerry Ryan, Franklin County Democratic chairman. He

People In Dark On Amendment Mayor Believes

"Traditionally, when people do not understand an amendment, they vote against it." So said a disappointed Columbus Mayor W. Ralston Westlake of the defeated "franchise grant" charter amendment, defeated by an 81-vote margin out of 26,305 total votes.

The charter amendment was backed by the mayor as a means of expanding services and facilities of the municipal light plant. The expansion was aimed at providing Columbus with additional revenue to illuminate the two-thirds of city streets now without lights.

"It will certainly make it more difficult to expand our street lighting program," Mayor Westlake said. He added: "I definitely feel that it was such a complicated problem that the people did not understand it."

The mayor expressed satisfaction with passage of the second charter issue. The amendment called for equalizing assessments between petition signers and non-signers when both groups benefit from sidewalk, sewer or water main improvements.

The issue, solidly endorsed, won by a comparatively slim margin, 13,937 to 12,324.

Mayor Westlake cited the thin "easement equalizer" win as another example of people voting "no" when they do not understand an amendment.

The mayor said he had "no statement at this time" on what effect the election might have on the pre-election offer of the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. to reduce electric rates by $3.5 million in exchange

Eyebrows High Over Garbage In Whitehall

By FRANK RYAN

The City of Whitehall eyes a garbage bill.

The question is whether the tab is in the $1,100 neighborhood, or the $11,000 range.

The answer hinges on the number of additional living units in the city since the present garbage collection contract was effected in Jan., 1961.

The garbage bill issue also raises several other questions for consideration by council members. Mayor Walter B. Moling is known to have asked council to study garbage collection alternatives in detail. The advisability of the city going into the garbage collection business is being considered, but does not have enthusiastic support at this time.

According to sources closest to the current issue of city fees for garbage collection, the two-year increase in residential units has been 89, or 697, or 1,126.

Service Director Robert Mickey says he arrived at the 89 figure in Dec., 1962, and quoted building records as his source. The 697 figure was quoted in a Nov. 27, 1962, letter to Mickey from Clyde North, of North Haulage.

The increase of 1,126 units, the most recently quoted figure, was advanced by Whitehall Attorney James Maxwell, Jr., who is representing the haulage firm. In an Apr. 17 letter to Mickey, Maxwell cited an annual average increase of 563 living units over the past two years in presenting a bill totaling $9,114 through Mar. 31, 1963. Maxwell contends that North Haulage is being currently underpaid at

$160 At Stake In Confederate Jackpot

This newspaper—the very one you are holding—may be worth $160.

One—just one—of the 75,000 Hartley Newspapers that came off the press this week was stamped with the "Confederate 5" emblem. Clearly visible, it is hand stamped in a brightly colored ink, and appears in one of the ads.

Here's the payoff: if you find this "5" it's worth $5 in "Confederate" cash, good for $5 worth of merchandise from any advertiser appearing in a Hartley Newspaper during the week the finder wishes to spend it. If you are a paid subscriber, its value zooms to the jackpot of $160.

But that's not all! Twenty of the Hartley Newspapers were stamped with the numeral "1" like this:

They're in colored ink, too, and are worth $1 in trade to the lucky finders.

If you find any of these emblems, take or mail the entire page to 2465 W. Broad-st. It must be received before noon, Monday, May 13.

Three Hartley Newspaper readers decreased last week's winnings by three "Confederate" dollars. Winners of one "Confederate" dollar were Edwin Powers, 294 S. Richardson-av; Mrs. Caroline Battinger, 600 Greenlawn-av, and Mrs. Edna Minshall, 91 N. Ogden-av. This means the 22 "Confederate" dollars not claimed in last week's contest have been added to last week's jackpot of $138 to make the new total of $160.

Hartley Newspaper employes and carriers or members of their families are not eligible to participate in this contest. The finder of the "5" emblem must take the paper to the Hartley Newspaper office in person to claim his winnings. For further information call the Hartley Newspapers office, BR. 4-1155.

First Night!

Mrs. E. A. Jones, 214 S. Central-av, sold all the articles she advertised the first night with a recent fast-action Hartley Newspapers' Want Ad. Why not look around for items you no longer can use. Sell them fast and get extra cash with a result-producing Hartley Want Ad. Dial BR. 4-1155 now.

Election Ends As Predicted

Pre-election sages emerged unscarred and unbowed from a Columbus Primary Election that followed prognostications right down the line.

The predicted number of voters reported to the polls. The eight favored council candidates advanced to the November run-offs. And the charter amendment issues proved every bit as confusing as was forecast. (The "franchise grants" amendment lost by 82 votes, while the amendment to equalize improvement assessments won by 1,613 votes.)

Here is the order of finish for the 10 council candidates:

Mrs. Golda May Edmonston (incumbent council president), 17,964; Ronald E. DeVore (I), 17,007; Roland A. Sedgwick (I), 16,966; Harvey H. Alston, 16,868; Rev. Russell M. Jones, 13,647; William P. Hoermle (I), 13,445; Maurice D. Portman, 9,296; Joseph Jennings Murphy, 8,001; Carl G. Thompson, 6,212; and Ronald Tuggle, 4,957. Total unofficial votes count was 34,982.

All excepting Thompson and Tuggle will go on the ballot for the November nonpartisan election to select the four councilmen.

The council results foretell a hard, uphill struggle by Columbus Democrats to maintain or improve their present representation on council. The four top finishers are Republican-supported candidates, and there is a 3,221-vote margin between the fourth and fifth finishers in the primary race.

The four candidates selected in November will join three members whose terms run through 1965. They are William R. Fornof (D), Tom Moody (R), and Robert T. Southwick (R).

Goal—An 'Avenue Of Flags'

Have you done your part to prepare an "avenue of flags" for Armed Forces Day, Saturday, May 18?

Dozens of Columbus residents have started the ball rolling by ordering their flags early and taking advantage of the savings being offered by Hartley Newspapers.

The idea of a flag-filled neighborhood for patriotic holidays has caught like wildfire and orders for the big 3x5 foot, cotton, colorfast flags have literally poured into the Hartley Newspaper office since the plan was suggested last week.

Anyone can do their share in preparing the "avenue of flags" by checking the advertisement in this newspaper and then ordering the complete flag kit, valued at $3.50, which is delivered along with a one-year sub-

Whitehall Solons Nix K of C Plans

Whitehall Council shook its head Tuesday night to plans for building a new K of C Hall within the city's limits following protests by residents.

The plan for the $55,000 project was listed on the agenda both as a public hearing and also for a first reading on the rezoning ordinance with an emergency clause.

Edward Thompson, making the hall plea, said that his group had "scoured Whitehall looking for land within a reasonable price range."

He added:

"We even ran into some ground that they wanted $65,000 an acre for. They're waiting for apartment developers, that's all."

The site finally chosen was on the south side of E. Mound-st, west of Beechwood-rd. The three lots there were estimated at 181x150-feet in area.

Residents petitioned council against the hall's construction, maintaining that the location was a "strictly residential" district.

Homer R. Powers, 3855 E. Mound-st, acting spokesman for the residents, claimed "we don't hardly feel that this is the kind of organization we want in our community. We've all got children." Powers offered the opinion that there would be too much "partying" at the location.

Another resident, A. J. Anthony, 1035 Beechwood-rd, said he had no complaint against the K of C and its work, but felt that a hall at this site would be "detrimental because of increased traffic."

Actually, the ordinance was on the agenda for only its first reading but Councilman Raymond Shipley said he had "plenty of time to study the ordinance" and urged council to act on it immediately.

Councilman James Toomey disqualified himself from the vote since he was a K of C member and the ordinance was given unanimous defeat.

In other action:

• Mayor Walter Moling surprised observers by withdrawing his ordinance to establish a clerk in his office at $2,475

SPRING CLEANING? CALL WHITEHALL FD

Whitehall residents engaged in Spring cleaning may run across items no longer useful, but items that would be welcomed by the Whitehall Fire Department.

FAREWELL TO FARKAS

EASTMOOR HIGH student Jim Farkas, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Farkas, 2714 Talisman ct, waves good-bye prior to his departure for Ichikawa, Japan, as a participant in the American Field Service Program. He'll spend nine weeks in the Far East on the same basis as foreign exchange students in this county. He leaves Monday, May 27.

WHAT TO DO WITH THE KELLEY MANSION? HERE'S A FEW SUGGESTIONS . . .

NOTING THAT the Kelley Mansion site in Wolfe Park was creating somewhat of an eyesore, pretty local model Sue Skeen thought she might brighten up the place. What to do with a restoration project that hasn't gotten off the ground? Well, Sue finds that rock slabs make an excellent dressing table (extreme left). Or, the heaps of granite provide a perfect setting for a game of cops and robbers (center picture). But, outside of that, there really isn't much that the project can be used for. The Kelley home was torn from it's original location on E. Broad-st (near old Veterans Memorial) last summer and promoters aren't really sure what will happen to it now that it's been moved to the Wolfe Park site on E. Broad st near James-rd. Mrs. Dixie Miller, president of the board of trustees, said last week that "any of these projects take longer than overnight to complete." And, Columbus Service Director Ernest Stork still has high hopes. Meanwhile, however, it remains a weed haven and in this condition for nearly a year.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

To the Editor:

First I would like to thank you for the interesting subject you devoted your front page to last week.

I am sure you realize these apartment buildings should be of interest and concern to anyone trying to build a future here in Whitehall.

During the Lamby Lane controversy . . . around two hundred signatures were given to council. These people felt Whitehall has more than enough apartments now.

This city is not so large and many more of these buildings go up we will be living in what will seem like an army barracks instead of a nice residential area, which is what a lot of us believed we were buying in when we bought our homes here.

It was good to read Craig Wright's thoughts on this and we hope he will not let Mr. Maxwell (Asked for Wright's resignation from a Planning and Zoning Commission post: Ed.) or anyone else pressure him out of his job and what he believes in. A lot of residents feel the same way.

Think Neighbors Lack Understanding

To the Editor:

I think it is time someone wrote something on a subject I am sure is close to every parent of a boy 10-14 years of age. It is the problem of what to do with these boys who love to play ball, baseball, basketball, etc., and then have someone complain because they are too noisy or the ball rolls into the yard by accident or they are afraid their children may get hurt. They seem to live with these words, "Don't do it, I'll call the police," on the tip of their tongues.

These people either have children too small to do anything but stay in the yard or whose children are grown and gone. These people need only wait a few years to find out just what the parents of boys who must play ball and yet have no place in which to do it, go through.

We do not wish to send these boys away from home, where we cannot see them or know what they are doing. With so much vandalism around schools and empty lots it is not safe. So we try to keep them at home. But then the so-called good, upstanding neighbors (we use the term loosely) become very irate and call the police.

I am not objecting to anyone having nice lawns, lovely flowers and such. That is their right. But, it is also the right of these boys to be able to play in their own yards without being cursed, threatened and chased away and I for one am going to fight these narrow-minded people for the right to which these boys are entitled and for which we are buying property of our own.

If I am stepping on toes as the saying goes, let these people think about this: The parents of five, six, seven and eight-year olds who do not need anything but a tricycle, kiddie car or beach-ball to keep them busy I have only to say to them: "Your day is coming, and when it does, I hope you have better and more understanding neighbors than I."

Mrs. D. Merrick,
Whitehall.

Apartments Still Causing Comments

To the Editor:

On a still night any citizen in Whitehall can step out into his yard and almost hear the murmur of discontent of the unhappy people. If he raises his eyes to the skyline he will see the menancing silhouettes of apartments that are rapidly closing in upon his home and his family.

Almost a year ago Jim Toomey, the only Democrat on council, heard the murmur of discontent; he recognized the menace and moved to help the people. He advocated and finally achieved the repeal of CAO (commercial-apartment-office) zoning. He would have done much more had he had any support on council.

The Republican councilmen no longer, consider themselves of the people. They have placed themselves above the people, forgetting their common origin. Group after group of Whitehall citizens have appeared before them protesting apartments. The councilmen listen because the law compels them to, then they pass the rezoning over the objections of the people. The councilmen say that apartments bring more money into the city. Serious-minded citizens of both parties question this. Will this increase in taxes be enough to pay for the additional services required by the apartments? They are also concerned about overloading our present sanitary sewers.

There may not be many children in these apartments now, but as they age and become harder to fill the owners will rent to large families as they do in all run-down areas, thus overloading our schools.

Apartments also bring in hundreds of cars that add to our traffic pattern and threaten our children.

The Democrats feel that the real issue here is not one of money, but what the people of Whitehall want. What gaineth Whitehall if we do have a little more money for the officials to spend and a city full of unhappy people? This contemptuous disregard for the uphappy citizen has filtered down from the council to some of our city departments. This attitude places Whitehall in the ridiculous, un-American position of "Government versus the People" instead of "For the People." The Democrats would like to give back to the people their rightful voice in their own government concerning apartments and all other issues, thereby restoring peace and harmony to our City.

Lewis Oliver, president
Whitehall Democratic Club

County To Get Six Percent Of State's New Road Work

Pearl Masheter has announced a five-year state-wide road building program calling for total expenditures of more than $1.7 billion dollars.

Franklin County will share in allocation of projects to the extent of about $123.6 million, or more than six percent of the statewide total.

The programmed highway projects for Franklin County will include a heavy concentration in interstate construction for which the federal government pays 90 percent of the cost.

During the biennium beginning July 1, 1963 the program calls for construction contracts covering 14.64 miles of interstate at a total cost of $42,468,000. The five-year interstate program calls for contracting of 63.75 miles at a total estimated cost of $123,594,000.

The Franklin County program also includes 6.45 miles of non-interstate work within municipalities at an estimated cost of $5,034,000, and 8.08 miles of rural road construction at an estimated $3,044,000 total cost.

State Highway Department programming indicates contracts for all Franklin County interstate construction by the end of fiscal year 1970, (June 30, 1970.)

The United Nations admitted 16 new nations to membership Dec. 14, 1955.

Trucks Are Target Of Protests

A handful of E. Livingston-av residents are carrying on a project to ban trucks from that street between College-av and Hamilton-rd.

Represented by attorney Edward J. Cox, the residents took their plea recently to the city's Traffic Commission with little result.

The protests are centered around legal requirements regulating trucks traveling on state routes and other items such as "wrecking streets," noise and speed.

"It's rather obvious that the trucks are bypassing E. Main-st so that they can make better time," Cox told Commission members.

Traffic Chairman Bill Neno told the group that the commission was merely an "advisory body" and "could not actually say whether E. Livingston-av shall be or shall not be a truck route."

To Be Honored

Attorney Luther L. Boger, 371 Country Club-rd, Whitehall, is one of 34 lawyers to be honored by the Ohio State Bar Association for long-time service to the legal profession at the May 17 banquet marking the group's 83rd year.

Liebenthal, Kans., gets its name from the German meaning "Love Valley."

STEADY, OLD GIRL. Sgt. Robert Potteiger holds aloft one of the great horned owls that he has imported to Lockbourne AFB. Discouraged with more conventional methods of pigeon control in Jumbo hangar, the sergeant is babysitting "John and Jim," or more recently "Joan and Jim," with fond hopes that their presence will discourage doves from homesteading in the rafters of the five-story structure.

LAFB SERGEANT BECOMES HORNED OWL NURSE MAID

By JANE ROBINSON

John and Jim just don't give a hoot.

But Sgt. Robert Potteiger certainly does.

He is head of production control at Lockbourne AFB and as his problems began to pile up when literally thousands of pigeons decided to roost in Jumbo hangar, he ceased to be a bird-lover.

It isn't that the cooing is objectionable, but not one of the uninvited guests are housebroken.

His commanding officer didn't quite think the sergeant had flipped when Potteiger requested a couple of great horned owls, but he had a reasonable doubt.

It seems that last winter a snowy owl dropped in the hangar for a winter rest, and the pigeons took off like big fat birds do.

They did not look forward to being the entree on any owl's menu.

Until the weather became warmer, and the wise old owl problems were solved.

With the ingenuity of the Air Force he requested a couple of great horned owls which he would nurture and lure into taking up permanent residence in the hangar.

The Ohio Division of Wildlife sent John and Jim, and the sergeant began his additional duties of nursemaid to a couple of real odd-bills.

Being hangar mates with jet bombers could be upsetting, so Potteiger built a bungalow high in the rafters to confine the pair until they become acclimated.

Knowing that many animals can be tamed by a free handout, the sergeant appealed to the boys in rodent control to save him a few live rats a day. These his charges polish off with baleful looks at their benefactor.

Rapidly becoming an authority on the life and loves of an owl, Potteiger is considering renaming John, Joan. Joan's lighter plumage is one of the indications that makes re-naming advisable.

Delighted with the prospects on increasing his flock, Potteiger cannot be blamed for hoping the creatures are self-supporting before there are little mouths to be fed.

The job of feeding baby birds is a full-time job, and Potteiger still has a job in running the hangar.

This week the "owl man," as he has been dubbed by his men, is busy building a roost over the shining hulks of the jets.

"I hope they will get turned around right and sleep during the day and swoop around scaring pigeons at night," he explained.

After all, it can be a little disconcerting for a jet mechanic to be dive bombed by a screeching taloned nightmare zeroing in at about 35 miles per hour.

Though Joan has a rather appealing look (if you go for bright yellow eyes and a beak to match), Joe is an old pirate with raw malevolence in his eye.

The men aren't afraid to handle these two characters—with asbestos gloves.

In the meantime, Potteiger claims he's "having a ball." Let's hope that ball doesn't bounce the wrong way, and the owls take to the woodland in preference to the Welfare State they are now enjoying.

There's always a few rugged individualists left, and Joe looks as if he's just such a bird. But maybe the love of a good woman and family responsibilities will tie him down.

SENSENBRENNER TELLS DEMS:

'Put 'Umph' In Triumph'

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Former Columbus Mayor Jack Sensenbrenner urged Democrats to "find the 'umph' in 'triumph' all over again."

He spoke during the Franklin County Jefferson-Jackson banquet Thursday night, sponsored by the Franklin County Young Democratic Club. Sensenbrenner (a candidate again in the mayoralty race) told some 500 party members that they "have to be more active in Democratic circles."

He added:

"It's time we break some big windows in our souls and adhere to the three 'D's in the Democratic party: Decision, Discipline and Dedication."

Sensenbrenner told the crowd that they should, at least, "get on their telephones" to spread the Democratic word. "I'm not everybody," he said, "but I am somebody. I can't do everything but I can do something."

The speaker warned against "petty jealousies" within the party and theorized that the Dems "cannot move forward with small thinking. We must disagree agreeably," he said.

In other activity, County Engineer Guy Elbin was selected as the first-ever life member in the Young Democratic Club.

Elbin confirmed reports that he would be a candidate in the upcoming election despite rumors to the contrary.

The 72-year-old politician said that he's "not on cane or crutches yet" and that after next year's election he'll "probably come back for more."

The evening's principal speaker, Murphy D. Lincoln (president of Nationwide Insurance Co.), was made the second life member.

Lincoln

Lincoln pointed out that hunger ("for food, land and self-respect") is the world's worst enemy today.

"Satisfy this hunger," Lincoln believes, "and the menaces of the world will disappear like magic. Fail and we'll be buried in a nuclear war."

Rather than a pro-Democratic approach, Lincoln stated that "regardless of party affiliation, the peoples of the world should work together for the good of all.

"There is a tremendous challenge for the young people to do things in America that have never been done before," the insurance executive pointed out. "The Communists are working harder at what they're after than the people of the free world."

The traditional "Outstanding Young Democrat" award this year went to Al Kauffman. He is club treasurer this season and served as vice-president last year.

County Treasurer Newton A. Thatcher, who first came to the court house in 1906 to watch his father who was a reporter for a local newspaper, added a note of humor regarding party fund donations.

Referring to the fact that the new Franklin County Dem Chairman is Jerry F. Ryan, Thatcher proposed that fund donations be referred to as "Jerry-Toll" to "help keep away that tired feeling."

The Franklin County Young Democratic Club Received word Sunday that it received first place in Ohio for participation in the recent state convention in Warren, O.

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

When Freezing Meat At Home--Be Careful

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:
Vegetables — Homegrown asparagus, potatoes, celery, sweet corn, carrots, lettuce
Fruits—Bananas, cooking apples, local rhubarb
Meats and Poultry—Chuck roasts, steak "specials," ham, pork shoulder cuts, fryers, large eggs
Other Foods—Dairy products, canned tomato products, canned peaches.

"We are purchasing a side of beef. Should we have it 'quick frozen' at the locker plant, or can I do this in our newly purchased home freezer?" This is a question often asked at this season when families are taking advantage of the plentiful beef supply to restock their freezers.

Mrs. Franks

The answer is, by all means have it quick-frozen at the locker plant (usually included in the cost of processing). This holds true for a quarter of beef as well as for a side. Home freezers do not have the capacity to freeze such quantities of meat fast enough. If the meat is not frozen fast it will not hold its original quality in the freezer.

Dr. R. D. VanStavern, Extension Specialist, Animal Science, O.S.U., explains it in this way. Quick-freezing causes the natural juices of the meat to be frozen in small ice crystals within the muscle fibers. The small ice crystals will not rupture the musce, so quick-frozen meat will thaw with a minimum of drip-loss. On the other hand, meat frozen slowly will have large ice crystals, the natural juices will be drawn from the muscle and there will be a correspondingly large drip-loss when thawed.

Now, if you are buying extra cuts—for exampe, steaks or chucks on "special"—that's different. Small quantities of meat will freeze rapidly in the home freezer.

Two things are important: (1) Keep the air out . . . keep the moisture in . . . by proper wrapping. (2) Freeze the meat fast and hold it at zero degree Fahrenheit or below until used.

So, as soon as you get meat home from the market, remove the store wrapping, wrap it properly for freezing, quick-freeze it and store it where the temperature remains steady at zero degrees F. or below.

The wrapping is important but not difficult. A good laminated freezer paper or heavy duty foil will do a good job. Use the "drug store" or the "butcher wrap." More expensive, but also good, is a plastic freezer bag. Just slip the cut of meat into the bag, squeeze out all the air and seal.

The importance of holding meat at zero degrees F. until it is used cannot be over emphasized. If you own a good home freezer you have no worries on that score, but if you are using a refrigerator-freezer combination check the temperature with a portable thermometer. If the frozen-food section does not hold zero or below, you are not really equipped to store meats for extended periods of time.

Remember—in general—the quality of meat is not improved by freezing, but it can be lowered considerably by improper freezing and storing.

IT'S THE CUT

There just doesn't seem to be any one hairstyle that is flattering to virtually all women.

A coiffure must be designed individually for the shape of a woman's face and her features. It must emphasize all your good points and diminish the unflattering ones.

An ingenious haircut is the first consideration for your new coif. It can defeat humility, rain and even the steam from your bath. The set may loosen but the cut will keep it flattering.

Let us cut and shape your hair. We have the right know-how to create your individual coif. Iva's Beauty Salon, 3978 E. Broad Street, Columbus Town and Country Shopping Center. BE. 5-5474.

pointed out how misunderstandings could arise since Whitehall carries on a "partisan" election under the Ohio Election Code.

Columbus, on the other hand, operates under its City Charter and conducts "non-partisan" elections.

"As soon as we heard about it," Ryan said, "we sent people out to have the booth officials cautioned. We tried to prevent too much of it from happening."

Result-wise in the single Democrat race, Henry J. Maxfield took the Second Ward nomination from Mrs. Idolla Keller, 51 to 49.

In other election results:

Biggest upset was in the Fourth Ward race where Republican Thomas B. Studebaker dumped incumbent Councilman Darrell Todd, 100 to 76.

Republicans also upset incumbent Councilman Charles Kibler in favor of Roger R. Stanley, 41 to 48, for the Second Ward nomination.

In the council-at-large race, James W. Cruse lost to incumbent Republicans Linn Hiatt, Kenneth McIntosh and Raymond Shipley. Cruise garnered 266, Hiatt 405, McIntosh 411 and Shipley 415.

Running unopposed were Whitehall Mayor Walter B. Moling, Treasurer Francis E. Shaefer, Ward One's Lester K. Ballenger, Ward Three's John Bishop and Council President Walter Siemer.

Besides the Maxfield-Keller Democratic race, unopposed candidates included:

Council president hopeful Robert S. Garnon, treasurer hopeful John H. Ramsey, Whitehall Solicitor Paul J. Haytcher, Ward One candidate Hugh T. Parker, Ward Three aspirant James M. Toomey, Ward Four's Gilbert H. O'Shaughnessy and at-large candidates Clarence E. Leeson, Jr., Marvin H. Levine and Loren S. Mason.

Incumbent Mayor Moling polled a token vote of 511. He will go against William H. Holzhause, an independent, in November.

a year. He had initiated the ordinance about a month ago. He gave no reason for his action.

• Heard Council President Walter Siemer report that he was "preparing an ordinance for the next meeting" making it unlawful for residents to have "trash" in their yards. "This includes old autos," he said, "if they don't have new registrations."

• Passed an ordinance appropriating $1,050 to the secretary of Civil Service fund.

• Gave first reading to an ordinance regulating licensing of pool and billiard games.

• Passed a resolution appointing an assessment equalization board for the improvement of Collingwood-av from E. Main-st to E. Broad-st.

• Okayed a resolution to improve Hamilton-rd by constructing an eight-inch sanitary sewer from Poth-rd 380 feet northeast and 1,190 feet north and an eight-inch water main from Poth-rd 1,500 feet northeast.

This is to serve the new Seyfert Potato Chip plant which is expected to have a payroll of $300,000. Seyfert representatives got the royal welcome by Siemer as "Whitehall's newest industry."

• Heard Mayor Moling appoint George Burdis, 4149 Powell-av, to a five-year term on the city's recreation board.

WHATEVER LOLA (Leany Schottenstein) wants, she's obviously came to the right place. That's Gene Gerrard in the background who plays Satan in the upcoming Gallery Players production of "Damn Yankees" at the Jewish Center.

BEST EVER?

'Damn Yankees' Opens At Center On May 18

There's a rumor currently circulating through the East Side that the Gallery Player's production of "Damn Yankees" will be the greatest thing to hit Columbus since the sesquicentennial.

There's a second rumor circulating saying that the Gallery Players started the first one.

Regardless, the musical does promise to be one of the finest shows ever offered within the four walls of the Jewish Center, 1125 College-av, and that's saying a mouthful, too.

The show opens Saturday evening, May 18, with additional performances on May 19, 22, 23, 25 and 26.

"Damn Yankees" tells an amusing tale of a middle-aged baseball fan driven to desperation by the consistently poor record of his home town team, the Washington Senators. For six months of the year he's a good husband and a good citizen, but when the baseball season starts, he can only rage and fume with frustration.

One night when the Senators lose again, he says bitterly to his wife — who is good-natured enough not to be listening — that he'd give his soul if he could get in there and win some games for his team.

Whereupon up pops the Devil to take up his offer. In a flash, the overweight middle-aged citizen is converted not only to youth, but to a sensational batting invincibility. Lucifer quickly gets him on the Washington team, and immediately that dreary outfit starts climbing up in the standings to take the pennant from the unbeatable Yankees.

What made this rollicking, hilarious story appeal to New York audiences who didn't necessarily care for baseball (as well as to London audiences who couldn't understand baseball at all) was that the diamond-action is only a background for the Faustian tale.

The universal appeal of the show came from the fact that the supernaturally - endowed young athelete misses the home and wife he had left behind for long, ball-hitting glory. To foreclose the mortgage on the fellow's soul, the Devil calls in and assistant a phenomenal expert at home-wrecking, to be acted in the Gallery Players production by Lenny Schottenstein. She is directed by Old Scratch to use all her seductive powers on taking the ball-player's mind off his wife and home.

This agent is at Satan's command because she, too, had sold her soul to him, in an exchange of ugliness for beauty. When she shows signs of disobedience, the Devil makes her sit in a corner till she thinks up three dirty tricks to play on human beings.

The mischievous Mephisto is played by Gene Gerrard and the rejuvenated baseball addict is to be played by Frank Johnson. Among others in the large cast are Jean Westrick, Larry Kent, Alvin Beck, Allen Gundersheimer, Jr., Eddie Kaye, Abe Green, Julie Vogel, Julian Barnett, Thelma Nutis, Marilyn Samelson, Rosa Kerstein, Bea Roth, Gil Parish, Hy Copeland, Gail Ruben and Marv Nesson.

Two of the songs of "Damn Yankees" which remained for long periods on the Hit Parade are "Whatever Lola Wants," the seductive siren-song to be warbled and danced by Miss Schottenstein as the Devil's handmaiden, and "You Gotta Have Heart," the slogan of the baseball players.

Its production here is under the direction of Harold M. Eisenstein. Choreographer is Rick Norris. Dave Angus is musical director, and Alvin Beck is handling vocal direction.

Boy Scout News

"Ropes, Spars and Conservation" was the theme of the White Oaks District spring camporee, which was held May 3, 4 and 5 at the W. Bale farm north of Columbus.

A record total of 609 boys and leaders attended the camporee. This was the largest participation for any camporee ever held in the Central Ohio Council. Troops taking part were 68, 71, 107, 135, 166, 195, 234, 270, 271, 274, 278, 288, 326, 235, 367, 369, 370, 373, 379, 422 and Posts 234, 277 and 369.

Following the theme of the overnight, the main activities on Saturday afternoon pertained to lashing. Troop 68 built a fire tower, 166 constructed a monkey bridge, 135 built a one-man bridge, and 107 lashed a carry-over. The rest of the troops built foot bridges, tables, and there was even some abstract art.

The feature of the campout was the Order of the Arrow tapout on Saturday evening at the campfire. Fifty boys and leaders were recognized as candidates for membership in the order. A main part of the campfire featured Indian dancing by Troop 107.

On Saturday, May 11, the Webeloes in the Cubbing program of the White Oaks District will hold their annual Webeloes Day.

This program is for Cub Scouts over 10 years old, and their dads. It will take place from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the picnic grounds at Camp Lazarus.

The expected 75 to 80 boys will participate in the following three areas: Demonstration, Competitive Events and Projects.

ENTERTAINMENT? TRY FISHING . . .

YEP, THEY'RE biting and although he may not be very big and he may not be much of a scrapper, the first catch of the Spring is a magnificent fish just the same. He's even worth showing off to big sister. Who knows? Fishing may even replace night clubbing for amusement — or, night baseball, even.

the rate of $1.055 each month.

Maxwell backed up his figures with an affidavit signed by Richard A. Hyatt, 1025 Westphal-st, and Charles R. Kibler, 4290 Yearling-ct. Hyatt is a former councilman and Kibler, the incumbent second ward councilman.

They attest in the affidavit that they conducted a survey of Whitehall living units on Apr. 15, and found the following:

That there were 3,512 private homes and 2,664 apartment dwellings, for a total of 6,176 living units. The survey, the two men testified, did not include trailer residences or motel rentals.

Maxwell ascribed the discrepancies between his figures and others presented to the fact that "nobody ever went out and counted." The survey, he alleged, is the first actual count.

"North Haulage Co., has done a terrific job," Maxwell says, and adds: "I think they have a dirty job, and are doing it well. I think they should be paid what the city agreed to pay them."

The contract with the North firm, prepared by Maxwell when he was Whitehall city attorney, was based on a beginning figure of 5,050 living units. The contract directed that the service director determine the number of living units in December of each year, with the resultant figure used in setting compensation for the ensuing calendar year.

The Dec., 1961, survey was not made, Mickey reported. Maxwell's letter stated that his client (North) had been paid only the initial compensation of $4,500 a month during 1962.

According to Maxwell's letter, North should have received $4,095.57 a month during 1962. He also claims an underpayment of $1,055.84 for each of the first three months of 1963.

In the Nov. 27, 1963, letter to Mickey, North had asked for an increase of $300 a month, retroactive to Nov., 1962.

The matter now goes to Paul Haytcher, Whitehall city attorney, for a legal opinion of the city's liabilities. Final action rests with council.

SERIOUS THOUGHT GOES INTO TYPICAL SEMINAR AT WESTGATE SCHOOL.

School Seminars Good Idea

Other users of tax money, from federal on down to local level, should take a cue from the Columbus Board of Education. They should encourage neighborhood seminars on program and finance similar to the three weekly discussions now being held in every school in Columbus.

More than 4,000 responsible citizens—men and women representing the homemakers, industry, labor and the professions—sat down the evening of May 1 to make serious appraisal of our school operation. Two hours were devoted to an analysis of "What The School Dollar Buys Today." This week's topic is "Where the School Dollar Comes From," and the series will conclude on May 15 with "Where Do We Go From Here?"

The seminars serve a good purpose. Public misconceptions of the schools and their problems are cleared up and good suggestions are made which should certainly help shape future planning. School Board President Paul R. Langdon and the administrative staff are to be commended for organizing the sessions.

Why couldn't more "grass roots" talks be held regarding the other things that consume so much of our tax money—highways, the postal service, welfare, foreign aid, and the like? It might just be the step needed to give the government back to the people.

Our Goals, Revisited

It is a good practice to occasionally review and restate one's primary goals and hopes. In this day of anti-this and anti-that it is equally important to know what we are FOR.

These are the basic goals we continue to pursue: The best in supervised recreation programs—Speedy construction of the express system—Proper planning for the orderly growth of communities—The best possible schools for our youngsters—Prohibiting the display and sale of crime and horror publications — increased local interest in local, state and national government.

Our editorial voice will be evident in the many areas related to these broad goals. We will progress only so far as our readers will permit through their interest, criticisms and active support.

A Day For Mom...

A man may work from sun to sun, but a Mother's work is never done.

There is, however, a one-day break each year in the endless routine that faces Mom. Mother's Day is Sunday, May 12.

There is little we can say in tribute to Mother that has not already been more eloquently presented.

There is an abundance of love in our hearts for "Mom," the original earthly source of all our love. God grant that "her day" may remind us to return this love in equal daily installments throughout the year.

"Now, Don't Forget Mother's Day!"

ODE TO MOTHER

Mother is a symbol of love,
Devotion with feeling expressed,
A refuge to whom we turned
In joy or in our distress.
Mother to burdens bear,
In silence to endure,
Through trial and tribulation,
In peace or toll of war.

God gave us mother,
His spirit on us to descend,
Through her His love to impart,
A love that never ends.
Mother with motherly wisdom
To answer our requests,
Ever thank God for mother,
For her we were richly blessed.

So let us remember mother
For a debt of love we owe,
By deed or word express it,
On her some gift bestow.

Guest Pulpit . . .

Rev. Styres

Jesus astounded his followers when the greatest event in His movement came. They were anxious to break the big resurrection story. His word was "wait." There were yet two great events to come, the Ascension and Pentecost. It seemed reasonable to tell the news as it came in three big stories. Jesus said wait and then go into all the world and tell the whole story.

The gospel is not a series of unrelated mistakes and recoveries. It is a God-directed life that brought redemption to men.

There is spiritual therapy in the command to wait. It was a pause to regain faith and composure. Ten days of praying together settled social differences that remained from the dark week. Peter and Mark, who often used the words straitway and forthwith, had time to stop, ponder Jesus' words and gaze at the map of prophecy. It is good for every man in his haste-ridden day to stop, close his eyes to the world and its schedule, and bring his heart to normal pace long enough to know God.

There is stabilizing power in the coming experience. While the life of Christ was well ordered, often his disciples were lost in meaningless activity. The experience at Pentecost gave direction to their faith. They had a world to win.

Pentecost gave them inner power over sin and themselves. They were no longer tossed like a wave in the sea. Their waiting brought them to receive the person of the Holy Spirit. Jesus called Him the comforter. They found Him present in every trial stabilizing their lives against all evil forces. He made ignorant men often bold and wise.

Today men who wait on God are not without strength.

An Editor's Outlook ... by Jenkin Lloyd Jones

Our Cuisine Often Downright Criminal

You can eat and drink all the way across America and never be poisoned. You can be sure the water in your glass is free from typhoid. There will be no amoebas on the lettuce. The milk won't give you undulant fever. You can forget the injunctions, observed by wise travelers in most of the world, against swallowing anything that hasn't been peeled or boiled.

Jones

The only tragedy is that you can eat your way across America and not have a single taste thrill. Unless you hunt up the local gourmets who know the spots where the preparation of food is a prideful thing, you can travel from Eastport, Me., to San Ysidro in a bleak wasteland of tired salads, gray roastbeef, dougky breads, mushy vegetables, and rainwater coffee. Yes, you can even pay a cover charge for these delights.

We don't have the worst food in the world. The British have learned how to boil the taste out of everything. The most awful dish on earth is perhaps kidney pie and brussels sprouts in an English railway restaurant. The average hotel dinner in Iran or India or Egypt or New Zealand is a pretty sobering experience.

But America ought to have the best food in the world. We have the best groceries. We have the juciest fruit, the fattest steers, the finest vegetables, the hardest wheat and the most contented cows. Most of the great chefs of the world would give their gold bridgework to have at that supermarket right down the block from your house.

The chief difference between the average French and American cooks is that we make second class dishes out of first class materials and they make first class dishes out of second class materials. They turn stringy beef and even horsemeat into succulence by the adroit use of spices and an understanding of marination. The French housewife may put her soup stock in an old lard can on the back of the stove and it may stay there for weeks. This is not the most sanitary practice. But she can come up with a gravy that sets the angels singing.

We have demeaned the dignity of cooking among our women. Few girls take seriously their high school cooking classes. The superstition has arisen that the young lady who concentrates on kitchen prowess is confessing a lack of sex appeal. It is considered more feminine to try to trap your husband with a beehive hairdo and purple nail polish. The apron and the skillet are supposed to be symbols of desperation.

But the plain fact is that, after the ardor of the honeymoon has cooled, men are best held by a firm grip on their stomachs. It takes a lot to survive TV dinners and instant thisas and thatas.

There is no dearth of fine cookbooks. For a modest price the Mennonites will reveal the secrets of smitz and knep, streusel kuchen, and pfeffernusse: My friend, Herman Deutsch of The New Orleans Item, recently brought out a book containing the great Brennan's recipes, and don't let the pseudo-sophisticates tell you that the top New Orleans restaurants are overrated. They are not. Life Magazine recently published the best-illustrated cookbook ever produced, and the famous "Joy of Cooking" by the late Irma Rombauer justly went through about 15 editions.

The only trouble is that while all women buy these books, few read them. After about the third year of marriage the average American wife has settled her kitchen repertoire on 10 or 15 standard dinners, many of them badly prepared because she got in late from the women's club where they were discussing what can be done about the high divorce rates.

What American husbands need are more wives who can do things with neck meat, chuck roast and rump steak. They need wives who will spend two or three weeks in earnest experimentation and come up with 40 dishes that have a little subtlety.

And wouldn't it be wonderful if those miserable fry cooks who pass themselves off as chefs in thousands of American hotel and motel coffee shops mastered just three fine dishes — one each for breakfast, lunch and dinner?

In driving across the country how'd you like to start the day with huevos rancheros in Pennsylvania, and then go on to a real Poor Boy sandwich lunch in Ohio and supper of roasted calf liver with bearnaise sauce in Indiana? It shouldn't be hard to teach even a hamburger turner how to prepare three things well and voila! you have specialties that can make the house famous.

Let us not be carried away with cynicism. America has more fine restaurants now than it ever had. World War II drove many of the world's great chefs to our shores. One-time gustatory deserts like Pittsburgh, Omaha and Dallas are now familiar with flaming casseroles. And, to be fair, there are many wives who take their kitchen duties seriously and are killing their husbands pleasantly with sweetbreads-in-wine and shoo-fly pie.

Nor would it be wise for a people to worship their bellies too much. If the French had spent half as much time preparing for war as they did hunting truffles, Hitler wouldn't have walked over them.

But we Americans can do a lot better than collision-mat pancakes, cardboard pie crusts and vulcanized chicken. Let's dust off those cookbooks.

Here's the Answer

Leftovers . . . by John McPeek

Children Spoon-Fed Shoddy Patriotism

"Mother, why is Grandfather standing so proudly with a hoe in that picture above the bookcase?"

"Why, that is his victory portrait, Junior. It was taken shortly after the Backyard Fence Campaign of 1937. With that very hoe he cracked open the skull of his neighbor, George Bullnoggin, who had built a fence three inches on your grandfather's side of the lot line."

"Is that why Grandfather hit him with the hoe?"

McPeek

"Yes, Junior. When Grandfather told George Bullnoggin the fence was on his property, Bullnoggin refused to move it back. Before long the argument became violent and Grandfather resorted to the hoe. It was a great victory. Bullnoggin's skull was fractured, but when he recovered he moved the fence back. We all were very proud of Grandfather. He was the family hero."

"But, Mother, couldn't all the trouble have been avoided if they had employed a surveyor or used the courts?"

"Perhaps, Junior. But it was a matter of pride with Grandfather. He knew the fence was on his side and he didn't need a surveyor or a judge to tell him that."

Does the foregoing seem ludicrous? Certainly it does. But change the backyards to nations, the fence to a border, and the situation could be a page from the "glorious" history of some country, or in the case of the vanquished, a "dark page" in history.

What is the point of this analogue — simple though it may be?

First, let me recall Jenkin Lloyd Jones' column on this page three weeks ago in which he deplored the lack, or scarcity, of old-fashioned patriotism in today's books for children.

Well, I too wish our children were imbued with more patriotism—and, for that matter, also adults. Not the hypocritical, militaristic jingoism of yesteryear, but rather a patriotism built on honesty, truth and concern for man, all men. Why must we continue to glorify war to foster patriotism? Glorification of wars only breeds more wars.

Certainly we had best begin teaching a brand of patriotism based on truth, rather than on chauvinism and nationalistic self-interest (of which Hitler was the most notorious teacher), if we expect to defeat communism.

War won't do it. Somebody once said that neither wars nor jails can kill ideas. Then it seems logical that only ideas—better ideas—can overcome ideas. So why should we resort to drums and bugles and deceit in an attempt to strengthen the idea of free democracy—man's greatest idea!

As for school books, my eight-year-old son recently brought home an illustrated book about the Civil War. On its cover was a picture of two immaculately uniformed and armed young soldiers — one in the blue of the North and the other in the grey of the South, both with their uplifted eyes shining with idealism.

The content of the book was little different. A youngster reading it would be left with the belief that the Civil War was a majestic struggle of two noble factions fighting on antiseptic battlefields solely for the glory of man and nation.

It was enough to make an intelligent person vomit. If we must teach our children about the Civil War, let's teach them the truth — it was a senseless, barbaric, internecine slaughter of thousands that pitted friend against friend, brother against brother, and neighbor against neighbor. It was a war that erupted when statecraft collapsed, and even the moral issue of slavery was not solely at cause. The underlying, more responsible cause, as in most wars, was economics, the economics of the relatively small "slave power" and its blind, greedy determination to keep its economic death grip on the South.

I like to think that if we were to teach the truth to our children they might profit by our mistakes, and those of our forefathers, and grow up to do a better job of running this nation than we have.

Can we truly boast of our accomplishments when we have averaged two wars per generation?

Of course, with today's nuclear weapons, that's one war more than our sons probably will get to serve in if we continue to glorify war.

In re-reading this, I am afraid that persons not familiar with my views might decide that I am a pacifist. This is not so. I do not claim that all wars are unavoidable. But having voluntarily served in two of them I only desire that we wake up and make every effort to avoid a new one.

Isn't that what we promised those fellows lying overseas beneath the small American flags?

Frosting On The Cake

By "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

Some time ago, one of my columns carried a paragraph that "how to stay sane in a world gone nuts" is the $64,000 question for decent people today. Now, every day we read tragic stories of insane behavior.

For example, the wild "boat hopping" escapade that cost three prominent lives and injured many more, who survived drowning only by a miracle.

The other morning we read of some mechanic in Cleveland who ripped all the wiring out of a dozen computing machines because he was afraid of losing his job.

The list is endless of such madness by "adult-infants." Frustrated and fear-bedeviled, they lack both capacity to cope with life and total lack of objective maturity. It is no mystery anymore why "mental illness" is one of our gravest social problems.

Ill-educated people simply must escape from their own enslavement by circumstance and pretense and frustration.

There is a marvelous catalogue of wise and helpful research available to all such persons, once they wish professional aid in their personal private problems. But, unless they will read instead of squandering hours and hours of their spare time on TV trash and violence, what can one hope for them?

WARRIOR FIELDMEN CHECK CLARK

Mum's The Word But— Muskies Now At Dillon

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors By ROB COCHRAN

One of the worst-kept fishing secrets of the season is that muskies have been hitting like crazy for more than three weeks at Dillon Dam. The new reservoir in Licking and Muskingum counties has been attracting fishermen from all over Central Ohio.

Muskellunge fishermen are naturally a closed-mouth lot but the word leaked out last fall that a lot of rather skinny muskies were being caught. Most of these were thrown back as they went up to about 24 inches in length, and were just getting to the size where they were fun to catch. But the fish have been taking in calories since then, and some are now 30 inches or so long and weigh seven to eight pounds.

THESE ARE not trophies, but they are keepers and the race is on. We are a little slow in reporting it, but it's not easy to wring pet fishing locations out of a lot of anglers.

Most everybody knows about it now, and yet a fisherman will tell you in hushed tones about seeing four muskies on a stringer. It still takes some urging before he will say the magic words "Dillon Dam." Habits of a lifetime are difficult to give up.

If you know anything about muskies, you will realize what a terrific catch four fish would be. Sometimes good fishermen go 10, 20 or more years without landing a single muskellunge.

THE STORY is often told of a man spending every vacation for years in Wisconsin, hoping to catch a muskie—then as an old man he finally succeeds. These are rather rare experiences, for with unlimited patience and persistence you can catch this moody monster. Maybe not the first year or so, but they can be caught.

Several places are known as "muskie capitals," including a section of Wisconsin, Chatauqua Lake in Western New York and the St. Lawrence River. It may be hard for the old timers to believe, but Ohio is giving them a run for their money since the Division of Wildlife embarked on its muskie stocking program several years ago.

About five years back, Rocky Fork Lake was hot with up to 50 muskies being taken on a good weekend. Then the focus moved to Leesville Lake, although the fishing was not quite so frantic. Last year Piedmont stole the limelight, and apparently is continuing to offer good muskie fishing this spring. Last year the state record for muskellunge was broken by a 31-pound fish taken from Deer Creek Reservoir.

THERE ARE NO world records being set here, and the fishing is not usually easy, but if catching a muskie is your goal your chances are very good in your home state. Almost all of the muskellunge taken in Ohio are caught on artificial lures, and the bigger the better seems to be the rule. A lot of smaller muskies are caught by accident on bass tackle, but it is rare if you hold a big one with such puny equipment.

To take the sport seriously you should have a rather heavy rod with plenty of "backbone." You should use line of 18 and 20-pound test, a wire leader and a sturdy casting or spinning reel. Preference of lures varies greatly, although the larger size Bomber is popular some places.

If you want to tackle the tough one, catch a muskie. And the best place to go right now is Dillon.

EASTMOOR CINDERMEN HOLD SESSION

ON AREA TRACKS . . .

Whitehall Wins Own Relays; East Runners Nab Hilltop Title

Whitehall and East shared the cinder spotlight last weekend with impressive victories in two of the season's biggest meets to date.

The Rams proved poor hosts as they edged runnerup Gahanna, 66-53, to pick up the crown for the first-ever Whitehall Relays. Cross-town, East outdistanced fleet-footed Central for the Hilltop Relays title.

CLARK FULLER and Mike Short set the pace for the winning Rams, the former the meet's top scorer (22) with victories in the 440, high hurdles and broad jump, the latter tops in the shot put and discus competition.

Don Smith (mile) and Walt Munk (880) picked up two additional firsts for Whitehall. Bexley's Rick Harbold gained a first in the pole vault event.

Three other area entries — Bexley (38), Walnut Ridge (19) and Hartley (14) — finished fifth through seventh, respectively.

IT WAS FRED Lundy Day at the Hilltop track as the Tiger speedster raced to wins in the 100, 220 (tied record) and the broad jump events to pick up 20 of East's winning 95 points.

East grabbed one of three new records set at the relay when the Tigers' shuttle hurdle relay team of Mike McClendon, Avery Godfrey, Kent Schoolfield and Bob Martin covered the distance in 58.9.

Central, who set the other two new meet records (440 and 880 relays), placed second with 69 5/6 points.

Lundy and Godfrey paced the Tigers to a 61½ to 56½ win over West earlier in the week. Lundy streaked to wins in the 100, 220 and broad jump while Godfrey was tops in both the high jump and pole vault.

JAY MAUPIN'S "triple" (100, 220 and 440) helped pace Bexley to a 69-49 win over Groveport. Roger Williamson was a double winner for the Lions with wins in both the low and high hurdles.

Academy's thins lost out twice during the week to Westerville — 92-26 in a dual meet and 54-34 as the first-second place finishers in the Canal Winchester Relays.

Ed Laws and John Larrimer were the top performers in both meets for the Vikings. Larrimer won the 440 event at Winchester while Laws took top honors in both the 880 and mile in both meets.

In other cinder action around the area, Whetstone downed Walnut Ridge, 96-22, while Eastmoor placed sixth at the Marion Relays (16).

In a triangular meet Monday, powerful Bexley overwhelmed Walnut Ridge and Reynoldsburg, 88-51-10.

The Lion thins were paced by Rick Harbold (14⅓), Jay Maupin (10⅓), Tom Leukart (10) and Roger Williamson (10).

Joseph, Regan 'Putt-Putt' Way To Celebrity Titles

Ohio State wrestling champ Gary Joseph and Capital University basketball coach Whitey Regan putted their way to the top of the field Sunday in the first-ever Celebrity Golf Tournament at the Putt-Putt Miniature Gold Course on Hamilton-rd.

Regan copped the "pro flight" title with an even-par 36 while Joseph was the top "amateur", clipping one stroke off par with a 35.

COLUMBUS' MR. Putt-Putt Tom Rohm expressed his hopes of making the tourney an annual affair after presenting awards to the celebrities following the tourney. Joseph received a golf bag while Regan was awarded a set of McGregor golf clubs.

A large crowd followed the progress of the 23-man field from positions around the inside course.

Hartley Newspaper representatives Jack Wittenmeier and John Auble retained their "amateur standing" for another year by posting scores of 46 and 53 respectively.

Warriors, Rams Nab Semi-Final Berths

Eastmoor and Whitehall advanced into semi-final district baseball tournament play last evening against Brookhaven and Mifflin, respectively, as Bexley dropped out of AA competition Monday.

The Warriors gained their divisional berth by merit of a 7-3 verdict over Worthington while the Rams moved on thanks to a 5-2 decision over Teays Valley. Brookhaven eliminated Bexley, 6-5.

PITCHER JERRY Myers provided what proved to be his own winning runs against the Cardinals with a three-run home run blast in the fourth.

Myers, who got relief help from Doug Cromer in the seventh, allowed but four hits. Eastmoor advanced in the tourney by sidelining Newark (9-3) and Elgin (8-0) with Myers and Cromer doing the pitching.

Whitehall followed its late inning script for its third tourney win of the week. After T-V had closed the gap to 3-2 in the sixth, the Rams bounced back with five in the seventh to ice the victory.

BILL DILDINE flipped a three-hitter to get the win, aiding his own cause with a pair of RBIs.

The Rams had to go extra innings in both their earlier tourney wins over Watterson (6-5) and Marion-Franklin (4-3).

Dilding picked up both wins in relief appearances. The Rams scored three runs in a second extra inning after the Eagles had gone up by two.

AGAINST MARION-FRANKLIN, Dave Millington's two-run single tied the score in the seventh and Whitehall won it in the eighth as Jerry Ramsey raced home on a M-F bobble.

Bexley's final-quarter loss to Brookhaven was tight since the Lions came within one run of tying the score in the final inning with a three-run rally.

The Lions had advanced with a 7-2 win over Granville. Jeff McClelland's three-run homer was the key hit for Bexley.

FOUR OTHER area clubs—St. Charles, Hartley, East and Walnut Ridge—were eliminated from competition earlier.

East got by Maryeville, 5-1, but couldn't contain hard-hitting Worthington, losing 11-1. Linden eliminated Hartley, 4-0, Circleville bounced Walnut Ridge, 4-3, and West slipped past St. Charles, 1-0, as John Pettorini lost a two-hitter.

In non-tourney play, Bexley dropped a pair of CBL matches, 2-1 to Mt. Vernon and 6-0 to Worthington. Also in the CBL, Whitehall edged Delaware on Howie Bailey's three-run homer.

IN OTHER diamond action, Linden edged Walnut Ridge, 3-1, in the City League, Watterson bounced Hartley, 11-4, in the Central Catholic League and University blanked Academy, 5-0, on John Howard's no-hitter in County League play.

Tribe Fans—Greatest Tragedy Since Hamlet

Mr. Webster lists addiction as "the condition of giving assent to a habit or inclination." For all the verbosity of his 1,724 pages of New World Dictionary, that's the best word we could find to describe our long-standing love affair with the Cleveland Indians.

In simpliest terms, we're "hooked" on the Tribe.

THE CONDITION isn't always fatal, and although it's usually seasonal (late March to early September), it's practically incurable and almost sure to invoke pain somewhere between July 4 and mid-August.

The malady is common in other forms, usually depending on geographical location. The only area we've found where the disease is completely painless is the Bronx borough of New York City.

The first symptoms become obvious when the infected person tears through the morning sports pages until he finds the box or line score characteristic of his condition.

THE LATTER stages occur when the victim can't wait for the morning edition and drives downtown for the early press run.

Our psychiatrist sadly explained our particular obsession at a recent session by pointing out that we probably would have eventually grown into a normal adult had it not been for the 1954 World Series (Giants over Indians, four games to none).

Now that we think about it, those "days of wins and Rosen" were the golden ones.

THE SADDEST part of the whole situation is that we had done so well "kicking" all those other childhood habits like Roy Rogers and peanut butter sandwiches.

What's roughest about being a diehard Indian fan is the paralleled necessity of becoming a confirmed "Yankee-hater."

Sport magazine will sell millions of copies of its June edition to Indian fans since its cover is emblazoned with the time-tired question, "Is the Yankee Dynasty Dead?"

TRIBE ADDICTS will eagerly read the six-page spread to sadly learn that, despite the fact that six of the seven Yankee farm clubs finished last or second last in '62, there's no spirit of pessimism evident in the organization.

With no more going for them but wishful thinking, faithful Indian followers will be drawn to the Cleveland-NewYork series this summer like the moth to the flame. There are no greater gluttons for punishment.

For example, it is our estimation that when Whitey Ford blasted a home run off Mudcat Grant in a recent TV game, 156 ulcers were born.

IN FACT, had Will Shakespeare been born three centuries later, he more than likely could have toppled his Hamlet or MacBeth effort with a tragedy based on Indian fans.

Yea, we suppose that there are far worse fates in life than being hooked on the Indians. But for year-to-year frustration and life time despair on the installament plan, there's nothing like it.

Dear friends,

As children, we tend to take Mother for granted. It is only when we become parents that we begin to realize the devoted labor, patience and sacrifice of Mother in raising us to be good, useful citizens.

Let us show the depth of our love and appreciation of Mother on this Mother's Day.

Sincerely,

Arthur B. Leach

DEPENDABLE and CONSISTENT

A Crown for Mother

You, as a Mother, are honored by your children on a special day — Mother's Day. How the little things they make for you with their own small hands please you and warm your heart.

It warms and quickens the heart of God when you honor Him on His special day. "Remember the Sabbath Day, to keep it holy." Exodus 20:8. Worship God on this next Sunday in the church of your choice. We should honor our loving Heavenly Father even as we expect our children to honor us.

Attend church on Mother's Day.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH ... THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

Finest In Moving And Storage Is Offered By Fireproof Warehouse

Featuring the largest household goods storage in the Columbus area, and one of the largest in the state, the Fireproof Warehouse, 1024 N. High-st, is also the agent for Allied Van Lines, one of the largest movers in the world.

As part of the Allied Van Lines world-wide chain, Fireproof Warehouse offers all the facilities that has made that company famous. From specially constructed wardrobes to mattress cartons, the moving facilities are complete. Even special floor runners are placed in each van to protect the customers' rugs and carpets.

Manager William Palmer pointed out that the company has six large moving vans and between 20 and 25 employes available for any moving job whether it's across town or half way around the world.

The warehouse is constructed entirely of brick and concrete and is divided by a series of fire walls, all containing fireproof doors. According to Palmer, the building has also been designated as a Civil Defense shelter.

Three all-weather loading docks are utilized by the warehouse to move storage items in and out of the building with complete safety to the customer.

Established in 1906, the warehouse and moving facilities have been in the same location since that time. Palmer stated he would be happy to discuss any moving or storage problem with a potential customer and could offer some of the finest facilities available in Ohio for this purpose.

A MEMBER of the Buckeye Record Club, Mrs. Sheldon Ford, holds several of her record selections as she prepares to play them on her new console stereo set. Both the records and set were made available through her club membership.

Buckeye Record Club Makes Stereo Music Available

To establish a new and unique service for the people of Central Ohio, the Buckeye Record Club, Inc., was established in January, 1963, 4150 E. Main-st.

The basic idea, devised by club president, Bob Dixon, is to fill the needs to area stereo music fans. Plans are designed for individuals who already own a stereo set or for those who wish to purchase a set and join the club's record program.

Record selections are made from a list, including at least 100 records from more than 12 different labels, sent to members of the club each month.

In some cases the club makes it possible to purchase a stereo set and also provides records that are included in the membership cost. Other features include the privilege of buying stereo accessories at discount prices through the club. For those already owning a stereo set the club will furnish records at discount prices.

A locally-owned and controlled company, the Buckeye Record Club offers membership to any interested person and will be happy to make arrangements with anyone contacting the local office at 237-5321.

Local Realtors Will Join In Celebration Of Realtor Week

Nearly 1,700 area realtors and salesmen will join with over 73,000 realtors across the country in celebrating Realtor Week, May 12 through 18, according to Paul J. Falco, president of the Columbus Board of Realtors.

"A realtor," Falco said, "is pledged to follow a strict code of ethics that is enforced through the local board of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

"This code of ethics that realtors are pledged to uphold is not a vague chant with loosely-worded ideas that may be interpreted almost any way the reader wants," Falco continued, "It is a specific code with 30 articles that state exactly what a realtor may and may not do in order to remain a member of NAREB and the Columbus Board. And, of these 30 articles, 20 are designed to protect the public."

The primary obligation of the realtor under this code is to keep the interests of both the buyer and the seller uppermost in mind during a real estate transaction.

The term realtor was adopted by NAREB in 1916, and members have exclusive right to use the term which is registered in the United States Patent Office. The parent organization, founded in 1908, has offices in Chicago, Ill., and Washington, D.C.

Realtors are kept aware of changes in real estate law, mortgage rates, buying trends and innumerable other business factors, through publications of the association's professional staff, which maintains close contact with such developments throughout the country.

Big Walnut Bridge Area Crash Scene

Four separate accidents within about 600 yards tied up traffic for almost an hour shortly before 7 a.m. Friday in E. Broad-st in the vicinity of the Big Walnut Creek bridge.

Columbus and Whitehall police said all four lanes of traffic were blocked until wreckers could tow the damaged vehicles away.

No one was injured in the chain of mishaps, police said, although three of the 10 vehicles involved were heavily damaged. Most of the accidents were rear-end collisions.

The first crash, and the one which produced the major tie-up, occurred on the bridge. Police said a woman driver had a flat tire and a passing motorist stopped to help her. When he stopped, another car ran into both vehicles. All were eastbound.

One accident occurred on the Whitehall side of the bridge and the other two about 200 yards east of the bridge, police reported.

All but one of the crashes occurred in eastbound lanes, police added.

A HARTLEY NEWSPAPER

TEN CENTS PER COPY — $3.00 PER YEAR BY MAIL

Vol. V, No. 36 — Second Class Postage Paid at Columbus, Ohio — Total No. 244

2465 W. Broad St., Columbus, Ohio, Thursday, May 16, 1963

Those two stop signs on Gould-rd signaled "go" for speeding protests from residents Tuesday night during regular Bexley Council session.

Some 90 residents on the street have long been battling against the removal of stop signs at Dale-av and Bryden-rd, despite the fact that the city of Columbus has indicated that they should be turned to make Gould-rd a through street.

The fireworks really started when Council Safety Committee Chairman William Schoedinger reported that his group had decided to "go along" with Columbus to eliminate the stop markers.

Schoedinger recommended that council approve the measure.

Columbus had asked for the change on the jointly owned street last January over opposition by residents there who claimed that such a move would make Gould-rd a "speedway."

They also maintained that the action would dump more traffic onto Gould-rd which would act as a "James-rd traffic relief."

Schoedinger did alter the proposal somewhat, calling for one stop sign at Fair-av.

Aaron Kahn, 169 S. Gould-rd, the residents' spokesman, contended that he wouldn't be satisfied until there were four-way stops at Fair-av and Powell-rd and a traffic light at Gould-rd and E. Broad-st.

In other action, council:

- Approved an issuance of a water tap permit and okayed running a line under Clifton-av to fill the Bexley Swimming Pool on the Jeffrey Mansion grounds.
- They did veto a BCIA suggestion that the city pay for a six-inch water line from Meadow-pk to Clifton-av.
- Tabled an agreement with Sheridan Investment Corp. to improve 225 feet of Astor-av

Have Your Flag For Armed Forces Day

Have you made arrangements for an "Avenue of Flags" in your neighborhood yet? With just a few days left until Armed Forces Day, Saturday, May 18, the project suggested two weeks ago by Hartley Newspapers has caught on in many areas in and around Columbus.

The rush to purchase the new 50-star flag, offered at a big savings by Hartley Newspapers has been almost unbelievable. Several neighborhoods have already contacted the newspaper office for more information to complete their "Avenue of Flags" project.

The plan is made possible by a special offer made by Hartley Newspapers for a limited time. During this offer anyone can purchase a beautiful, colorfast cotton, 50-star American flag, complete with halyard, six-foot wooden staff, top decoration and window socket at tremendous savings.

The flag kit, which usually retails for $5.95, and a one-year subscription to any Hartley Newspaper, valued at $3, are both available for a limited time for only $5. The price includes delivery of the flag kit to your home.

The offer is open to old friends and new subscribers to a Hartley Newspaper. If already a subscriber, the new subscription will be added to the present date of expiration extending the date by one year.

This is a golden opportunity to display old-fashioned patriotism on the very next patriotic holiday. Don't let yourself be the one who does not have a flag in front of your home on Armed Forces Day, Flag Day, Memorial Day, the Fourth of July or any flag-flying day. A handy booklet, included in your flag kit, will tell you each special day you should have a flag displayed and explain the proper way to exhibit it.

Fill in the coupon in today's flag advertisement in this copy of your Hartley Newspaper without delay ... there are just a few days left before Armed Forces Day and your flag should be displayed with pride.

MRS. JANET CARDI, looking every bit as pretty as she did in 1956 when she was crowned Miss West Virginia and a runner-up in the Miss Universe contest, checks over plans for the upcoming "Miss Columbus" contest. A preliminary to the Miss Universe competition, the event is being sponsored by the Town and Country Merchants Assn.

YOU NEVER KNOW:

Miss Universe May Be Discovered On T&C Parking Lot

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Beauty may indeed have been born in Storyville, but it flourishes in few places today the way it does in the several square miles of Central Ohio.

The merchants of Town and Country Shopping Center have decided that it might be a wise move to promote some of the local pulchritude.

And, as most things done at Town and Country, they're doing it up large. So large, in fact, that the Merchants' Association has undertaken the task of locating a Miss Universe.

They are working in connection with an attractive East Side mother, Mrs. Janet Cardi, former Miss West Virginia (1956) and, herself, runner-up in the Miss Universe contest of that year.

The bubbling Mrs. Cardi, who (seven years and three children later) could still grace any beauty contest, was all smiles when discussing the project.

"We're very excited over the possibilities of such

It's been a long time since we've had a train ride and so this past week we took a recommendation to take the Erie Lackawana out of Marion for Chicago.

A four hour trip in relative comfort was relaxing. But more than all else we were confronted on all sides by courtesy. It dispelled some ideas we had about the "way you are treated on the railroads."

When the trainman learned I had a daughter (Mrs. Bill Woodcox) living in Rochester, Ind., and when I casually remarked I should have called her and had a greeting from her as the train made a one minute stop, the trainman said, "I'll take care of that" and proceeded to get off at the next stop and have the dispatcher call ahead to notify my daughter.

We failed to make connections on the way west but a very apologetic station man at Rochester told us to leave it to him. He would have

WHITEHALL STUDENTS GET SCHOLARSHIPS

Papers Win In National Competition

A special section of this newspaper published last fall in salute to five local "Suburban Homemakers of the Year" has won first prize in a national contest.

The award was presented Friday to C. Carlton Hartley, publisher of the Hartley Newspapers, at a convention of Accredited Home Newspapers in Chicago.

Honorable mentions were won by other Hartley publications in the following categories: general excellence—the Reynoldsburg Record; community service, South-East Rural-Urban News (school bond issue information); editorial and news content—the Hilltop Record and the Reynoldsburg Record; best local feature column, West Rural-Urban News (Rod Cochran's "Inside on the Outdoors.")

The contest was judged at the Medill School of Journalism, Northwestern University.

Confederate Jackpot At $179 Mark

It's growing, growing, but not yet gone!

Another shot in the arm from the winnings not claimed in last week's offering of "Confederate" cash brings this week's jackpot total to a staggering $179 in Hartley Newspapers "Confederate" money. And so far there has not even been a nibble at the big cash.

Six winners hacked last week's offering of 25 "Confederate" dollars down to $19. This means that amount of money has been added to last week's $160 jackpot for the new total which could go to a lucky subscriber this week.

Incidentally, you must be a paid subscriber to a Hartley Newspaper to win the jackpot prize.

Winners of $1 in "Confederate" cash last week included Florence M. Wasmer, 526 S. Wheatland-av; Rick Schleppi, 1331 Molly-ln; Mabel

'Shoeless Joe' And All To Open 'Yankees' Saturday

The granddaddy of all musicals (allowing, of course, for "My Fair Lady" as the grandmother) opens at the Columbus Jewish Center Saturday, May 18.

It'll also be presented on May 19, 22, 23, 25 and 26.

This is the musical comedy that broke an all-time jinx against Broadway stage shows dealing with baseball.

Directed by Harold M. Eisenstein, with choreography by Rick Norris, and musical direction by Dave Angus and Alvin Beck, the Gallery Players musical concerns dizzy diamond doings and a distracting Delilah.

The central figure of "Damn Yankees" is an especially unfortunate case. Played by Alvin Beck, he is one of those bleeding fans, committed heart and soul to the most hopeless team in the League, the Washington Senators.

As he sits before his TV set one evening watching his team lose as usual, he mutters that he'd sell his soul to be able to help them win a pennant.

The words are hardly spoken when the Devil, portrayed by Gene Gerrard, appears to consumate the sale. The fiftyish fellow is transformed into a strapping young athlete who can hit two home runs at every game so that his beloved Senators are about to supplant the Yankees in first place. Frank Johnson sings and acts the part of rejuvenated hero.

But the Devil's victory is not complete. The diabolically gifted ballplayer gets homesick for his understanding domestic wife, portrayed by Jean Westrick of TV fame. Mephisto has a trick with which to get final possession of Joe's soul, and he calls upon his most reliable handmaiden.

This is a bewitching siren named Lola. She had also done a bit of soul-bartering. Once the ugliest girl in Providence, R.I., in return for beauty she put herself at the

Parade Will Top-Off Three-Day Salute To Area Armed Forces

Those who "love a parade" are offered a spectacular this Sunday at 2 p.m. when the bands, floats, equipment and men start throughout downtown Columbus as the highlight of the three-day Armed Forces Week Celebration.

Celebration of National Armed Forces Week begins in Columbus with drill teams from Capital and Ohio State and Lockbourne marching around the State House at 11 a.m. awaiting the arrival at noon sharp of Lt. General Andrew T. McNamara, director of the U. S. Defense Supply Agency.

He will be greeted by a 15-gun salute from a National Guard 105MM. battery, and then "piped" across High-st by the piper and drummer from the 38 Division band to the Neil House. There he will be the principal speaker at a luncheon attended by 500 business and professional men and women of the city.

"We want the men who write huge checks to the federal government to hear the man who spends $3 billion of taxpayers' money a year tell just what he does with their dollars," explained Col. Harry E. Richter, chairman of the chairman of the luncheon.

The Navy ROTC Glee Club, a group acknowledged as superb by all who have heard them, will sing before the FOUR-VEHICLE PILE-UP SCENE ON LIVINGSTON AVE.

THIS WAS the scene of a four-vehicle pile-up Friday afternoon in E. Livingston-av at Wellesley-rd. Police said that a beer truck, driven by William L. Dehl, 46 of 129 Hadley-rd, struck a small trailer being pulled by a car driven west by Charles A. Whiting, 44, of Chillicothe. The truck ran over the trailer and hit the car (center) knocking it across the centerline into the path of a compact car (extreme left) driven by Harry E. Miller of near Canal Winchester, police said. The truck, meanwhile, continued on to hit another car, also westbound, driven by John F. Messmer, 41, 1293 Wakefield-ct. Messmer was attempting a left turn when the chain reaction developed. Mrs. Miller and Margaret DePew, 38, of Chillicothe, a passenger in the Whiting car, were hurt and treated at Lincoln Memorial Hospital. Police cited Dehl for reckless operation.

Capital Seeking Male Housing For Students

An increase in the enrollment of male students has caused Capital University to seek additional private housing for the fall term, according to Dean of Men John Kirker.

"We are contacting private home owners in the vicinity of Capital University to procure extra housing for freshmen," said Kirker. "For a great number of years private homes have been utilized in the housing of male students and until a sufficient number of residence halls have been constructed, this is likely to continue for at least another five years."

Capital will concentrate in the area south of Main-st for its needed housing, Kirker explained. Further information may be obtained from the dean's office.

'The Bartered Bride' Scheduled For Performances At Mees Hall

Capital University's production of Smetana's opera "The Bartered Bride" is set for a two-night run Friday and Saturday, May 17 and 18, at 8 p.m. in Mees Hall.

Directed by Prof. Wilbur Crist, of the Capital University music department, "Bartered Bride" tells the story of a young girl's trials and tribulations to marry her true love in a gay musical offering.

Male leads in the opera are sung by two local men, Izador Cabakoff, of 2981 Elbern-av, tenor, and John McCormick, of 878 Sheridan-av, bass. Michele Shafer, Nelsonville and Betty Schultz of Archbold, have the soprano leads. Both are Capital students.

The choreography in this second annual "gown and town" production features the Jorg Fasting Ballet. The chorus is under the direction of Prof. Fred Brobst while Patricia Gaines, of Gaines Drama Studio, is stage director.

Tickets may still be obtained at either the Central Ticket Office, 37 N. High-st, CA. 8-1305, or Bexley Hall, room 107, BE. 5-8611, Ext. 31, on the university campus.

Four Area Women Are Honored

Four area women were among the 26 members of the College of St. Mary of the Springs Honors Program who were honored at a convocation and formal dinner this week.

onored were Miss Rita Rohr, 3144 Westwick-rd; Miss Lucy Ryan, 2808 E. Livingston-av; Miss Anne Sullivan, 919 Greers-av, and Miss Ann Wuellner, 1215 Haddon-rd, all sophomores.

The Honors Program is a special study plan for superior students at the college. All students in the program must be recommended by the faculty for the special work, and must maintain a 2.6 scholastic average (3.0 system) during the three years of participation.

As sophomores, the students have studied communism in the context of the contemporary world revolution and Sigrid Undset's "Kristin Lavransdatter". During their junior year they will engage in a group study of the world's great books; and as seniors, they will do individual research in their major fields.

Boy Scout News

The White Oaks District held its annual Webeloes Day for Cub Scouts over 10 years old at the picnic grounds on Camp Lazarus on Saturday, May 11.

A total of 100 boys and 45 dads from 13 different packs attended the outing. The following units were represented: 71, 78, 107, 145, 195, 274, 277, 280, 288, 335, 362, 367 and 369. Helping to present the program to the Cubs were Scout troops 68, 373 and 369.

The Webeloes were led through three different areas which pertain to Boy Scouts. The first area was a demonstration of a model campsite, set up on a patrol basis. Different types of fires and lashings were also shown in connection with the campsite.

The second area was that of competitive events, and here the Cubs participated in relays, wheelbarrow races, rope tying, and tug-of-wars. In the project area the boys had to follow a trail which had been laid out for them.

At the end of the day there was a typical Boy Scout campfire presented for the Cubs, which included singing, skits, and Indian dancing by Troop 68.

"The purpose of the Webeloes day is to promote the Webeloes to come into Boy Scouts instead of dropping out of the Scouting movement after Cub Scouts," explained Don Cook, who was in charge of the whole day.

Did Jack Denton's Ad-Libs Scare TV-4? Maybe, But Then Again...

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.
Entertainment Editor

The strange — but undoubtedly keen-entertainment biz guillotine made another head roll last week.

Jack Denton's noggin' fell into the well-known basket previously occupied (as old-time Columbusites will remember) by such personalities as Spook Beckman and Maurice Jackson, not to mention WTVN Radio's Music Men and a few others who had gained some degree of popularity here.

However, few heads fell as swiftly as Denton's. He received the word the afternoon of May 10 that he had just completed his last "Jack Denton Show" viewed here on WLW-C, TV-4, from 9:30 to 10:25 a.m.

Keep Smiling

I've always enjoyed a fine relationship there," Denton said Saturday in his handsome Kingsdale apartment in the North Side. "I'm sure the move wasn't over a conflict of personalities.

"Then again, maybe there were some there who hated me and I never knew it. I walk through life with this smile on my face all the time . . . I'm probably too naive to spot a thing like that."

Only reason listed by the station for the development was that, in the words of General Manager Walter E. Bartlett, "the change represents the station's efforts to make its early morning programming more appealing and interesting to the female audience."

Seemed to thir viewer that much of the Denton content would appeal more to ladies anyway then, say, to the president of a Nut and Bolt Co. The door is still wide open for speculation.

And, as with an unexplainable but nonetheless momentous occasion such as this, tongues wagged. Out of much of this breezy kid's stuff came these few pieces of information which can be branded "somewhat authoratative:"

Reliable sources indicated that a reason might've been Denton's unpredictability. He would, on occasion, make a remark that could've been considered out of taste in front of the Canal Winchester Sip 'n Sew Society, for instance.

This, the source speculated, accounts for the swiftness of Denton's departure. Station officials may have been afraid that if they gave him a normal two week's notice he might have said something on the air to cause WLW-C to lose its broadcasting license.

JACK DENTON

"Surely Denton was properly surveyed before bringing him to the station, wasn't he?" I pressed. "That's true," said the source, "but we felt that he'd settle down in time."

As An Econ. Prof Said . . .

Let's not blame all this on Denton's ad-libs. It's true that he was the biggest single expense in the entire program and lopping him off could've been a smart economic move (well, at least an economic move).

But, to Smilin' Jack, the move is still pretty much of a mystery. "Bartlett called me in his office in August," Denton said, "and told me he liked the show and wanted to continue it."

Naturally, station managers change their minds faster than sponsors change commercial content, and it's obvious that Bartlett — or other higher-ups in the Crosley Broadcasting organization — had a definite change of heart. The entertainer's contract isn't up until October.

Anyway, it's over with now. Crosley has its eye on Bob Carroll, the Broadway singing star, as a possible replacement. But, then again, Carroll might come a little more expensive than Denton did.

There's also a fellow named Dale Young who's holding down a personality post at WJW-TV in Cleveland who may be considered, too, to fill the AM Show (Denton's format and replacement now being shown in Denton's time-slot without Denton) vacancy.

What about Denton? Don't expect him to leave the city too quickly. "An offer from WTVN or WBNS may change my mind," he said.

Besides that, he's got Ciro's Supper Club and some other fairly hot irons in the employment fire.

Cadets Promoted During Civil Air Patrol Open House Held Thursday

The Whitehall Civil Air Patrol squadron held an open house for all parents and interested people last Thursday.

The program was started with an introduction of the senior staff by Lt. Harlan Horne, squadron commander. He welcomed guests and gave a talk on civil air patrol activities.

The training program of the squadron was then explained in detail and an explanation of what the cadets have actually been involved in was given by CWO William DeBoard, the squadron training officer.

He also showed the film "Daybreak Call' which futher illustrated the civil air patrol aviation education training program.

During the ceremonies, seven cadets were given promotions to C3C and also awarded red training ribbons.

These cadets were Patrick McCarrick, Tom Isner, Roger Scher, James Donoghue, James Cook, Robert Gerkin and Stanley Robinson.

After the commander presented the promotions and ribbons, the squadron adjourned to the cafeteria for a coffee hour where the parents and the senior advisors met and discussed problems and answered questions.

By CONNIE McCLEARY

Pam Mulbarger, 16, of 2689 Brentwood-rd, Bexley, has been named one of the six top notch winners in "Seventeen" magazine's fifth annual National Fashion Council Competition.

Pam, a member of the F&R Lazarus High School Fashion Board, was enabled to participate in the contest when selected the Lazarus Board's representative to "Seventeen" magazine's Fashion Council.

The five assignments which made up the contest included merchandising and advertising layouts for the publication, and related copy.

The Bexley High School junior, active in many school organizations, will leave for New York City by Jet June 3.

During her all-expense paid trip, Pam will appear in annual fashion show preview of fall trends, act as an assistant in the fashion and merchandising departments, and visit sites of interest in the city. She will return to Columbus on June 10.

Eastern Part Of City To Be Beautified By Local Kiwanis

One of the Eastern Kiwanis Club's 1963 projects is to beautify the eastern part of the city through an organized flowering crab tree planting program. Such a program was successfully carried out in Upper Arlington some time ago, and resulted in the well-known springtime blossoms.

The Agricultural and Conservation Committee of the Eastern Kiwanis Club has arranged a quantity purchase of four to five foot flowering crab trees from a local nursery. Colors will range from white through all shades to a dark pink.

City officials have been contacted, and to achieve a uniform effect throughout the area, an Eastern Kiwanian will stake the spots between the sidewalk and curb where your trees should be planted. He will also supply planting instructions.

Miss Universe—

a contest here," she grinned. "It's really an excellent opportunity for all local girls."

By means of explanation, the Miss Universe pageant isn't exactly going to be held in the Town and Country Shopping Center. But the first step will be.

A local girl will be selected "Miss Columbus" (a first-ever honor, by the way) and will then be sent to Cleveland June 7 to compete for the Miss Ohio title.

Word was received at Hartley Newspapers' press time that Miss Columbus hopefuls will also be competing for such outstanding gifts as:

A $1000 scholarship to the nationally-known Patricia Stevens Finishing School at 52 E. Gay-st, and

A $200 gift certificate from Columbus' own "Coiffures by Tiberi."

Other gifts will be added later. Of course, all trophies for the girls are being furnished by the individual Town and Country Merchants.

From there it's on to the Miss Universe competition July 10-18 in Miami Beach. See?

Right now, Mrs. Cardi (who resides at 3815 Roswell-dr) is looking for attractive girls interested in getting the project started. So far, some 20 females have signed up for the race and Mrs. Cardi has hopes of gathering "at least 30."

Only requirements are that entrants be within the ages of 18 and 28, never married, and look presentable in both a bathing suit and an evening dress.

There's no talent involved, said J. Rogers Vien, president of the Town and Country Shopping Center Merchants' Association.

The entire event will be staged in front of the Union Store on Friday, May 31, at 6:30 p.m. Entries will be judged by local TV and radio personalities.

"The Miss Universe pageant, which holds worldwide interest, is now in its eleventh year," Mrs. Cardi added with a commendable flair for history.

Last year beauties from fifty countries and 41 states were represented in the finals. Seen on television by an estimated 60,000,000 people, Miss Norma Nolan of Argentina was crowned "Miss Universe." Remember?

Interested young ladies should phone Mrs. Cardi at BE. 7-6116. This could be your lucky number.

Observations: One of the most useless contraptions of the day is the installation of clocks in automobiles.. Only one in a thousand ever produces the correct time . . . If more of the radio and TV commercials were laid end to end the programs would be much more enjoyable . . . . One of the jokester friends advises that the missionaries have made such progress with the cannibals that they now eat with knife and fork and will not eat meat on Friday . . .

Any Lesson For The Gals?

A lot has been said about the Rockefeller wedding and far be it from me to add my two cents' worth, but knowing it will stir up some pros and cons I present herewith a reprint from Ann Gerber's column from Chicago North Side Sunday Star:

"There is a lesson to be learned in the fact that Gov. Nelson Rockefeller was just remarried—to a young woman nicknamed "Happy." Did this eligible man take unto himself a bride called "Naggy" or "Droopy" or "Grumpy?" Oh ,no! Rocky knows a good woman when he sees one, a gal who is fun to be with, who takes life with a smile, who doesn't complain constantly, and so through the years she's been called "Happy." (Yes, we agree it is easier to be "Happy" with wealth and good looks, but anyone can be a delight to know.) What would your husband nickname you? Fatty? Creepy? Sexy? Messy? Sunny? Take your pick!

Any reader of a Hartley Newspaper is eligible to participate in the "Confederate" Money Contest. Each week one "5" emblem and 20 emblems containing the number "1" are placed within the advertisements of 21 separate Hartley Newspapers. All the emblems are stamped in a bright colored ink and do not appear in every newspaper... only selected, individual copies.

The "5" emblem is worth $5 in "Confederate" money. However, if the finder is a paid subscriber of Hartley Newspaper the value jumps to the entire amount of the current "Confederate" Money Jackpot. This week's jackpot is worth $179 in "Confederate" cash.

Twenty copies of this week's edition of Hartley Newspapers were stamped with the number "1" in the bright colored ink. Each of these emblems is worth $1 in "Confederate" cash to the finder.

All "1" emblems may be redeemed by either mailing or bringing the page containing the winning insignia to the Hartley Newspaper office in order to win the prize.

"Confederate" money can be spent just like cash at the place of business of any advertiser in a Hartley Newspaper during the week the winner wishes to spend it.

Employes of Hartley Newspapers, including carriers, and their families are not eligible to participate in this contest.

beck and call of the Devil. She is now assigned to put her seduction powers to work on the ballplayer to keep his thoughts away from returning to his wife. Lenny Schottenstein sings and dances the role of Lucifer's luscious lovely.

Written by George Abbott and Douglass Walloo on the basis of a best-selling novel, "The Year the Yankees Lost the Pennant," by Wallop, "Damn Yankees" is enlivened by such popular songs as the incendiary "Whatever Lola Wants," the rousing "You Gotta Have Heart," the sentimental "A Man Doesn't Know," the mambo number "Who's Got the Pain," and a hoe-down "Shoeless Joe from Hannibal, Mo."

Larry Kent is seen as the anxious manager of the Senators, Julian Barnett as the owner of the ball club, Bea Roth as a persistantly inquisitive sports-writer, and Thelma Nutis and Marilyn Samelson appear as close friends of the bleeding fan's wife.

The yodeling cavorting ballplayers are led by Allen Gundersheimer, Jr., Abe Green, Eddie Kaye, Julie Vogel and Roger Allen. Other Washington Senators include William Bugh, Larry Mann, Richard Mickelson, Marv Nesson and Charles Smith.

Also in the cast of over 40 performers are Hartley Newspaper Editor John Auble, Marv Bonowitz, Mira Cohen, Hy Copeland, Marge Copeland, Mary Copeland, Peter Copeland, Roger Copeland, Sema Edison, Trudie Green, Henry Grinsfelder, Muriel Gundersheimer, Rosa Kerstein, Mary Kostanden, Lois Leon, Fred Michael, Lee Moser, Judy Newpoff, Rick Norris, Gil Parish, Lynne Roth, Gail Ruben, Idell Ruben, Marshall Ruben, Allen Ringer, Bonnie Segal, Roz Sonenstein and Sanford Watzman.

Tickets are now on sale at The Jewish Center at $1.75 for weekend performances, and at $1 and $1.75 for weeknight performances. For reservations, call BE. 1-2731.

Car Abruptly Enters Store

A freak accident put John W. Ballard, owner of the Whitehall Confectionery, 4227 E. Main-st, in the hospital and damaged his store to the extent of $1500.

Using a jumper battery, Ballard was attempting to start another car when, apparently unaware that his own car was in gear, he raced the engine, and entered the confectionery via the concrete block wall.

A clerk, Sophia Grakes, 1025 Pierce-av, and an out-of-town customer suffered only monor injuries.

Ballard was taken to Doctor's Hospital with chest and only minor injuries.

Whitehall Police Pick Up Suspects

Whitehall police arrested John Hartford Ball of Mansfield in a local motel last week after being advised by city police that he was suspected of abortion.

His automobile was spotted from the air by a city detective and trailed to the motel. Mansfield authorities had alerted the Columbus department to be on the lookout for Ball.

When the Whitehall police arrested the alleged abortionist they also took in a young couple found with him in the room and confiscated a bag of surgical instruments. Those with him were identified only as an unmarried woman and her boy friend.

Bexley High School LION's ROAR

By Connie McCleary

'Festival Of Arts' Set For Friday Night At 8

Bexley's choir, band and art department will together presen the high school's annual "Festival of the Arts" tomorrow evening, Friday, at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium.

The band concert will include numbers from "West Side Story" by Leonard Bernstein; "Adagio-Tarantella" by Ernesto Cavallini, with a special clarinet solo by the band's student teacher; and "March Chorale" by Robert Washburn.

In combination with the mixed ensemble and choir, respectively, the band will do "On Stage With Cole Porter" and "Turn Back O Man."

"Set Down Servant," "Aftergiod," and "Number Please" will be part of the choir's presentation.

An art exhibit will follow.

Bexley High School Band awards were presented to 34 Bexley students at the 16th annual band banquet held May 10 at the Fiesta Club.

Those receiving three semester awards (band letters) included:

The five seniors receiving seven semester awards were Gerrie Bain, Barb Buker, Ed Stein, Johnny Johnson and Mary Sue Martin.

Spanish Club held its annual banquet Tuesday evening, May 14, in student lounge. A Spanish motif was carried out in decorations. Entertainment by the "Four Mistakes," a Bexley senior girls' quartet; initiation of officers; and the presentation of gifts to Spanish Club advisors Mrs. Jacqueline Kennend and Lawrence Smith followed the meal.

Winding Hollow Country Club was the scene of Dramatics Club's annual banquet held last Wednesday evening.

Twenty-one club members were inducted into National Thespian Society, the national dramatics honorary.

The new members include: Joyce Lowy, Perry Zylberstein, Dick Berman, John Grossman, Joanne Coopersmith, Pan Finke, Carolyn Stegmiller, Tom Williamson, Lynn Elsass, Bettie Hudson, Barbara Kaplan, Ronnie Wynd, Debbie Main, David Shultz, Susie Wasserstrom, Kit Butler, Linda Hartlerode, Dody Schwartz, Barbara Klages, Claire Baas and Sue Butler.

"A Roman Festival of Flowers" is the theme of Bexley Latin Club's annual banquet tonight in the student lounge. Decorations carry out the theme in depicting a Roman garden scene. This year's freshman initiates into Latin Club will serve as slaves at the affair. The program following dinner will include presentation of skits, installation of 1963-'64 officers, and various contests.

"Aiming for Action" will be the theme of this year's Girls' Athletic Club banquet slated next Thursday, May 23, at Ilonka's.

Installation of officers, announcements of 1963-'64 sport directors and presentation of athletic awards will be included.

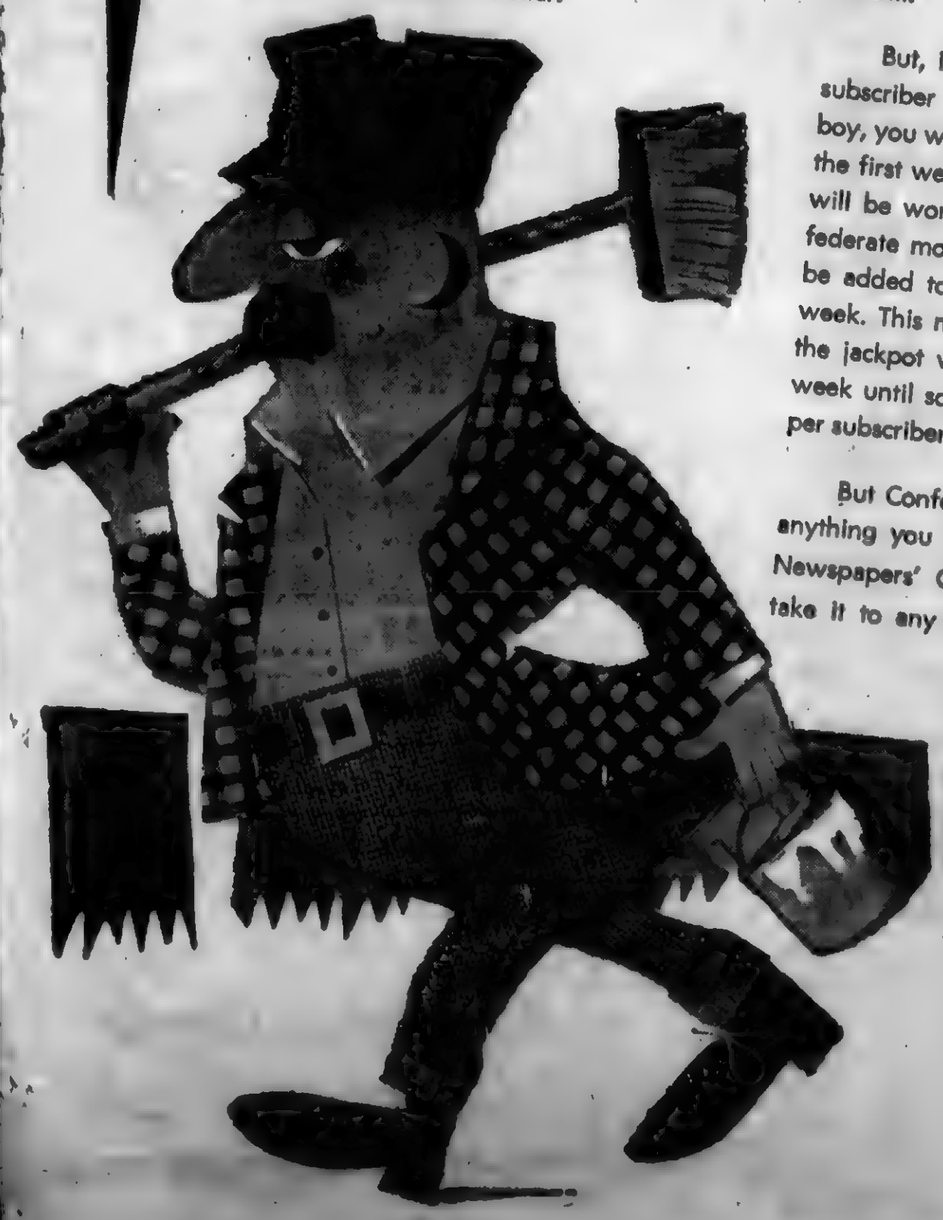
Confederate Money Is Good Again!



Hartley Newspapers Confederate Money–That Is!

Here's How:

Yes, sir, Rebel currency is as good as any present day American money, that is if you are a reader of one of the Hartley Suburban Newspapers.

1 Starting with this week's issue a little Insignia like the one shown at the left will be printed in 20 different copies of these papers. If you find one of them in your copy it is worth a Hartley Newspapers' Confederate Dollar.

Each week one Insignia like the number 5 at the right will be printed in one ad in some copy of one of the Hartley Newspapers. If your copy is the one, you merely bring or mail it to the office of Hartley Newspapers, 2465 West Broad St. not later than noon Monday following publication and you will be given a Hartley Newspaper $5 Confederate Bill.

But, if your are a paid in advance subscriber or regularly pay your newsboy, you will receive the Jackpot. During the first week of the contest the Jackpot will be worth $25. All unclaimed Confederate money offered each week will be added to the Jackpot the following week. This means that in all probability the jackpot will continue to grow each week until some lucky Hartley Newspaper subscriber cashes it in.

But Confederate money isn't worth anything you say. Not so with Hartley Newspapers' Confederate Money. Just take it to any store advertising in this 5 week's issue of a Hartley Newspaper and it can be spent just like any other currency. Hartley Newspapers in turn will redeem all such currency at full value when turned in by a Hartley Newspaper advertiser. Further details of the contest are explained on Page One of this week's Hartley Newspapers.

If you have been receiving a copy of any of the Hartley Newspapers each week from your carrier or by mail and have not paid your carrier or paid in advance for your mail subscription, you are not eligible to win the jackpot. So, call BR. 4-1155, ask for the Circulation Dept. and determine the status of your subscription right now.

To Be Sure You Don't Miss Your Chance To Cash In On This Big Event, Pay Your Carrier Every Month, Or Mail In Your Subscription Now!

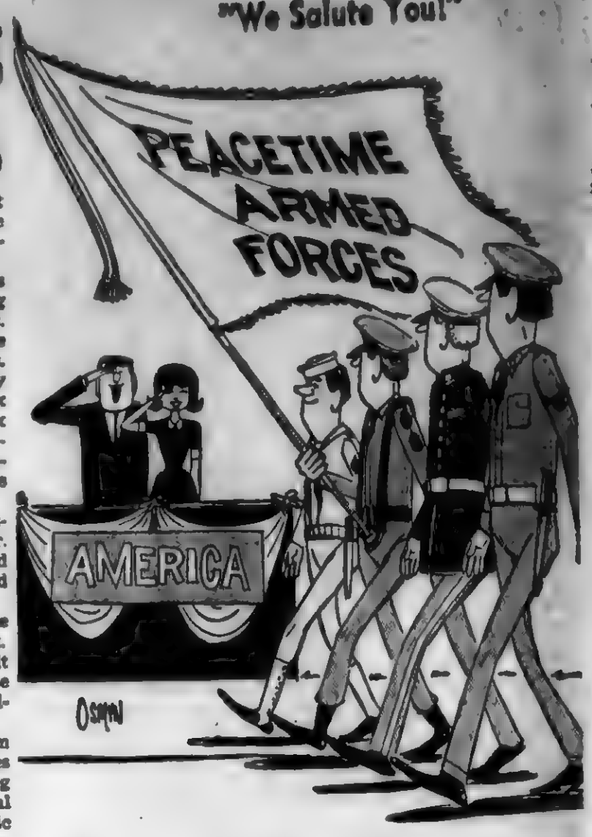
Cut Spending Before Taxes

We are told by the Kennedy Administration that a tax cut in the lower income brackets will stimulate buying power and result in an upturn for the total economy. This does not seem unreasonable.

Our national economic problem, however, demands something more effective than providing added buying power for those who are already healthy consumers. What we desperately need is a vehicle by which more Americans will be placed in the healthy consumer class.



Our government and legislative leaders know very well that such a goal calls for a lessening of the tax burden nearer the top than at the bottom of the tax schedules. The tools are available to build a tax structure that will release capital for investment in industrial expansion. The natural by-product of more jobs will result in more buying power for more people.

There is one drawback to this approach. The professional politicians do not see it as much of a vote-getter. We think that these same political pros have overlooked (or looked over) the native intelligence of the so-called lower income bracket citizen they purport to help.

Many of the people who stand to benefit from the proposed tax reduction simply don't want any part of it. Why? Because they will never buy the theory that it is good practice to cut the source of federal revenue while at the same time increasing government expenditures.

Tax reforms? Certainly. Let's see that Uncle Sam is not victimized by a tax system replete with loopholes for the sharpies. But let's be just as firm in demanding a tax reduction that will BEST stimulate the national economy. And let's see to it that any reduction in basic operating funds is matched by a cutback in expenditures.

"We Salute You!"

NO WONDER THE HOUSE ISN'T READY

Frosting On The Cake

By "UNCLE DOC" ROSS — U.S.A.

One of the most heartwarming signs of the times is the turn to the right in so many aspects of our national life. The educational housecleaning, so long overdue, is gaining momentum everywhere.

It is again respectable for teachers to make kids mind and judges are lowering the boom on punks and their parents alike. Junior is no longer king of all he surveys in more and more homes. Sissy is no longer a glorified Cleopatra who has tried for too long to rule the roost and behave like age 22 at age 12.

More lawns are being mowed; more garages cleaned out; and more backyard gardens are planted and cared for than we have seen in many a year. Every school has growing societies who have awakened to the age-old truth that work is respectable.

Damage suits against parents are being won every day in court after court for all kinds of vandalism and destruction of private property. When Mom and Pop really get hurt in the "pocket nerve," they wake up and come to their senses again. Many a wild kid who thought he could get away with murder because "he is a juvenile," is now getting the bad news both at home and in court.

STRICTLY FRESH

When the grass looks greener on the other side of the fence, it may be they take better care of it over there.

The best way to make the next generation better is to grow them better.

There is no right way to do the wrong thing.

Always borrow from pessimists—they never expect to get their money back, anyway.

Claims Collection Agencies Careless

To The Editor:

My experience is one that I am sure many others have had too. I wonder if any one knows how this organized racket can be stopped without resorting to law-suits all over the nation?

It is not uncommon for persons to have names alike. The sad part of this situation is that persons with an A-1 credit rating often are ruined by persons of the same name who run up bills all over the country and who are collection agencies' delights. For if it were not for such persons these agencies would be out of business real quick, so we must assume that they are not investigated by any legal body and as a result have been working this racket at the expense of persons with the same names.

I have been getting bills, threatening phone calls, been visited by collectors, had my wages garnisheed, threatened with law suits etc, from 1919 up to the present. They come from as far off as Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo, and all charged to the same person — whose first and last name is the same as mine.

So a man jumps a bill and the collection agency gets the job of collecting it. They run down every one in the city directory and telephone book who has the same last name and do not attempt to find out if it is the one they want or not. They simply fire you a nasty letter or call you up and demand payment.

This has been happening to me for the past 40 odd years and in each case it can be traced to some person who has jumped a bill. What good is the Better Business Bureau, credit bureaus, etc, if they do not stop the credit of such persons? Must we spend our small income in law suits to protect our credit and good name, or will the law do it for us?

Lauds Flag Offer

To The Editor:

Capitol City Chapter 3, Disabled American Veterans, wishes to express its hearty approval and commend you for the promotion of the way to secure a 50-star American flag so that "Old Glory" can be displayed on patriotic days.

We feel that the lack of displaying our National Emblem on patriotic days by the citizens of Columbus is astounding.

We salute you in this effort to place in the hands of our citizens a 50-star American flag at a very low cost. May the demand for them far exceed your expectations.

OF GODS AND GOD

Their mills
Grind slowly while
The gods decide the fate
Of mortal men.
So men once thought.
But now, still ignorant,
They can at least believe
That one God reigns supreme
In His own Universe
And man is heir
To His eternal grace.

Sometime in the dim, dark, dusty past, legend, folklore, and mythology began to emerge as history. Meanwhile, the ancients had created in their own minds a galaxy of gods, some with human attributes who ruled mankind, his environment, and his fate. Among them were the supreme Grecian god Zeus and his Roman counterpart Jupiter.

Now, as millions believe, the Hebrew Jehovah, the Christian God, and Moslem Allah are the one supreme Creator and Ruler of the Universe.

Perhaps Occidentials can never fully understand the great Oriental religions. But in the West, most believe with varying interpretations, that the one God is one of justice, mercy, and eternal grace.

It says here . . . .
Faith is the bridge between mortality and immortality.

Need Statue To Man Who Lost His Shirt

In front of the old sub-treasury building on Wall Street there stands a statue of George Washington, marking the spot on which the first president took his oath of office. Down the street is the New York Stock Exchange. In front of the exchange someone ought to erect a statue of an eager little man with a slightly pointed head holding a fistful of securities. The man should be bare from the waist up — symbolic of those who have lost their shirts in the market.

Jones

Both George and the little man deserve the respect of the American people. George nursed the infant nation through the hazards of federalism on the right and wild-eyed democracy on the left until it learned how to walk as a republic. And the shirtless one provided the free market that produced a vigorous economy. You can't have the right to win without assuming the right to lose.

To millions of the uninitiated, Wall Street is a gigantic poker game in which the losers must balance off the winners. This isn't true. More can be won on Wall Street than need be lost. For this isn't a rigid game of deuces wild or spit-in-the-ocean where a fixed amount of wealth merely changes hands. If all the automobiles are selling well all the automobile stocks can go up. A rise in one doesn't have to mean a fall in another. Discounting temporary fluctuations, over the long period the cumulative value of all securities traded has risen enormously simply because the wealth of the country has risen likewise.

But the trouble with a stock exchange is that the value of a stock is judged not simply in terms of the financial health of the company or in the percentage of its dividend return, but also on a much more rubbery theory, namely what you think someone else will think it's going to be worth next month. Here's where the crap shooting comes in.

Wall Street has always been full of "glamour stocks" and "growth stocks," many of them trading at 40 and 50 times earnings. Some companies that never even showed a profit have attracted eager buyers. Nor have these buyers been necessarily insane. Consider a company that plows most of its earnings into research and plant expansion, or that is engaged in developing new products that may have enormous potential popularity. It can't be judged on the same basis of — let's say — a railroad stock where the price-earnings ratio may be favorable and the dividend return even generous, but where volume has been slipping and deferred maintenance haunts its future.

But glamour fields attract heavy competition. And a firm that gained preeminence in vacuum tubes can get walloped by transistors, and now some transistor functions may pass to the tunnel diodes. A maker of "space-age" hardware can be made or broken by the shift of a government contract. In the field of science the industrial game of king-on-the-hill is a rough one.

How about taking refuge in the "blue chips?" It's hard to believe that anything very bad will happen to American Telephone or General Motors or the great integrated oils. But where are the blue chips of yesteryear? The New Haven Railroad that supported the foundations of many a mansion in Newport and Palm Beach is in bankruptcy. Giant U.S. Steel went from a high of 91 in 1961 to a low of 38 less than a year later. International Business Machines lost almost half its market value in the shakeout last spring.

So you want to play it smart. You look for "special situations." It's not hard to get on a lot of mailing lists and for a small price you can be let in on the identities of stocks that "seem ready for an upside break-out" or are about to complete "a sharp saucer movement." But there's a fine old saying, "If you're so smart, why ain't you rich?" And you can't hang the man who sells you a bum guess for a dollar as long as he admits he's guessing.

The legitimate brokerage houses are great hedgers, for the more honest a Wall Street observer is the more he covers bets in all directions. One assures customers that the market is healthy "but is likely to remain in a trading range." Another advises: "Selective buying may be undertaken on price dips." A third cautions: "A constructive investment policy remains in order." And a fourth unloads this: "As yet, there has been no significant surge in earnings to bring about persistent aggressive buying for the rise. At the same time, since business is not deteriorating, it may prove a mistake to be guided altogether by traditional methods of security evaluation."

How do you like your eggs?

But the worst thing about the stock market is the stampede factor. Industrials lost a third of their value in the May break last year. Yet the value of American industry changed hardly at all, since investment was constant and business was good. Someone has said, "The stock market is the only barometer that makes its own weather."

So hail to the shirtless loser. In any system guaranteed to have no losers everybody loses. The managed economies of communist states theoretically give everyone an equal share in industry and fix output and rig prices, ostensibly at least, for the benefit of all. And the result is chronic and universal want. It is only where risk is acknowledged, and is encouraged by the real chance of reward, that a mass economy functions well.

The chance-taker, who ruefully exercises the right to lose, is an authentic American hero.

Digit Fidgeters – Try This New Method

It's quite possible anthropologists in the far future will be able to discern the skeletons of primitive 20th Century Americans by the enlarged bones of the right forefinger.

And for this little bit of sleuth-ease they will be able to thank the Bell Telephone Company and its finger-muscle-building 11-digit direct dial system. Something like the bulging calves of dancers.

McPeek

But, the phone company's switch to the all-digit system has brought me nothing but headaches. I am one of those unfortunates whose memories draw blanks when it comes to numbers. To place a call to an unfamiliar number, I must write the number on paper and clumsily refer to it no less than two or three times while dialing.

Perhaps a reporter friend in Chicago, also afflicted with a number memory block, has found the answer. He substitutes the digits of phone numbers he frequently uses to letters that form words. He uses the association method. By studying the combination of letters on each finger hole of the dial (excepting numbers 1 and 0) he forms words that fit the person whose number he is calling.

For instance, he says he has substituted the letters FAT-HEAD for the phone number of a certain pompous city official. Naturally, he no longer has trouble remembering that particular number.

Other samples of his method, he said, include:

TIC-TOCK — a lady friend whose habitual tardiness indicates an inability to tell time.

IOU-MUCH — a brother who is always putting the bite on him.

DUM-BELL — His editor's home phone number.

HEL-BENT — Another lady friend whose habits are somewhat fast.

NOT-SICC — A co-worker who chronically complains of his health.

SIL-LILY — The waitress in his favorite giggle parlor.

OLE-BAGH — His former mother-in-law.
SAE-TENN — His bookie.
SAD-SAKK — An assistant to the mayor.
MUS-CLES — His former wife.
GOO-PERR — A cutie, whose brain he compares to a peanut.
CUM-CROSS — The finance company which holds title to his car.
UPA-ATEE — A doll in the circulation department who ignores his friendly advances.
RES-RUME — A saloon where he conducts social research.
BUL-HAID — The home number of the cutie in the circulation who ignores him.

Apparently I don't even have a knack for converting numbers to words. The only one I could come up with was TEE-OFFF, the number of a golfing champion. But little good it does me. He refuses to play with me since the day I carelessly walked across his line of putt during a bingle-bangle-bungle match in which he dropped $1.30. To heck with him. Who needs the number of a poor loser?

'The Utopia Of Man, Or Kingdom Of God?'

Matthew 16:26: "For what will it profit a man, if he gains the whole world, and forfeits his life? Or what shall a man give in return for his life?"

The most perplexing question troubling men today is still the age-old question of idolatry.

While in the first two of the 10 Commandments we are reminded that the Lord our God is one God, and that we are to have no other gods before Him modern men have been reaping the heartache of the violation of the very essence of these commandments. Men of today are more intelligent than to fashion idolatrous images such as golden calves like the Hebrews of antiquity. Nevertheless, the faith of most men today vainly hopes that the intelligence and technology of this modern age shall eventuate in the perfect way of life and the highest standard of living—this stands as the most insidious idol ever fashioned before the very eyes of God!

Rev. Bosworth

Our whole modern civilization occupies its entire industry and attention so exclusively upon the seemingly stupendous accomplishments of our contemporary age that virtually all of us find ourselves a part of this most fantastic idol. The idol is none other than modern man himself, who is so impressed with his abilities and accomplishments that he pitifully and vainly imagines he has utterly no need of God, indeed, so he thinks, if there even is any God at all!

Truly this is the height of idolatry, for we are now beginning to reap the insidious fruits of this monster. International communism is one tyrannical child of this idolatry which has given birth to the notion that man is capable of constructing his very destiny, utopia, the "perfect and classless state."

The answer to the ridiculousness of our modern situation is still perfectly posed by the troublesome question Jesus raised in the text mentioned above: "For what will it profit a man, if he gains the whole world (a perfect utopia), and forfeits his life?"

The Bible from beginning to end, and especially by its proclamation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, forever affirms that by the sheer grace of God alone shall men be saved from even their most charming sin, modern idolatry, the vain hope in their own ability to work out and earn that which comes solely as a gift from God to the penitent — salvation!

What can we do? We must destroy our faith in the accomplishments of men, which is utter folly when thought to be sufficient to win God's favor, and see such accomplishments for what they are; idols, false gods. We must once again so trust in the Lord and His promise unto us when we are truly faithful that our accomplishments can be solely expressions of grateful love unto Him for His mercy unto us.

Then we shall see Him use what has heretofore been our idols, to the glory of His own kingdom. Then we shall see Him wrought what is the very height of vanity for us to try, the very Kingdom of God in the presence eventually of all men. This is what Jesus meant when He said, "If any man would come after Me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow Me. For whoever would save his life (in the vain hopes of utopia) shall lose it, and whoever would lose his life for My sake will find it."

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Asparagus, Greenhouse Tomatoes In Season

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:
Vegetables—Asparagus, greenhouse tomatoes, lettuce, celery, new potatoes, carrots.
Fruits—Bananas, local rhubarb, cooking apples.
Meats—Fryers, beef chucks, steak "specials," hams and picnics, large eggs.
Other Foods — Dairy products, canned; corn, tomato products, peaches; frozen lima beans, corn, peas.

Now is the time to enjoy two local vegetables to the hilt—asparagus and greenhouse tomatoes. Producers talk—asparagus and greenhouse tomatoes. Producers this week.

Mrs. Franks

For asparagus, the season is short. About two more weeks of heavy cuttings—if the weather stays favorable—then lighter supplies until mid-June. After that, fresh asparagus is gone until next year.

Peak season, as usual, brings the best asparagus to market and at the most favorable prices to consumers. If you want to enjoy this delectable spring vegetable at the fullest, select bunches that look fresh, ones that have tightly closed, compact tips and green tender stalks. It's perishable, so keep it cold and use it soon for best in flavor.

If you plan to buy asparagus for freezing from a retailer or producer, it's well to check with him in advance as to when he expects a good, fresh supply. Like other vegetables, top quality is the only kind it pays you to freeze.

GREENHOUSE TOMATO growers in our area tell us that they are not only in peak of harvest, but also that this spring's crop is one of the best they have ever grown, qualitywise.

The price of these tomatoes to producers started off low this year, due to competition from the big supply of vineripe tomatoes. You'll find them priced in food markets according to size and grade. If you buy a pound of U.S. No. 1 greenhouse tomatoes you have a pound of tomatoes to eat—there's little or no waste. These are especially nice for serving whole as a salad. The larger and unclassified ones, that sell for less per pound, can be a good buy for tossed salads or cut pieces, if there is not too much waste.

Regardless of the grade you buy, the skins of greenhouse tomatoes are tender and need not be removed. This is not true of vineripe and tube tomatoes, so don't confuse them with greenhouse tomatoes; they are very different products.

OTHER FRESH VEGETABLE SUPPLIES

Early reports are that overall supplies of fresh vegetables will be about the same this spring as last. Substantially smaller supplies of spring cabbage and field tomatoes are expected as well as slightly less spring lettuce.

On the bright side, prospects are for larger production of a number of crops, including early spring snap beans, broccoli, cauliflower, cucumbers, sweet corn, and spring celery and green peppers. Prices into mid-June are expected to average below those of a year earlier.

We are not surprised when people express a lack of information about the funeral director's service. Need for a mortician comes to the average family only once in fourteen years.

The Knowledge of the Lord

Habakkuk 2:14. "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

The Church is chosen of God to spread the good news that God has a plan to redeem men and reconcile them unto Himself through the vicarious sacrifice of Jesus Christ our Lord. The Church will be so successful in spreading this glorious knowledge in the world that God says the earth will be as full of it as the waters that fill the ocean. Attend church and become a part of this great undertaking.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Warriors March On To State Regionals

Eastmoor's baseball Warriors carry the hopes of the cities' Eastside into battle tomorrow afternoon as the Marsh Mobberly-coached nine engages Lima Senior on Radnor's AA regional tourney site at 1 p.m.

The Warrior Club, currently battling for the City League diamond crown with Linden McKinley, picked up a share of the district honors last Friday with 6-2 win over Mt. Vernon.

ANOTHER AREA nine, Whitehall, was not so fortunate, dropping a 7-1 verdict to West, who will join Eastmoor in the regional dogfight.

Jerry Myers, who has been the backbone of the Warrior mound corps this spring, picked up his eighth win in nine tries this season with a six-hit, 14 strikeout performance against the Jackets.

Eastmoor, who collected six hits, made the most of seven costly Mt. Vernon bobbles which resulted in five unearned runs.

MYERS WAS the only Warrior with more than one hit but as things turned out Eastmoor didn't really need a hit or two to score. The winners sewed up the victory in the fifth frame with three runs.

In that frame, centerfielder Dean Ishida scored a run (without benefit of a hit) on three consecutive Jacket errors. Eastmoor's lone extra base blow was provided by Dana Van Horn who plated a run with a triple.

Whitehall, with Mike Armbruster collecting the Ram's lone hit, was victimized by West's sudden long ball power.

The Rams trailed only 2-1 entering the sixth but pitcher John Morlan, catcher Steve Prater and shortstop Pete Krull picked on three consecutive Bill Dildine pitches for circuit wallops and that was the ball game.

ST. CHARLES swept a pair from Newark Catholic Saturday, 9-3 and 7-3.

Joe Breitneicher's homer was the big blow in the first game while Bob Cull collected a triple and a two-bagger, good for four RBIs.

John Pettorini took over the hitting duties in the nightcap, banging out a triple and pair of singles which plated a pair of runs.

SPRINGFIELD CENTRAL Catholic downed Hartley twice the same day, 4-3 and 2-1.

Steve McGrew's homer wasn't enough to prevent the Hawks loss in the opener as Springfield came up with a pair of runs in the sixth to win.

Jack Diamond's five-hitter went for naught in the nightcap as Catholic pushed across the winning run in the final frame on a Hawk bobble.

CATCHER LEE Landsittel's two-run single in the sixth inning provided Delaware with the impetus to edge Bexley, 2-1, in a Central Buckeye League contest.

East scored all its runs in the first inning and then hung on for a 5-1 win over South. Jim Brown and Bob Drez each drove in a pair or runs in the big frame on a single and triple respectively.

Dennis Day scattered eight hits to pace Walnut Ridge to a 5-3 win over Brookhaven. The Scotties sewed up the win for Day by breaking a 2-2 deadlock with three fifth-inning tallies.

'Good Hit, Good Glove' Not Enough Anymore

Last week a friend of ours, who is presently negotiating the purchase of a local cabaret, was bemoaning the fact that he had missed out on the sponsorship of a softball team this spring.

It had always been our belief that the advertisement scrolled across the broad shoulders and back of the heavy-hitting center fielder completed the relationship between player and sponsor.

BUT APPARENTLY we have been mistaken all these years. The system is a bit more complicated than that.

Personnel selection problems alone are staggering. For example, the confirmed vegetarian can't play for a meat packing company and the guy who can't stand anchovies probably won't be on Pasquale's Pizza roster regardless of his hitting average.

Our friend's problem is even more ticklish. "In many leagues, the unwritten law prescribes that the losers treat the winners to several rounds of "coke" at the winner's establishment," he said.

"FOR THIS reason, it's important to recruit players who not only can win ball games with the big hit but who are also of a thirsty nature."

The most embarrassing angle of the whole situation occurs, however, when the better ball players sign with more than one club. It's not uncommon at all for a player to switch diamonds and jerseys the same evening and play for the competition.

We thought we could cheer our friend up by giving him a tip on a fellow we know who might be coaxed into wearing the local colors next season.

"HOW'S HE hit?" he asked.

"Like an Al Kaline."

"Got any speed?"

"Runs like Maury Wills."

"How about his throwing arm?"

"Brings it out of left field like Rocky Colavito."

"What about his stomach?"

"Ulcers," we admitted sheepishly.

HE LOOKED at us as if he had just entered the "twilight zone." Just like we said —"good hit, good glove" just isn't good enough any more.

BIT OF WIT(T) — City Recreation Director Nick Barack has his committee selected to study the "interference problems" created by the city's hopes of constructing a second municipal golf course under the approach to Port Columbus on E. Hamilton-rd (Wit an Wisdom, Mar. 21).

Barack has received a reply from the Recreation Department at Oakland, Calif., where a similar situation was considered. "At Oakland, the airport runway runs through the middle of the course with fairways and greens on either side," Barack said.

"The difference between our two situations involves the distractions and hazards of the runway takeoff (Oakland) and the low flying approach over the entire course (Columbus)."

BARACK ADMITTED that the Oakland course is presently under construction and they apparently were "willing to take the chance" that that city's golfers would patronize the course under the existing conditions.

But until Barack's committee gets out for a "couple of rounds" on the local turf, the question of whether this city will go ahead with its plans on the 135 acres is still literally up in the air.

Speedway Sets Opening Sunday Night

BY BILL GRAY

Sunday night at 7 is the time for the opening of the 1963 season at Columbus Motor Speedway, with Super Modifieds and late models competing in at least seven events. The first event of the evening gets underway at 8.

The late - models, 1954 through 1961 cars, will be running their first season on a regular schedule at the Williams-rd one-third blacktop oval.

IN APPEARANCE these cars look like the cars that you and I drive on the streets and highways with the exception of many safety features that have been added such as roll-bars and seat belts, plus other safety items.

The Super-Modifieds have been built from the ground up and there is no limitation to their engine sizes. These are the cars that have been running and holding the records at the South Side track.

Following opening night, racing at Columbus Motor Speedway will be held on Friday and Sunday nights with time trials starting at 7 p.m. and racing at 8.

Smallmouth Bass Hittin' At Erie, Local Streams

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors
By ROB COCHRAN

The fishing picture is warming up, and hottest news is from Lake Erie where the smallmouth bass are reported hitting in the island area. Eldon Hales, party boat captain operating out of Catawba Marine Sales, says the bass are off and running with good catches being made for about a week. One boat of anglers caught more than 100 smallmouths in a day.

This is some of the sportiest fishing to be found in Ohio. Although the lake is quite a distance from this area, more and more anglers are falling under Erie's spell. When you hit the smallmouths or white bass on a feeding spree up there, its a memorable experience.

ROLLIE RECOB, West Jefferson, reports that this has been a phenomenal spring for catching crappies in Big Darby Creek. "I've sold more crappie minnows this year than ever before, and the crappies are still hitting," said Recob.

Another observation from a bait dealer is that a few soft craws are being found and stream smallmouth bass hit good with the first general craw shedding.

It seems that when there are a lot of craws in the water, rather than the bass getting their fill they become greedy and try to eat them all. Fishing at such a time is advisable according to the old-timers.

SMALLMOUTH BASS are generally considered to be one of the top sport fishes in the state — it's good news when they are being caught at Lake Erie and in local waters [illegible].

Sportiest fishing at Lake Erie is with artificials, although many are taken on live baits. This spring surge of fishing occurs when the water temperature reaches 54 or 55 degrees, as it did last week.

The fish have not spawned yet, and will not be nearly so easy to find or catch a little later on. They are usually in shallow water now, four or five feet deep, and are particularly susceptible to spinners on the order of ABU, Shyster and Mepps.

THE MOST POPULAR way to fish for them is to let your boat drift parallel to shore and cast in toward shore, and by shore I mean one of the islands in western Lake Erie. If you have a strike or catch a fish or two, then start the motor and go back to windward and drift over the same spot. If you hit it lucky, this type of fishing can be fabulous.

One of the dangers of Lake Erie is the weather. Not only can a blow come up and endanger your safety, but you may drive all the way there and find a nor'easter whoopin' it up making fishing impossible.

And the wind doesn't blow for just an hour or two. It might blow for two or three days, and it may take another two or three days for the water to settle again and the fish to begin hitting.

BUT THE PRIZE of a good day on the lake is worth the chance. If the weatherman cooperates, you should plan on a smallmouth expedition right now. This bass bonanza may not last for more than another week.

If local streams are in good condition, then a bass trip right here at home will be in order. Soft craws may be available, but these bass will also take artificials. This is definitely the time to tackle our "sportiest fish."

Whitehall Runners Place Twice; Academy Thins' FCL Runner-Up

Whitehall's Rams, most active among area cindermen during the week, finished in the runner-up spot in two meets, placing third in another and fourth in a final taste of competition.

Academy nailed down the runner-up spot in the County Track Meet Friday at Canal Winchester, finishing 32 points behind winner Hamilton Township.

WHITEHALL'S closest brush with victory came in the Eastmoor Relays where the Rams (42) finished only four points behind the winning Central team (46).

The Pirates' George Trammell was the top point-getter with 19 markers but Mike Short (shot), Clark Fuller (broad jump), Don Smith (mile) and Walt Munk (880) all nabbed firsts for Whitehall.

Host Eastmoor, who finished in a fifth-place tie with Linden (18), had only one first place, that by Jim Clark, who set a new record in the pole vault with a bar-clearing performance of 12'6¾".

ACADEMY AND Walnut Ridge also competed in the meet — the Vikings picking up five points, the Scotties garnering two.

Earlier in the week, Arlington and Worthington tied for CBL honors, each collecting 61½ points as compared with Whitehall's 41 and Bexley's 14 (fourth place).

Fuller, Smith and Rick Ford were individual winners for the Rams while Rick Harbold picked up a first for the Lions.

AT ARLINGTON'S affair, Short's shot put effort helped the Rams to their 29½ points, good enough for third place behind winner Worthington and runner-up Arlington. Harbold and Tom Leukart picked up firsts in the pole vault and discus events, respectively, for the seventh place Lions (14).

At Mifflin, Whitehall got no firsts but garnered 18 points to tie the hosts for fourth behind winner Gahanna (56).

The distance running of Ed Laws and the Viking's mile relay team (Shepard, Holzman, Tucker and Larrimer) helped vault Academy into their runner-up spot at the County Meet.

LAWS RACED to victories in both the mile and 880 to pick up individual scoring honors for the Vikings but John Larrimer was close behind with second-place finishes in both the 100 and 440.

Academy's 880 relay team also took a second.

In the area's only other track action during the week, East overwhelmed Eastmoor, 78-40, in duel competition.

KENT SCHOOLFIELD (low hurdles mark, :19.5), Bob Martin (13 points) and Gail Lane (12½ points) were tops for the Bengals while Don Wray (mile), Mike Andrew (shot), Marc Smith (broad jump), Jim Clark (pole vault) and Ron Eiland (high jump) picked up firsts for the Warriors.

New Development May Change Address To Simple Numbers

By ED CHURCHILL

The Columbus Post Office is doing its share to help U.S. Postmaster General J. Edward Day please congressional economists by aiding in the development of "ZIP."

In the not-too-distant future "ZIP" (Zoning Improvement Plan) will speed up mail delivery and cut handling costs by as much as one-third.

The POD says the method will eliminate six handlings of mail and be especially economical in handling of business mail from publishers, mail order houses, utilities companies, insurance companies, etc., which account for nearly 70 per cent of the 68 million pieces of mail each year.

Here's how it works:

- The country will be divided into 10 "national ZIP areas," designated by a single number. (Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Michigan would be "4".)
- Each area would then be divided into sections, designated by a two-digit number. (Columbus' section would be 32.)
- The fourth and fifth digits would be the zone number in the city (such as 24, 11, 06, etc.).

Large volume mailers will numerically address their mail and sort it before it hits the post office, all through the magic of electronic processing equipment.

When the mail comes into the sectional post office it is then dispatched to the branch office or that of a smaller community in the section.

But then the new system stops and the same 100-year-old method of hoofing it around town by mail carriers takes over.

Just exactly when this new program will go into effect is not known yet, but Post Office Department spokesmen say it won't be too long.

Of course, help is needed to get the program off the ground.

Right now the Post Office Department is asking that all return addresses contain the sender's zone number so that large-volume mailers will have the last two digits of the "ZIP" code number to include in the address.

Also, after July 1, patrons are requested to ask their postman what his "ZIP" code number is.

Taxes Subject Of Town Meeting

The Columbus Town Meeting, to be seen on WBNS-TV, Sunday, May 19, from 4 to 5 p.m., will deal with "Ohio's Current Income: Are Additional Taxes Needed?" The program will be re-broadcast at 9:10 the same evening on WBNS Radio.

Discussing the subject will be Senator Frank King, Democrat Minority Leader of the Ohio Senate; Dr. George W. Thatcher, Miami University, Department of Economics, who is the director of tax revision alternatives for the Ohio tax system; Senator Roy L. Gardner, Republican member of the Ohio Senate Finance Committee, and Representative Ralph Fisher, Republican chairman of the Ohio House Finance Committee. Huntington Carlile will serve as moderator.

Viewers are invited to participate in the discussion by calling WBNS-TV while the program is in session.

Warriors March On To State Regionals

Eastmoor's baseball Warriors carry the hopes of the cities' Eastside into battle tomorrow afternoon as the Marsh Mobberly-coached nine engages Lima Senior on Radnor's AA regional tourney site at 1 p.m.

The Warrior Club, currently battling for the City League diamond crown with Linden McKinley, picked up a share of the district honors last Friday with 6-2 win over Mt. Vernon.

ANOTHER AREA nine, Whitehall, was not so fortunate, dropping a 7-1 verdict to West, who will join Eastmoor in the regional dogfight.

Jerry Myers, who has been the backbone of the Warrior mound corps this spring, picked up his eighth win in nine tries this season with a six-hit, 14 strikeout performance against the Jackets.

Eastmoor, who collected six hits, made the most of seven costly Mt. Vernon bobbles which resulted in five unearned runs.

MYERS WAS the only Warrior with more than one hit but as things turned out Eastmoor didn't really need a hit ot score. The winners sewed up the victory in the fifth frame with three runs.

In that frame, centerfielder Dean Ishida scored a run (without benefit of a hit) on three consecutive Jacket errors. Eastmoor's lone extra base blow was provided by Dana Van Horn who plated a run with a triple.

Whitehall, with Mike Armbruster collecting the Ram's lone hit, was victimized by West's sudden long ball power.

The Rams trailed only 2-1 entering the sixth but pitcher John Morian, catcher Steve Prater and shortstop Pete Krull picked on three consecutive Bill Dildine pitches for circuit wallops and that was the ball game.

ST. CHARLES swept a pair from Newark Catholic Saturday, 9-3 and 7-3.

Joe Breitneicher's homer was the big blow in the first game while Bob Cull collected a triple and a two-bagger, good for four RBIs.

John Pettorini took over the hitting duties in the nightcap, banging out a triple and pair of singles which plated a pair of runs.

SPRINGFIELD CENTRAL Catholic downed Hartley twice the same day, 4-3 and 2-1.

Steve McGrew's homer wasn't enough to prevent the Hawks loss in the opener as Springfield came up with a pair of runs in the sixth to win.

Jack Diamond's five-hitter went for naught in the nightcap as Catholic pushed across the winning run in the final frame on a Hawk bobble.

CATCHER LEE Landsittel's two-run single in the sixth inning provided Delaware with the impetus to edge Bexley, 2-1, in a Central Buckeye League contest.

East scored all its runs in the first inning and then hung on for a 5-1 win over South. Jim Brown and Bob Drez each drove in a pair or runs in the big frame on a single and triple respectively.

Dennis Day scattered eight hits to pace Walnut Ridge to a 5-3 win over Brookhaven. The Scotties sewed up the win for Day by breaking a 2-2 deadlock with three fifth-inning tallies.

'Good Hit, Good Glove' Not Enough Anymore

Last week a friend of ours, who is presently negotiating the purchase of a local cabaret, was bemoaning the fact that he had missed out on the sponsorship of a softball team this spring.

It had always been our belief that the advertisement scrolled across the broad shoulders and back of the heavy-hitting center fielder completed the relationship between player and sponsor.

BUT APPARENTLY we have been mistaken all these years. The system is a bit more complicated than that.

Personnel selection problems alone are staggering. For example, the confirmed vegetarian can't play for a meat packing company and the guy who can't stand anchovies probably won't be on Pasquale's Pizza roster regardless of his hitting average.

Our friend's problem is even more ticklish. "In many leagues, the unwritten law prescribes that the losers treat the winners to several rounds of "coke" at the winner's establishment," he said.

"FOR THIS reason, it's important to recruit players who not only can win ball games with the big hit but who are also of a thirsty nature."

The most embarrassing angle of the whole situation occurs, however, when the better ball players sign with more than one club. It's not uncommon at all for a player to switch diamonds and jerseys the same evening and play for the competition.

We thought we could cheer our friend up by giving him a tip on a fellow we know who might be coaxed into wearing the local colors next season.

"HOW'S HE hit?" he asked.

"Like an Al Kaline."

"Got any speed?"

"Runs like Maury Wills."

"How about his throwing arm?"

"Brings it out of left field like Rocky Colavito."

"What about his stomach?"

"Ulcers," we admitted sheepishly.

HE LOOKED at us as if he had just entered the "twilight zone." Just like we said —"good hit, good glove" just isn't good enough any more.

BIT OF WIT(T) — City Recreation Director Nick Barack has his committee selected to study the "interference problems" created by the city's hopes of constructing a second municipal golf course under the approach to Port Columbus on E. Hamilton-rd (Wit an Wisdom, Mar. 21).

Barack has received a reply from the Recreation Department at Oakland, Calif., where a similar situation was considered. "At Oakland, the airport runway runs through the middle of the course with fairways and greens on either side," Barack said.

"The difference between our two situations involves the distractions and hazards of the runway takeoff (Oakland) and the low flying approach over the entire course (Columbus)."

BARACK ADMITTED that the Oakland course is presently under construction and they apparently were "willing to take the chance" that that city's golfers would patronize the course under the existing conditions.

But until Barack's committee gets out for a "couple of rounds" on the local turf, the question of whether this city will go ahead with its plans on the 135 acres is still literally up in the air.

Speedway Sets Opening Sunday Night

BY BILL GRAY

Sunday night at 7 is the time for the opening of the 1963 season at Columbus Motor Speedway, with Super Modifieds and late models competing in at least seven events. The first event of the evening gets underway at 8.

The late models, 1954 through 1961 cars, will be running their first season on a regular schedule at the Williams-rd one-third blacktop oval.

IN APPEARANCE these cars look like the cars that you and I drive on the streets and highways with the exception of many safety features that have been added such as roll-bars and seat belts, plus other safety items.

The Super-Modifieds have been built from the ground up and there is no limitation to their engine sizes. These are the cars that have been running and holding the records at the South Side track.

Following opening night, racing at Columbus Motor Speedway will be held on Friday and Sunday nights with time trials starting at 7 p.m. and racing at 8.

P-V Gals' Invitational Saturday

The Second Annual Girl Invitational Track Meet will be held at Pleasant View High School Saturday at 5:30 p.m.

Several Ohio Track Club girls will be representing their schools. Two of these girls are Estelle Baskerville, East High, who has just returned from Brazil after competing in the Pan American games, and Karen Davis, Upper Arlington High School, who is second only to Sue Knott, the nation's champion 440 runner.

OTHER AREA schools competing are Bishop Hartley, Central, Canal Winchester, Grove City, Franklin Heights, Gahanna, Reynoldsburg, Hilliard, West, Walnut Ridge, and Olentangy.

This event is sponsored by the Pleasant View G.A.A. Miss Lorene Wiles and Miss Barbara Call are advisors.

Smallmouth Bass Hittin' At Erie, Local Streams

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors By ROB COCHRAN

The fishing picture is warming up, and hottest news is from Lake Erie where the smallmouth bass are reported hitting in the island area. Eldon Hales, party boat captain operating out of Catawba Marine Sales, says the bass are off and running with good catches being made for about a week. One boat of anglers caught more than 100 smallmouths in a day.

This is some of the sportiest fishing to be found in Ohio. Although the lake is quite a distance from this area, more and more anglers are falling under Erie's spell. When you hit the smallmouths or white bass on a feeding spree up there, its a memorable experience.

ROLLIE RECOB, West Jefferson, reports that this has been a phenomenal spring for catching crappies in Big Darby Creek. "I've sold more crappie minnows this year than ever before, and the crappies are still hitting," said Recob.

Another observation from a bait dealer is that a few soft craws are being found and stream smallmouth bass hit good with the first general craw shedding.

It seems that when there are a lot of craws in the water, rather than the bass getting their fill they become greedy and try to eat them all. Fishing at such a time is advisable according to the old-timers.

SMALLMOUTH BASS are generally considered to be one of the top sport fishes in the state — it's good news when they are being caught at Lake Erie and in local waters too.

Sportiest fishing at Lake Erie is with artificials, although many are taken on live baits. This spring surge of fishing occurs when the water temperature reaches 54 or 55 degrees, as it did last week.

The fish have not spawned yet, and will not be nearly so easy to find or catch a little later on. They are usually in shallow water now, four or five feet deep, and are particularly susceptible to spinners on the order of ABU, Shyster and Mepps.

THE MOST POPULAR way to fish for them is to let your boat drift parallel to shore and cast in toward shore, and by shore I mean one of the islands in western Lake Erie. If you have a strike or catch a fish or two, then start the motor and go back to windward and drift over the same spot. If you hit it lucky, this type of fishing can be fabulous.

One of the dangers of Lake Erie is the weather. Not only can a blow come up and endanger your safety, but you may drive all the way there and find a nor'easter whoopin' it up making fishing impossible.

And the wind doesn't blow for just an hour or two. It might blow for two or three days, and it may take another two or three days for the water to settle again and the fish to begin hitting.

BUT THE PRIZE of a good day on the lake is worth the chance. If the weatherman cooperates, you should plan on a smallmouth expedition right now. This bass bonanza may not last for more than another week.

If local streams are in good condition, then a bass trip right here at home will be in order. Soft craws may be available, but these bass will also take artificials. This is definitely the time to tackle our "sportiest fish."

Whitehall Runners Place Twice; Academy Thins' FCL Runner-Up

Whitehall's Rams, most active among area cindermen during the week, finished in the runner-up spot in two meets, placing third in another and fourth in a final taste of competition.

Academy nailed down the runner-up spot in the County Track Meet Friday at Canal Winchester, finishing 32 points behind winner Hamilton Township.

WHITEHALL'S closest brush with victory came in the Eastmoor Relays where the Rams (42) finished only four points behind the winning Central team (46).

The Pirates' George Trammell was the top point-getter with 19 markers but Mike Short (shot), Clark Fuller (broad jump), Don Smith (mile) and Walt Munk (880) all nabbed firsts for Whitehall.

Host Eastmoor, who finished in a fifth-place tie with Linden (18), had only one first place, that by Jim Clark, who set a new record in the pole vault with a bar-clearing performance of 12'6¾".

ACADEMY AND Walnut Ridge also competed in the meet — the Vikings picking up five points, the Scotties garnering two.

Earlier in the week, Arlington and Worthington tied for CBL honors, each collecting 61½ points as compared with Whitehall's 41 and Bexley's 14 (fourth place).

Fuller, Smith and Rick Ford were individual winners for the Rams while Rick Harbold picked up a first for the Lions.

AT ARLINGTON'S affair, Short's shot put effort helped the Rams to their 29¼ points, good enough for third place behind winner Worthington and runner-up Arlington. Harbold and Tom Leukart picked up firsts in the pole vault and discus events, respectively, for the seventh place Lions (14).

At Mifflin, Whitehall got no firsts but garnered 18 points to tie the hosts for fourth behind winner Gahanna (56).

The distance running of Ed Laws and the Viking's mile relay team (Shepard, Holzman, Tucker and Larrimer) helped vault Academy into their runner-up spot at the County Meet.

LAWS RACED to victories in both the mile and 880 to pick up individual scoring honors for the Vikings but John Larrimer was close behind with second-place finishes in both the 100 and 440.

Academy's 880 relay team also took a second.

In the area's only other track action during the week, East overwhelmed Eastmoor, 78-40, in duel competition.

KENT SCHOOLFIELD (low hurdles mark, :19.5), Bob Martin (13 points) and Gail Lane (12½ points) were tops for the Bengals while Don Wray (mile), Mike Andrew (shot), Marc Smith (broad jump), Jim Clark (pole vault) and Ron Eiland (high jump) picked up firsts for the Warriors.

New Development May Change Address To Simple Numbers

By ED CHURCHILL

The Columbus Post Office is doing its share to help U.S. Postmaster General J. Edward Day please congressional economists by aiding in the development of "ZIP."

In the not-too-distant future "ZIP" (Zoning Improvement Plan) will speed up mail delivery and cut handling costs by as much as one-third.

The POD says the method will eliminate six handlings of mail and be especially economical in handling of business mail from publishers, mail order houses, utilities companies, insurance companies, etc., which account for nearly 70 per cent of the 68 million pieces of mail each year.

Here's how it works:

- The country will be divided into 10 "national ZIP areas," designated by a single number. (Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Michigan would be "4".)
- Each area would then be divided into sections, designated by a two-digit number. (Columbus' section would be 32.)
- The fourth and fifth digits would be the zone number in the city (such as 24, 11, 06, etc.).

Large volume mailers will numerically address their mail and sort it before it hits the post office, all through the magic of electronic processing equipment.

When the mail comes into the sectional post office it is then dispatched to the branch office or that of a smaller community in the section.

But then the new system stops and the same 100-year-old method of hoofing it around town by mail carriers takes over.

Just exactly when this new program will go into effect is not known yet, but Post Office Department spokesmen say it won't be too long.

Of course, help is needed to get the program off the ground.

Right now the Post Office Department is asking that all return addresses contain the sender's zone number so that large-volume mailers will have the last two digits of the "ZIP" code number to include in the address.

Also, after July 1, patrons are requested to ask their postman what his "ZIP" code number is.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Buckeye Federal Reveals New East Side Office Plans

A new Buckeye Savings and Loan Association East Side branch office will be constructed later this year at the intersection of Livingston and Harlow-avs, according to an announcement by William S. Guthrie, president.

At the same time it was announced that Guthrie was recently elected to the board of directors of Action, Inc., the national public service organization concerned with the physical environment in cities. Action functions especally as the voice of private enterprise in the renewal of cities.

The new Buckeye office on the East Side will be erected on stilts, according to preliminary architectural plans. It will serve as a "walk-in, drive-in" banking facility. The manager's office, safe deposit boxes and a meeting room will be located on the second floor, with the drive-in facility underneath this area.

Choice of the location, Gutherie explained, was dictated by the fact that Buckeye Federal's present eastern branch customers are mostly in this immediate area and this location will serve them to better advantage than the present office located in the Great Eastern Shopping Center. The new branch will also be near to a principal north-south access in relation to future freeway traffic.

Upon completion by the end of 1963, the company's Great Eastern Shopping Center office will be discontinued.

JEANNE WESTMORELAND adds more Ideal Chili Sauce to the display at Ideal Coney Island, 397 S. High-st, for customers who like to make the specialty of the house, two, three or four-way spaghetti, at home. The sauce, made for a recipe developed by owner Jim Zirkopinos, can also be used to make many other tasty dishes from recipes included on the label of each can or jar of the product. It is available exclusively at Ideal Coney Island.

Secret Recipe Used In House Specialty At Ideal Coney Island

One of the most popular restaurants in the area of the Franklin County Court House is Ideal Coney Island, located directly across the street at 397 S. High-st. A handy place to stop by for a cup of coffee or a quick sandwich, the popular downtown eatery was taken over 10 years ago by Jim Zirkopoluos, who came to the United States from Greece 12 years ago.

Because of its downtown location and access to several large office buildings many local diners are becoming aware of a new dish in the Columbus area, the specialty of Ideal Coney Island.

The idea of two-way, three-way and four-way spaghetti is not new, according to Jim, but had not been used much in the Columbus area until he learned of the recipe from friends who traveled often to Cincinnati and brought the idea back home with them.

When the owner of Ideal Coney Island learned of the popularity of the dish in the "Queen City" he traveled there to try it out and learn the recipe. The meal turned out to be spaghetti with a specially prepared chili sauce for two-way, add cheese for three-way and add cheese and onions for four-way. This was the recipe Jim returned to Columbus with.

The next problem was to develop a chili sauce, which each chef protects as a closely guarded secret.

Jim began this task by using all the skill and experience he had gathered in his many years as a chef and cook. The end product became the "personality" of the specialty of the house, the combination spaghetti.

According to the manager, the sauce became so popular that he now manufactures it for resale at Ideal Coney Island. The sauce can also be used on hot dogs, for chili con carne, in making chili beans, on sandwiches and for preparing Johnny Marzetti. The recipe for all these items including the combination spaghetti is included on the label of any size of the sauce sold by Ideal.

Manufactured in four different sizes, the popular sauce is available only from Ideal Coney Island and is priced from a 12⅛¾¾¾ priced from a 12½-ounce jar at 49 cents to a 32-ounce can at $1.05.

As Jim put it, "Most people have tried everything else from Italian to Japanese food. Now we would like them to try our combination spaghetti. It can be prepared at home by using our sauce or you can try it at Ideal Coney Island. It's the specialty of the house."

H. Johnson's Buffet Is Open

William R. Smith, owner and operator of Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge-east, 5000 E. Main-st, and co-owner with Equitable Investment Corp. and operator of Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge-west, 3833 W. Broad-st, is looking for a way to invite the public to visit his restaurants during the Gourmet Buffet Serving hours each weekend.

Smith said he has discovered that the popular buffet, served at poolside, attracts many regular and weekend Howard Johnson's guests, but many non-guests aren't aware they too can enjoy the meal and atmosphere of the popular dining treat. Smith added, "We certainly welcome the public to the Gourmet Buffet on weekends.

Regular hours for the buffet are Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 5 p.m. until 9 p.m. at poolside in both Howard Johnson's East and West.

Custom Car Work Is Done By Johnson's Body Shop

With complete facilities to repair auto bodies, fenders and paint jobs, Johnson's Body and Fender Shop, 373 Johnson-st, has also had many years' experience in custom work on all types of autos and specialized custom paint jobs.

Owner-manager Jim Johnson opened his shop in 1946 and moved to his present location in 1949. He has done every type of repair work from filling in rusty spots on car bodies to completely painting the entire auto.

Johnson still enjoys doing custom work on autos although he hasn't done much of this type of business for the past year. In the past the shop has prepared two cars which won honors at the National Custom Car Show in Detroit, Mich. According to Johnson, he has several customers who bring their autos several hundred miles for his specializing custom services.

Another specialty of the shop is the new "candy" or translucent type of painting for cars. "This," according to Johnson, "is one of the most beautiful and durable types of paint jobs that can be applied to a car. Although," he added, "it is rather expensive."

This paint job is applied in several coats of paint. The first one, which is the base, contains a quantity of powdered gold. The next layers are a translucent lacquer containing a small amount of the color the finished product is to be.

Each coat of lacquer is hand rubbed after it is applied and the more coats added the deeper the color will be. Johnson pointed out that after the job is done you can actually look through the coats of paint to the gold base finish. This gives a deep lasting paint job that lasts for many years, according to Johnson.

With all the facilities to do complete custom work, Johnson's Body and Fender Shop is well-equipped to take care of any type of repair job. Free estimates are also available for any type of body repair or painting.

Johnson stated "sometimes you have to do many things when you get into a body job, especially if it involves the front end of a car. We're equipped to do just about everything needed even to the point of completely rebuilding a wrecked car."

He added, "with a low overhead and small, experienced staff our prices are as competative as you'll find anywhere in the Columbus area."

Focusing attention upon The Community!

That is the major purpose of Hartley Newspapers. . . . To keep you well informed about your local governments, your schools, activities of a social nature, feature stories concerning the people of your community . . . in fact everything of a local nature which serves to permit you to be better community informed.

The tremendous success enjoyed by Hartley Newspapers is reflected in the phenomenal increase in circulation. More than 74,000 homes in the Columbus area receive a Hartley publication each week. This means that some 250,000 persons are regular readers of our newspapers.

Little wonder that we stick out our chests and opine that "focusing attention upon the community" has been responsible to a great extent for our greatly increased circulation, which has more than tripled in a decade.

Five-Year Highway Program Revealed

Franklin County's portion of the announced five-year, $1.7 billion state-wide road building will include an estimated 78.28 miles of construction at a total of about $131,672,000. The totals include 63.75 miles of Interstate work at a cost of approximately $123.5 million (previously announced).

Non-interstate contracts (listed below) will account for 14.53 miles of work at an estimated total cost of $8,078,000.

The five-year program runs from fiscal year 1964, beginning July 1, 1963, through fiscal year 1968, ending June 30, 1968.

Area projects (by fiscal year) include the following:

Addition of a sidewalk to the US Rt. 40 bridge in Reynoldsburg. Scheduled for contract letting during fiscal 1964, the project will cost an estimated $48,000.

A fiscal 1965 project calls for replacement of the SR 256 bridge just south of the Reynoldsburg SCL. Estimated cost is $62,000.

Top project, dollarwise, is scheduled for fiscal 1965, and calls for relocation of SR 62 for 2.11 miles between Stelzer-rd and Gahanna. The four-lane divided highway will be built at a total estimated cost of $1,502,000.

Another SR 62 project (fiscal 1967) is for construction of a four-lane bridge over Big Walnut Creek at a total estimated cost of $460,000.

Reconstruction and widening to four lanes of State Rt. 317 (Hamilton-rd) in Whitehall for a distance of 3.56 miles from the Whitehall south corporation line. Scheduled for fiscal year 1964, the project will cost an estimated $1,334,000.

A second and connecting SR 317 project will continue the reconstruction and widening to four lanes for 2.74 miles, south from the Whitehall SCL to Interstate Rt. 70 in Columbus. Scheduled for fiscal 1964, the total cost is estimated at $676,000.

Also scheduled for fiscal 1964 is a project to reconstruct and widen SR 317, north from relocated USR 33 to existing USR 33. Estimated total cost is $202,000.

A fiscal 1965 project calls for reconstruction and widening to four lanes for a .72-mile section of USR 33, southeast from .62-mile south of College-av. Total cost is estimated at $594,000.

Two SR 317 projects, calling for reconstruction and widening to four lanes, are slated for fiscal 1967. One project will extend for 1.08 miles, north from existing USR 33 to Refugee-rd, at an estimated cost of $600,000. The second project calls for extension of the first project between Refugee and Groves-rd at an estimated cost of $420,000.

Another project scheduled for the area will be constructed as part of a planned $5,601,000 Interstate Rt. 70 contract scheduled for fiscal 1965. It calls for construction of a railroad grade separation with the NYC Railroad at SR 317. Estimated cost is $314,000.

HOW'S YOUR BOX SCORE?

Jeweler Uses Unique Credit Rating System

By JANE ROBINSON

You can have too many children and too many charge accounts for the good of your credit.

But the more bank accounts, the merrier.

This was the conclusion Lou Klass drew from a chart in a trade magazine several years ago, and his experience with the "credit-point" system as owner of the Hilltop Jewelry and Typewriter Service has backed it up.

Too often credit is extended upon a hunch, a pretty face or a fish-tailed automobile parked nearby.

But Klass asks a few questions, nimbly adds a few figures and either you're IN or OUT.

Though being under 40 won't damage your credit rating too much, a score of less than 40 points and it's thumbs down on any buy-now, pay-later plans.

This system takes in consideration a dozen aspects of your life, and assumes your score will drop you into a category where others with like tallies have proved to be either good or bad accounts.

If you own your home you are off to a good start with nine fat points. There's or a measly three if you rent, though living with relatives earns you six.

Now it is important just how long you've lived in that home. Over three years and you're a fair-haired boy with another 10 points. Although some credit is given for less tenancy, there's not a single point rung up if you've moved in the last six months.

And you better have a telephone in your name if you want the big seven, though one in the house will give you three.

A million dollars tucked away in the mattress won't help you, but there's seven points for a checking or saving account, and ten for both.

Highest credit rating begins at age 40, but slips away for 10 years after 50, only to rebound after 60. With no score given the under-ager, you can buy six points with your age in the score of years until 40 when it hits nine. After the next decade it slips down three notches, to level off at eight ater 60.

You can admit to five or six children and come off reasonably well with three points, but fewer double it; more and you've earned another goose egg.

A dim view is also taken of too many charge accounts. One will earn you five precious points, two will give you eight, but more than that and the figure is back down to six.

This nosy system not only evaluates what you do, but how long you've done it. A profession or managerial post tops the list of occupations, with skilled and unskilled labor running closely behind. Clerical, sales and service people are four points better off than the unemployed, even though the idle may spend time clipping coupons.

But if you want to pass this test, don't go job-hopping too often. A new job and another zero. From one to two years gets you four, twice that for the next three years, and a whopping 11 after five years.

And don't change spouses. But if you do, get a nice tidy divorce, not an informal or legal separation. The eight points for being married is halved for the person who is divorced and is non-existent for the separated, while bachelorhood is worth six.

When asked to give a reference, forget the loan company — that kind is only good for three, while a previous account or a major firm will get you nine. Finally, how the credit bureau rates you can be the telling point, pushing you either into the high, clean air over 50 with a husky 12 or a "very good," or kicking away your dreams of saying, "Just charge it," with no points at all or "slow."

With 17 years of credit experience behind him, Klass relies implicitly on this system. Neither old clothes or a fancy address impresses him. All he wants to know is "Do you add up?"

With a 40 you're on your way, a 50 and your credit's healthy, and over 60 you are in like Flynn.

School Seminars Of Real Value

This past week some 4,000 persons participated in the last of three weekly seminars sponsored by the Columbus Public School system.

In each case a recorder has prepared a summary of the suggestions and conclusions of the group. My conclusions may not exactly coincide with those of the group but I do present these observations:

1. This type of participation program is certainly to be commended. Some good things should be forthcoming. In any event, some 4,000 persons are better acquainted with their school operations than they were before.

2. Under discussion was the possibility of a four quarter plan. It was pointed out that as many as 60 years ago this was tried. However, in the case of some areas, school boards are finding it necessary to take some such steps for the further utilization of their buildings. While it appears to be evident that school officials can find many reasons why school buildings should not be used for a longer period each year, we believe some of these reasons would be overcome if necessity so dictated.

3. It was the general consensus among the participants that it is better to pay our way locally than to rely upon federal funds for our education program.

4. Another field of possible income for Columbus might be the proposal to ask for state aid to cover education of children whose parents are on state payrolls similar to the thing that is being done in federal aid being extended to cover costs of educating children of service personnel and other federal employes.

5. It is highly desirable that our teachers do not become involved in strong teacher unions.

6. If there is any shortcoming in the education of a child it appears that it can be traced back in many cases to beginning reading and an inability to express himself through the written word.

7. Our educational system could profit much if some system could be devised whereby the more capable and conscientious teachers could be rewarded on some basis other than the fact that they hold certain degrees and

THE VERY FIRST pretty to sign-up for the "Miss Columbus" contest is lithesome Linda Sue Boggs, 19, 1429 Norma-rd. She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. A preliminary for the Miss Universe competition, the contest is scheduled for May 31 at 8:30 p.m. in front of Penney's in the Town and County Shopping Center.

'Miss Columbus' Being Sought

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Town and Country Shopping Center is in the beauty business now.

In taking stock this week, the some 100 Town and Country Retail Merchant Assn. members are replacing mark-ups with make-up and taxing their retailing brains in efforts to give big value bargains to spectators.

The only profit and loss problems might be with the diets of the lovely entries who are preparing those school-girl figures for the gigantic "Miss Columbus" Beauty Pageant there Friday (May 31) at 8:30 p.m.

The contest is serving as a warm-up for the internationally famed "Miss Universe" pageant, which goes on stage July 10-18 in Miami Beach, Fla.

As of this writing, the entry list was up to 20 or so, but contest coordinators are still looking for candidates. If interested, a call should be made to Mrs. Janet Cardi, BE. 7-6116.

Don't be discouraged if you get a busy signal. It seems that Mrs. Cardi (who was, incidently, Miss West Virginia in 1956 and a runner-up in the Miss Universe contest that year) is up to her ear lobes in arrangement-making.

For instance:

- Going over plans with erstwhile WLW-C television personality Jack Denton on hosting the show Friday night.
- Getting other prizes for the winners besides a $1000 scholarship to the Patricia Stevens Finish School and a $200 gift certificate for Sam Tiberi's "Coiffures by Tiberi."
- Selecting girls for a fashion show of Town and Country store apparel to be staged while judges are making decisions.
- Getting a platform erected at Penney's in the shopping center parking lot to stage the event and have it decorated in Polynesian, South Sea Island motiff.
- Calling the Darling Flower Shop at Town and Country to get roses presented to the girls.
- Getting automobiles from Lex Mayer, Bob Germain, Wood Motors and Gandolf Ford and others for the pre-pageant parade at 6:30 p.m.
- Confirming plans at the Kahiki supper club to guest some of the beauties on Monday, May 27, at 7 p.m.
- Checking with the sponsoring Town and Country Merchants group to be sure

Whitehall School Levy, Set For Voters, May Be Increased

Whitehall school officials indicated this week that the operating levy proposed for the November ballot may be increased due to added ex-

The schools have been operating on a levy passed five years ago and which is up for renewal at the next election. This is for four mills.

Walter Oipp, who has been school district treasurer for the last 15 years, said Wednesday that "there has been talk" of increasing the levy "two or three more mills."

According to Oipp, school officials have been talking about the increase for "about six months" and the matter is to appear on the agenda during the next school board meeting June 12.

"We have increased teachers every year and other expenses could indicate a need for the additional mills," Oipp added.

The treasurer did say that "until we get our 1964 budget figures closer" nothing certain could be said about the increase. He declined to comment as to whether or not it was necessary.

"As a matter of routine," he added, "we keep on top of our levies to see if we need them again or whether or not they are adequate enough."

School Districts Defined

Establishment of five new school districts, awarding 16 $500 grants to Columbus Public School teachers, and the revision of new boundaries for a number of schools were the main items of business before the Columbus Board of Education Tuesday.

In Eastern Review area, boundary lines were drawn for the new Maybury Elementary, study grants were awarded to Fred T. Gill, teacher at East High, and to Joseph F. Stranges, Franklin Junior High.

Changes in boundary lines were also approved for Franklin, Johnson Park and Walnut Ridge Junior Highs, and Courtright, Leawood, Main, Maybury, Pinecrest, Shady Lane and Willis Park Elementaries.

The $500 grants, part of a $5000 anonymous gift given each year to the Columbus School System for educational research and professional growth, include two in eastern area schools.

More than 2,500 were sold last year, she said.

WHITEHALL PROBLEM

Cost Of Free Garbage Collection Considered

By FRANK RYAN

Whitehall councilmen are faced with the problem of translating a "moral obligation" into dollars as efforts continue to set a price on the city's free garbage collection.

James Maxwell, Jr., Whitehall attorney, representing North Haulage, has sponsored two ordinances calling for the city to appropriate a total of $21,360 for garbage collection fees.

The "moral obligation" ordinance calls for a retroactive payment of $10,170 to the North firm. It is based on the alleged failure of the city to provide an annual updating of the number of residential units eligible for free garbage collection.

The second ordinance requests a transfer of $11,190 from the general fund to the garbage fee fund to cover collection payments through 1963. The increase is based on a contention by Maxwell that there are 6,176 eligible residential units in the city. This represents an increase of 1,126 over the 5,050 used as a starting point for the garbage hauling contract. The contract was

Puts Clamp On Whitehall Commuters

Whitehall council took steps Tuesday night to make things tough on "commuters."

The solons passed an ordinance which prohibits motorists from parking their automobiles on public or private property for a day.

It came about from complaints that auto owners were leaving their cars in shopping center lots and other locations and taking the bus to work downtown.

In other action, council:

- Passed legislation to construct an 8-inch sanitary sewer and water main off Poth-rd for the Seyfert's Potato Chip plant.
- Authorized Safety Director Richard Moling to enter into a contract with the Board of Trustees of both Truro and Mifflin Townships to furnish them with radio

Driver's Testing Center Set For Town & Country

The Ohio State Highway Patrol has announced plans to install a new Driver's License Testing Center in a building now being constructed for that purpose in the Town and Country Shopping Center at 160 Hamilton-rd.

Edward L. McVey, 225 Fairway-bl, has received a permit to build the new office at a cost of $30,000. A spokesman for the patrol stated there is no date set for the project's completion but the new center should be open by the end of the year.

LETTING FREEDOM RING

Jaycees Plan Rebirth Of July Fourth Wing-Ding In Whitehall

There haven't been any fireworks in Whitehall for three years (explosives, not political) and the Eastern Jaycees think it's about time to start lighting some matches.

Meeting Monday night in the Whitehall Municipal Building, tentative plans were laid for what could be the biggest Fourth of July celebration since 1776.

The Jaycees aren't doing it alone, however. They've got the support and backing of every Whitehall civic and church group from city hall to the fire department to the Boy Scouts.

Bill LaRue, who will be the first "retired" Eastern Jaycee (he will reach the 36-year-old age limit soon), has been given the task of coordinating the plans.

Biggest problem was selecting a name for the wing-ding. Of course, the date will July 4, but there were some attending Monday who thought it might be wise to have a "catchy" name like "Spirit of '76 Celebration." Others felt the word "Whitehall" should be included.

Land o' goshen if they didn't decide to call it the "Whitehall Fourth of July Celebration."

The Jaycees are a young organization in Whitehall (in QUESTION: WHAT comes after "75?" Answer: "76" and that's the spirit in which the Eastern Jaycees are launching their first-ever July Fourth celebration. In fact, it'll be the first such wing-ding within the Whitehall City limits in three years. Acting out the famous painting of the '76 spirit are, from left, flag bearer Bill LaRue (general chairman), drummer Jack Jackson (incoming Jaycee president) and fife tooter Rogers Vlan (current president).

Robert Ramsey

Ramsey Is School Board Candidate

Eastmoor resident Robert A. Ramsey, 189 S. Kellner-rd, announced Monday that he will be a candidate for a post with the Columbus Board of Education.

A life-long Columbus resident, Ramsey is a 1940 North High graduate and was graduated from Ohio State University's school of commerce and law.

An attorney, he said he felt there is a "need" to keep a lawyer on the board, since one of the members in law currently on the board is retiring.

Ramsey practices at 42 E. Gay-st with the firm of Hilliard and Ramsey.

"The next few years are going to be a period of great expansion for the Columbus school system," Ramsey theorized. "I'd like to particl-

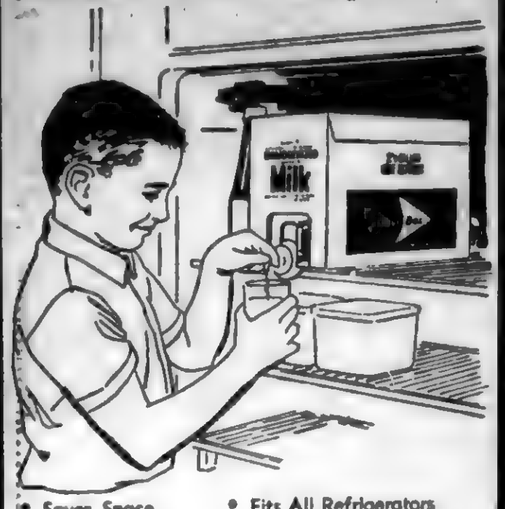
CONFEDERATE JACKPOT CONTINUES TO CLIMB

Correct Emblem Worth $203

The Hartley "Confederate Money" jackpot has just gone into a higher orbit than last week, reaching an all-time high of $203. Last week's losers can be this week's winners, however, because the amount not claimed has been added to the new grand total.

By checking the advertisements of this paper for this insignia and finding it, you could reduce this week's offering by five "Confederate" bills. If you are a paid subscriber to a Hartley Newspaper you get not only the $5 but the entire jackpot as well. The emblem is always printed in a bright color, and is found in the white space of one of today's advertisements. It appears in only one of the 72,000 newspapers printed for distribution this week.

Twenty papers contain this insignia hidden somewhere in the advertising section, also printed in a bright, [illegible] ink. If you find such an emblem, you can turn it in to the Hartley Newspaper Office, 2465 W. Broad-st, either by mail or in person, and claim one "Confederate" bill. You need not be a paid subscriber to win the one of the five.



Mrs. R. G. Paschal, 104 S. Highland-av, was the single winner of $1 in "Confederate" cash last week. She can spend this bill at any place of business advertising in a Hartley Newspaper during the week she wishes to spend it.

Anyone can claim the "Confederate" money. You must, however, be a paid subscriber to win the jackpot. The finder of the "5" insignia must bring the entire paper containing the insignia to the Hartley Newspapers office to claim the jackpot or the five "Confederate" dollars.

All "Confederate" cash can be spent just like money with any advertiser in a Hartley Newspaper. The contest is not open to employes, including carriers, or members of their families. Deadline for claiming "Confederate Money" winnings is noon on Monday following publication of the paper.

House Bill Halts County Home Plan

A plan to build a $3.5 million apartment project by the Columbus Housing Authority to replace the Franklin County Home on Alum Creek-dr is being held up by a pending bill before the Ohio House.

According to Russell Taylor, Housing Authority director, the problem stems from the fact that bonds to pay for the proposed project cannot be sold while the legislation is pending. If passed the bill would allow City Council, or the voters by a referendum, to order the housing authority to sell any project it might operate.

East Side 'Y' To Be Dedicated

The $650,000 East Side YMCA, 130 Woodland-av, will be dedicated Sunday and will open for activities the week of June 3.

It replaces the old Spring Street YMCA, 202 E. Spring-st, which will close Saturday.

Dr. Matthew G. Carter, New York City, assistant director of Association Press, National Council of the YMCA, will make the dedication speech. He was executive secretary of the Spring Street YMCA until 1948.

Eldon W. Ward, first vice chairman of the Spring Street YMCA, who headed the fund drive initially, said the new structure is a reality after 10 years of planning. It represents another step in expanding services of the Metropolitan YMCA.

Make-Believe Hairdos

There's nonspiracy going on in the coiffure world. False hairpieces are being used as "go betweens" to disguise daytime casualness, transforming even saucy "young boy" brief cuts into majestic, formal styles of towering tresses. But there's one maverick. The sleek "little nothing" hairdos still have a loyal following that upholds the understated choice of head-hugging hairdos, very Chanel-ish in impact.

Take time now for your new summer "do." Warm weather calls for special hair arrangements with comfort and convenience in mind. Iva's Beauty Salon, 3978 E. Broad Street, Columbus, BE. 5-5474, Town & Country Shopping Center.

Janice Greene, Gary Wyant Repeat Marriage Vows Saturday At Eastview

MRS. GARY ARNOLD WYANT

Eastview Methodist Church was the scene of the Saturday wedding of Miss Janice Gale Greene to Spc 4/c Gary Arnold Wyant, Saturday, May 18.

Rev. James B. Foster read the double-ring service at 2:30 p.m., before an altar decorated with vases of white gladioli and two, seven-branch, candelabra.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. Robert E. Greene of 826 S. Yearling-rd, and the late Mrs. Anna M. Greene, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Edgington of Jeffersonville, Ind.

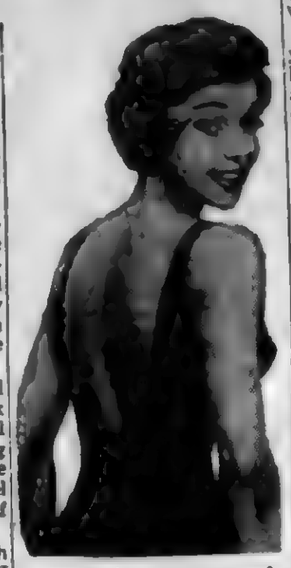
The floor-length bridal gown of nylon sheer and taffeta was designed with a rounded neckline, long tapered sleeves, empire waistline trimmed with miniature pearls and iridescents, and controlled skirt ending in a brush train.

The halo headpiece of orange blossoms and waxed ivy held her bouffant, fingertip veil of nylon, and she carried a cascade of white Frenched carnations centered with a white, purple-throated orchid.

Miss Marsha Anne Greene served as maid of honor for her sister.

Her lavender, floor-length gown was styled with rounded neckline, brief sleeves and envelope skirt of satin-faced chromespun. She wore a matching, veiled pillbox, and carried a Colonial bouquet of orchid-tinted carnations.

Mr. Michael B. Beery served as bestman, and guests were seated by Mr. Sam Deworth and Mr. Robert Hutchinson.



A reception followed the ceremony at the church.

Both the new Mr. and Mrs. Wyant were graduated from Whitehall-Yearling High School, and Mr. Wyant is serving with the US Army, Seventh Special Forces Airborne Group, stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Following a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Fayetteville, N. C.

You, Too. Can Look Good In Swim Togs

By HAZEL EYES
As Told to John Auble, Jr.

You've got to hand it to the wife, Hazel Eyes.

When something bothers her she sets out to correct it. More so, Hazel Eyes usually likes to spread joy and happiness where'er she goes.

It occurred to her that perhaps there were some female readers who might've run into the same trouble she did last summer. They probably did if they were poolside in a bathing suit, and there are few who weren't.

It started around Memorial Day last year when we took the initial trek to the local pool. Naturally, I was trying to figure out a way to hide my prison pallor but Hazel Eyes had figure problems of her own.

"Stepping out of the bath house," she related later, "I suddenly found myself doing everything but hiding behind the beach umbrellas and the potted ferns."

She continued, with obvious dismay:

"I was self-conscious," she said, "I hadn't been in a swimsuit in quite awhile and I just felt my figure wasn't good enough." Actually her figure was fine.

As Hazel Eyes pointed out, at beaches anad pools there seem to be those girls who are quite at home in their swimsuits and those who look a bit uneasy.

Of course, it has everything to do with the shape of your shape as well as how much time you spend in swimming togs, but Hazel Eyes' point is this:

As a woman, it behooves you not only to look as svelte as possible in a swimsuit, but feel happy, adequate and comfortable.

It may be even more of a problem for single women since blind dates may sometimes be swimming dates. "You don't want a veil of self-consciousness to mar this beginning," she said.

Here are things that Hazel Eyes thinks every woman can do to be happier in a swimsuit:

- If you've been out of a swimsuit all year, wear one around your home a few hours before the day you come out.
- Throw out the beat-up beach coat or hat that used to be adorable but has had it. Notive how young people who look greatest of anybody at the beach only wear what's contemporary.
- Paste a picture of a girl with an almost perfect figure inside your medicine cabinet. It will help keep you inside your diet and on that exercise program. If you still have a pooching, marshmallowy stomach by July 4, don't go swimming. You need more work.
- Rub hand lotion into your feet and massage and knead them every morning and night. Keep your toenails clipped close to the toe and manicured. Do something about those corns.
- If you're a brunette and there's too much hair on the upper leg to shave, lather it from the knee up with one-third each of soapflakes, household ammonia and bleaching peroxide until it's blond as straw. Do your arms too.

BEXLEY SCHOOL parents have pitched in again this year to give graduating seniors one of the most outstanding and unusual graduation parties in the area. Part of the entertainment is centered around baby pictures. They post numbered pictures on a board and students try to identify them, with a prize going to the one getting the most right. Originator of this idea was Mrs. Harry Schwartz (right) who looks over a baby picture with her graduating daughter, Dody. At left is this year's picture chairman, Mrs. Robert Counter, with her soon-to-graduate daughter Anne. The party is at Jeffrey Mansion June 6.

GRADUATING BEXLEY SENIORS FETED WITH ALL-NIGHT PARTY

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

When it comes to staging graduation parties, parents of Bexley graduating seniors should be in line for "cum laude" degrees.

They do get plenty of praise anyway from the attending students, and perhaps some of the methods employed each year at the Jeffrey Mansion party site are worthy enough to be imitated.

The Bexley parents have been staging the party at the Mansion since 1950, with snowballing success. It was started that year following a graduation tragedy that prompted residents to seek supervised partying to avert a repeat performance.

Last year, almost 99 per cent of the students participated in the well-planned event, which starts immediately after graduation exercises and ends the following morning with swimming and breakfast at the Excelsior Club. This year's wing-ding is scheduled for June 6.

Dr. and Mrs. Clark Pritchett and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Chittenden are serving as co-chairmen for this year's party, which is carrying a "New Orleans" theme.

"We try to cram every minute of the party full of excitement," the co-chairmen said.

Unlike the textbook type, the cramming of entertainment, dancing and refreshments has always made a hit with the guests.

The aim of the party is a bit more serious and so sound and so basic that some parents outside of Bexley may assume that any parent in his right mind would take the same precautions in assuring a safe graduation event.

"Our aim is to provide the seniors a safe and sane graduation celebration," the chairman commented. "It keeps graduates off the street in order to avoid traffic accidents, wild drinking parties, property damage and other unbecoming activities."

How is it financed? The parents take care of that, too, by each contributing $15. If the senior wants to bring a guest from another school, the parents pay $5 extra.

The money is used, a great deal of it, for lavish decorations. Some goes for paying the dance band (this year the "Novelaires"), and some for refreshments.

Besides that, they pay a photographer to snap stills of each couple which are developed and printed before the party is over, while still another photographer shoots movies of the students enjoying the party and that, too, is processed in time for showing at 4:30 a.m.

Committee chairmen this year include:

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Glick (entertainment and music), Mr. and Mrs. George Hays (decorations), Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Kahn (favors), Mr. and Mrs. William Hoyer (reservations and telephone).

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Schmidt (supper), Mr. and Mrs. David Evans (soft drinks and snacks), Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lieberman (breakfast), Mr. and Mrs. Morton Grumble (invitations), Mr. and Mrs. Frank Howe (photography).

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Counter (baby pictures), Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Kotzin (publicity), Mr. and Mrs. Phil Bidlack (registration) and Mr. and Mrs. Keith Ault (historian).

Besides the Pritchetts and the Chittendens, others on the steering committee are Mr. and Mrs. Sam Brandt, Mr. and Mrs. Don Elsass, Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. Williamson and Mr. and Mrs. Irving Gertner.

There's gold in these pages. Look for the confederate money insignia and you may be richer right now.

SUMMER CAMP

Basic preparations were made during the weekend for the Central Ohio Council's summer camp program planned for the vacation months.

Councilwide sessions were held at Camp Lazarus and Camp Greenhills, the two council reservations, to prepare troop leaders whose units will be using the camps. This is the first year the Greenhills site, near Logan, will be used in the summer program.

Training was for four different leaders within the individual troops. These leaders are Scoutmaster, program director, aquatics director and commissary director. A camping and cooking demonstration was also a part of the weekend.

This summer will be the first year that summer camp is held in the two different locations, Lazarus and Greenhills. Lazarus is for those units with or without a great deal of equipment, as troops can either use their own tents or sleep in camp shelters. Most meals there are eaten in the mess hall, and the greatest emphasis is on advancement.

Greenhills is strictly a rustic camp, since all troops must pitch their own tents and cook their meals. The emphasis here is more on putting Scoutcraft skills to practical use than on passing advancement.

A new facility to be found at Camp Lazarus this year is a rebuilt picnic grounds which Cub packs, Scout troops and Explorer posts can reserve during the summer.

Air Conditioned Buses In Use

Air-conditioned buses have started operating on the E. Broad-st, Cleveland-Sullivant-avs and Mt. Vernon-Livingston-avs bus lines according to an announcement by Columbus Transit Co. Vice-President Edward Pellissier.

Other lines will receive the remainder of the air-conditioned buses within the next few days, said the company spokesman.

The arrival of 16 new air-conditioned buses, purchased for $512,900, brings the total of this type of buses operating in the Columbus area to 29, according to Pellissier.

How To Take Care Of Your Family During An Emergency

Most of this information has not been stressed enough in the current concern over possible attack

The following information is presented in cooperation with the Columbus and Franklin County Civil Defense Office. Mr. Russell Pennell, director, has said: "We are all going to run when an emergency strikes, the difference will be in whether we run scared or educated." Most families will seek shelter in their own homes, in which case you should know which is a "safe" corner. Best place is in a basement away from windows, where there is an area for storage of materials; or an inside room, if you have no basement.

The following material is taken from those booklets prepared by the Department of Defense, Office of Civil Defense, which are available from the local office, 1045 S. High, HI. 3-9444.

Emergency Sewage Disposal

When water service is interrupted, water flush toilets cannot be used. Local authorities may ask you not to use flush toilets or wash basins. It is necessary for every family to know emergency methods of waste disposals, in case such conditions arise. Failure to properly dispose of human wastes can lead to epidemics of such diseases as typhoid, dysentery, and diarrhea. Here are a few simple steps that any family can take to prevent such dangers. 1. Right after a disaster, you will probably not have the time and tools to prepare a complex emergency sanitation system. Almost any covered metal container will do. Anything that has a cover and will hold the contents until you can dispose of them will serve for sanitary purposes at first. 2. Keep on the premises at least one extra 10-gallon garbage can or other waterproof container with a tightly fitted cover. Line with paper and this can be used for emergency storage until such time as you can dispose of the contents. A small amount of household disinfectant should be added after each use. 3. Keep a shovel on the premises. Burying human waste matter under 12 to 24 inches of earth is a satisfactory method of emergency disposal. 4. Where radioactive fallout does not present a hazard, outside facilities may be used. 5. Persons in city apartments, office buildings, or homes without yards should keep a supply of waterproof paper containers on hand for emergency waste disposal. Homemade soil bags may be prepared by putting one large grocery bag inside another, with a layer of shredded newspaper or other absorbent material between. A supply of old newspapers should be kept on hand. 6. Insecticides and deodorants should be used when necessary to control odors and insect breeding.

7. If there is illness in the family special items may be necessary as well as everyday sanitary supplies. 8. If there is a baby in the family special consideration should be given to his needs.

DISPOSAL OF GARBAGE AND RUBBISH — The following suggestions will make it easier for you to take care of the refuse problem: 1. Garbage should be drained before being placed in storage containers. After draining, wrap in several thicknesses of old newspaper. Place in container, with tight fitting lid. 2. Keep one or more 20-gallon garbage cans on hand. 3. All garbage should be buried if collection service is not available. 4. Other rubbish may be burned as established by local authorities.

Safe Food and Water

STORE PURIFIED WATER in airtight containers packed in boxes placed where they cannot be broken by a fall. Store seven gallons of liquids per person, which can include soft drinks, fruit drinks and liquids from water-packed fruits and vegetables.

SOURCES OF LIQUIDS may be found also in ice cubes or liquids stored in undamaged refrigerators or water from the hot water tank if clean.

SAFE FOOD may be found in cans, jars, cartons or packages that have not been punctured by a nuclear blast. Wash any container before opening it.

Your current food stock should include enough food for a two-week's supply stored in a safety corner. Canned foods can be stored at 70 degrees for at least six months or more.

Wash all utensils before using and keep supply of paper plates and cups, in case water supply is cut off. Also stock a supply of paper napkins, can and bottle opener, pocket knife, matches.

Summary

UNSANITARY CONDITIONS can disable you in a disaster. If an emergency occurs, keep calm. Drink only water you know is safe. Eat only food prepared under safe conditions. If you are not sure of food or drink, go without until help arrives.

PREPARE NOW to take care of yourself and family. If home resources fail, don't lose your head. Do the best you can to eat and drink sensibly and protect your health until help can reach you.

Columbus School Officials Study Semester Alternates

(First of a two-part series)

The potentials of a four-quarter plan for school operation appears so tempting that a counter-argument seems hardly worth considering. But a realistic appraisal discloses that the question goes much deeper than the number of hours, weeks or months a school building lies idle.

Joseph L. Davis, executive assistant to Dr. Harold H. Eibling, superintendent of Columbus public schools, outlined the "four-quarter" plan in a report to Paul R. Langdon, president of the Columbus Board of Education.

The Davis report contained conclusions presented by a committee of three school principals. They were: Leslie Evans, committee chairman, Central High School; C. T. Hathaway, Franklin Junior High School, and Miss Dorothy Diehl, Clinton Elementary School.

While the report dealt with the feasibility of a four-quarter plan for Columbus public schools, it applies, generally, to the tri-mester concept. The report findings would also apply, generally, to school districts throughout the state.

Here are some of the advantages to be gained from a switch to the four-quarter plan:

1. Reduce the need for new buildings to the minimum.

2. Reduce overcrowding, because classes would be only three-quarters as large.

3. Benefit school personnel and parents by eliminating half-day sessions.

4. Reduce teacher shortages, and eliminate necessity of using unqualified teachers.

5. Allow teachers to work a full year, with corresponding increase in salary.

6. Permit pupils to make up failed subjects through attending the fourth quarter.

7. Allow brighter youngsters to accelerate by attending all quarters, affording opportunity for broader knowledge and/or earlier graduation.

In all, these advantages would seem to indicate a formula with equal and generous benefits to the parent, teacher and pupil. The four-quarter plan promises full utilization of physical facilities, and presents areas of help for both the slow learner and the gifted student.

But many who would readily back such a promising program at "face value" might have some second thoughts after giving equal consideration to the negative aspects.

Some of the disadvantages cited in the committee findings include:

1. Disruption of planned family vacations when children in various schools are not scheduled for vacation at the same time.

2. Difficulty in scheduling of such extracurricular activities as varsity sports, bands, orchestra, dramatics, debates, plays, etc.

3. Summer community activities and school playground programs would be disrupted. This would involve school playground noises while classes are in session, revamping of community activities to a year-round basis, and other related problems.

4. Building maintenance, cafeteria and transportation costs would increase.

5. Pupil transfer and adjustment problems would be intensified, particularly when from an area not using a similar plan.

6. Students who would be graduated at an earlier age might not be eligible for jobs or for admission to college.

7. Withut time for additional college work or educational travel, the quality of teaching may deteriorate.

It would seem that the disadvantages are as foreboding as the advantages are promising.

There is, however, a "middleground" approach, Davis-reported — the extended school year. This is the area Davis covered, as a supplement to the committee findings, in his report to Langdon.

In expressing a belief that the "extended school year" formula would best meet present and anticipated needs, Davis listed the following three "important considerations:"

1. The improvement of learning opportunities for all children and youth as a common goal.

2. A "main responsibility" to provide opportunities for the optimum development of each pupil, and

3. That 39 weeks are already available for education; that the present progress is good, and getting better. "Let's make certain that we do nothing to cause any attrition in the strength of the present regular school year," Davis said.

(The second and concluding article in this series will explain the "extended school year" plan, its operation within the Columbus school system and its potential for the future.)

Senior Citizens Center

275 McDowell-st

The new officers elected by the Senior Citizens for the coming year are, president, Charles Coleman; first vice-president, Edward Hederick; second vice-president, Merton Berrie; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mayme Bryan; recording secretary, Merle Spung; treasurer, Mrs. Blanche Coleman.

The Senior Center has a small staff of recreation leaders to manage the affairs of the center, but most of the activities of the center are done by volunteer help from the membership. Each year the people that have volunteered a certain number of hours are recognized at a service. This year the Volunteer Recognition Program will be held on Thursday, May 23, at 2:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the new center.

We are "Proud as Peacocks" of this loyal group of senior citizens and we are decorating accordingly for this important occasion.

Last summer some of the outdoor citizens had a campout at the Big Brothers' Camp in the Hocking Hills. On Monday, May 20, this group will have a reunion, at which time they will talk over plans for camping this summer.

New Flag Supply Is On Order

Scores of new flags were seen flying in this area during Armed Forces Day over the past weekend.

Many of these flags belonged to readers of Hartley Newspapers who had already taken advantage of the new American flag offer being made by this paper.

The response to the plan has been so tremendous that the supply is exhausted.

For this reason Hartley Newspapers have decided to extend the original offer and another order has been placed with the manufacturer. The new supply should arrive within a few days.

In the meantime, if you have ordered a flag or plan to do so, we request that you bear with us for the short time until the new supply arrives.

The complete kit includes a 3x5 cotton, color-fast, 50-star flag, with staff, top, halyard and window socket. Usually priced at $5.95, the kit along with a one-year Hartley Newspaper subscription, valued at $3, is being offered for only $5.

If you have not ordered your flag yet, be sure and do so as quickly as possible to insure delivery before Memorial Day, May 30. Plan your "Avenue Of Flags" for this coming patriotic holiday. Check the advertisement in this edition of your newspaper and place your order now.

Landfill May Be Closed By County

The Alum Creek-dr landfill will be closed if the city takes over the county's refuse collection business.

Under a tentative agreement, yet to be approved by city council, the city will buy the equipment now county-owned and assume the bond obligations.

The city will serve all county areas within the city limits and arrangements will be made for private haulers to contract for pick-up in the county. Reynoldsburg is the principal area served by the county.

The negotiations will become effective July 1.

Rabid Skunk Killed In City

With a rabid skunk killed in the city last week, Dr. Ollie M. Goodloe, city health commissioner, repeats his warning for owners to obtain rabies shots for their pets immediately.

The animal was killed by Clark Evans in his yard at 2142 Noe-Bixby-rd. Although he had buried the animal before tests were made, the health department dug up the body and obtained a positive reaction.

Pets should be confined, Goodloe stated, and children warned to avoid contact with any stray animals.

Nothing else pulls like a Hartley Newspaper Want Ad.

AID AT HAND FOR ADULTS WHO CAN'T READ

'OPERATION ALPHABET' BEGINS MONDAY ON TV

Help is offered to the adult who cannot read or write through Operation Alphabet, Karl F. Kessler, supervisor of Adult Education for the State of Ohio, has announced.

The series of 100 half-hour lessons being televised over WLW-C TV at 6 a.m. will begin Monday, May 27, and will continue until Oct. 11.

The educational series was developed by the Philadelphia Public Schools and after several years evaluation by reading experts has been scheduled by about 100 stations over the nation.

Kessler explains that a non-reading adult who follows the program should reach a third-grade reading and writing level which will allow him to understand signs and directions, with basic reading skills and give him the foundation for further education.

Pickaway County, at our back door, has the dubious distinction of having the largest percentage of adults over 25 years old with four years or less of schooling of any county in Ohio. While Franklin County is below the state average of 5.44 per cent with only 4.14 per cent, Pickaway has a shocking rate of 15.5 per cent of its adult population unable to read and write.

As efforts are made to re-train those who lose their jobs to automation, the adult who cannot read is considered untrainable. United States Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg made the statement, "The man with no education, with no skill, is bound to be a derelict in our fast-moving industrial world unless active efforts are made to reclaim him. He is an untapped resource both to himself and our society. He needs help."

Community service organizations are called upon by Kessler to identify non-readers and encourage them to participate in "Operation Alphabet."

Also, local groups are needed to raise funds to buy home study materials. For $2 from the National Association of Public School Adult Educators, a homework book is available.

It is also hoped that the possibilities of using volunteer workers to assist with viewing of the programs will be investigated, and the state is interested in learning whether the 6 a.m. time is appropriate.

Children from homes of the uneducated tend to follow their parents' footsteps, and according to the director of Carver House Settlement in St. Louis, without a special effort to help the adult, you will have the same "vicious cycle of poverty, ignorance and crime repeating itself generation after generation."

As it is difficult to communicate with the non-reader, it is especially important that the community promote these programs; otherwise, those who can profit most from them may be unaware of them.

AN EDITORIAL

People On Relief Are Still People

People on relief are people.

This is something that needs saying time and again—especially now when the problems of financing our relief programs are so much discussed.

Reliefers in the main are people with the same general hopes and moral standards as those around them.

So often they are people who are innocent victims of brutalities or brutes of our civilization. And so often they are men and women who are willing to work hard to regain their economic feet.

Just how bad are things? Here's a smattering of stories from social workers at the South Side Settlement House where the problem is being felt bitterly.

A South Side woman who lived through the bitter months of 1962 when poor relief was cut to 40 per cent of the state minimum told a meeting of the South Side Family Council what it was like:

"When relief went to 40 per cent, we just went down. Our rent was $50 and our checks came to $56. We had $6 left for food and utilities after we paid the rent.

"We paid it, because even to be sick or starve you need a place to live. But the gas and electric were shut off. I didn't have lights for seven months. Gas wasn't off so long.

"But, when the gas went I began to cook with coal oil. That was horrible. The fumes almost knocked my eyes out. I couldn't breathe. Then I began not to see.

"I thought I was blind but later the clinic said it was the coal oil and nerves. We sat in the back room; shut the rest of the house off and tried to heat just one room.

"We were there in the dark — just coal oil fumes and no lights. We ate stuff people gave us and commodities. It was a horrible time. When we got our lights turned back on, it was queer. I didn't think the winter would ever end or that we would make it."

On Apr. 8 a mother came to the settlement to tell them that her baby was back in Children's Hospital:

"I took her to Children's Hospital and they kept her. I was afraid to tell them at Children's we didn't have heat. She's only five months and she's had pneumonia twice.

"The first time I told them the gas was shut off, but the second time I was afraid they'd have me up on neglect. But I can't help it. My gas bill is over $100 and my relief check don't cover rent and food.

"I had to get juice for the other kids when they were sick and just couldn't. The first time gas was shut off, I had it opened in another name; but they caught me and shut it aff again. They warned me I'd go to Marysville if I pulled a trick like that. If I get sent to Marysville, who will watch the kids?"

And right here might be the place to print a great line forwarded by Roberts Mann, a thoughtful naturalist in the Chicago area. He just wanted to share it with as many persons as possible and it seems appropriate in connection with the above thoughts.

The line: "Never despise a puddle. It may reflect a star."

Ask any boy and he will tell you...
IT'S A WONDERFUL FEELING

When winter is past and most of the spring rains have come and gone, what a joy it is for a boy to go barefoot and feel the warm moist earth oozing up between his toes and the hot sun on his back... It's a wonderful feeling — remember?

If it has been some time since you were in the warm company of like-minded Christians and basked in the warmth and love of God's glory and grace as manifested in His Church, attend this coming Sunday. It's a wonderful feeling to sense that you are in tune with God, your fellow man, and the universe.

"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the House of the Lord."

SUMMER CAMP

Basic preparations were made during the weekend for the Central Ohio Council's summer camp program planned for the vacation months.

Councilwide sessions were held at Camp Lazarus and Camp Greenhills, the two council reservations, to prepare troop leaders whose units will be using the camps. This is the first year the Greenhills site, near Logan, will be used in the summer program.

Training was for four different leaders within the individual troops. These leaders are Scoutmaster, program director, aquatics director and commissary director. A camping and cooking demonstration was also a part of the weekend.

This summer will be the first year that summer camp is held in the two different locations, Lazarus and Greenhills. Lazarus is for those units with or without a great deal of equipment, as troops can either use their own tents or sleep in camp shelters. Most meals there are eaten in the mess hall, and the greatest emphasis is on advancement.

Greenhills is strictly a rustic camp, since all troops must pitch their own tents and cook their meals. The emphasis here is more on putting Scoutcraft skills to practical use than on passing advancement.

A new facility to be found at Camp Lazarus this year is a rebuilt picnic grounds which Cub packs, Scout troops and Explorer posts can reserve during the summer.

Air Conditioned Buses In Use

Air-conditioned buses have started operating on the E. Broad-st, Cleveland-Sullivant-avs and Mt. Vernon-Livingston-avs bus lines according to an announcement by Columbus Transit Co. Vice-President Edward Pellissier.

Other lines will receive the remainder of the air-conditioned buses within the next few days, said the company spokesman.

The arrival of 16 new air-conditioned buses, purchased for $512,900, brings the total of this type of buses operating in the Columbus area to 29, according to Pellissier.

How To Take Care Of Your Family During An Emergency

Most of this information has not been stressed enough in the current concern over possible attack

The following information is presented in cooperation with the Columbus and Franklin County Civil Defense Office. Mr. Russell Pennell, director, has said: "We are all going to run when an emergency strikes, the difference will be in whether we run scared or educated." Most families will seek shelter in their own homes, in which case you should know which is a "safe" corner. Best place is in a basement away from windows, where there is an area for storage of materials; or an inside room, if you have no basement.

The following material is taken from those booklets prepared by the Department of Defense, Office of Civil Defense, which are available from the local office, 1045 S. High, HI. 3-9444.

Emergency Sewage Disposal

When water service is interrupted, water flush toilets cannot be used. Local authorities may ask you not to use flush toilets or wash basins. It is necessary for every family to know emergency methods of waste disposals, in case such conditions arise. Failure to properly dispose of human wastes can lead to epidemics of such diseases as typhoid, dysentery, and diarrhea. Here are a few simple steps that any family can take to prevent such dangers. 1. Right after a disaster, you will probably not have the time and tools to prepare a complex emergency sanitation system. Almost any covered metal container will do. Anything that has a cover and will hold the contents until you can dispose of them will serve for sanitary purposes at first. 2. Keep on the premises at least one extra 10-gallon garbage can or other waterproof container with a tightly fitted cover. Line with paper and this can be used for emergency storage until such time as you can dispose of the contents. A small amount of household disinfectant should be added after each use. 3. Keep a shovel on the premises. Burying human waste matter under 12 to 24 inches of earth is a satisfactory method of emergency disposal. 4. Where radioactive fallout does not present a hazard, outside facilities may be used. 5. Persons in city apartments, office buildings, or homes without yards should keep a supply of waterproof paper containers on hand for emergency waste disposal. Homemade soil bags may be prepared by putting one large grocery bag inside another, with a layer of shredded newspaper or other absorbent material between. A supply of old newspapers should be kept on hand. 6. Insecticides and deodorants should be used when necessary to control odors and insect breeding.

7. If there is illness in the family special items may be necessary as well as everyday sanitary supplies. 8. If there is a baby in the family special consideration should be given to his needs.

DISPOSAL OF GARBAGE AND RUBBISH — The following suggestions will make it easier for you to take care of the refuse problem: 1. Garbage should be drained before being placed in storage containers. After draining, wrap in several thicknesses of old newspaper. Place in container, with tight fitting lid. 2. Keep one or more 20-gallon garbage cans on hand. 3. All garbage should be buried if collection service is not available. 4. Other rubbish may be burned as established by local authorities.

Safe Food and Water

STORE PURIFIED WATER in airtight containers packed in boxes placed where they cannot be broken by a fall. Store seven gallons of liquids per person, which can include soft drinks, fruit drinks and liquids from water-packed fruits and vegetables.

SOURCES OF LIQUIDS may be found also in ice cubes or liquids stored in undamaged refrigerators or water from the hot water tank if clean.

SAFE FOOD may be found in cans, jars, cartons or packages that have not been punctured by a nuclear blast. Wash any container before opening it.

Your current food stock should include enough food for a two-week's supply stored in a safety corner. Canned foods can be stored at 70 degrees for at least six months or more.

Wash all utensils before using and keep supply of paper plates and cups, in case water supply is cut off. Also stock a supply of paper napkins, can and bottle opener, pocket knife, matches.

Summary

UNSANITARY CONDITIONS can disable you in a disaster. If an emergency occurs, keep calm. Drink only water you know is safe. Eat only food prepared under safe conditions. If you are not sure of food or drink, go without until help arrives.

PREPARE NOW to take care of yourself and family. If home resources fail, don't lose your head. Do the best you can to eat and drink sensibly and protect your health until help can reach you.

Columbus School Officials Study Semester Alternates

(First of a two-part series)

The potentials of a four-quarter plan for school operation appears so tempting that a counter-argument seems hardly worth considering. But a realistic appraisal discloses that the question goes much deeper than the number of hours, weeks or months a school building lies idle.

Joseph L. Davis, executive assistant to Dr. Harold H. Eibling, superintendent of Columbus public schools, outlined the "four-quarter" plan in a report to Paul R. Langdon, president of the Columbus Board of Education.

The Davis report contained conclusions presented by a committee of three school principals. They were: Leslie Evans, committee chairman, Central High School; C. T. Hathaway, Franklin Junior High School, and Miss Dorothy Diehl, Clinton Elementary School.

While the report dealt with the feasibility of a four-quarter plan for Columbus public schools, it applies, generally, to the tri-mester concept. The report findings would also apply, generally, to school districts throughout the state.

Here are some of the advantages to be gained from a switch to the four-quarter plan:

1. Reduce the need for new buildings to the minimum.
2. Reduce overcrowding, because classes would be only three-quarters as large.
3. Benefit school personnel and parents by eliminating half-day sessions.
4. Reduce teacher shortages, and eliminate necessity of using unqualified teachers.
5. Allow teachers to work a full year, with corresponding increase in salary.
6. Permit pupils to make up failed subjects through attending the fourth quarter.
7. Allow brighter youngsters to accelerate by attending all quarters, affording opportunity for broader knowledge and/or earlier graduation.

In all, these advantages would seem to indicate a formula with equal and generous benefits to the parent, teacher and pupil. The four-quarter plan promises full utilization of physical facilities, and presents areas of help for both the slow learner and the gifted student.

But many who would readily back such a promising program at "face value" might have some second thoughts after giving equal consideration to the negative aspects.

Some of the disadvantages cited in the committee findings include:

1. Disruption of planned family vacations when children in various schools are not scheduled for vacation at the same time.
2. Difficulty in scheduling of such extracurricular activities as varsity sports, bands, orchestra, dramatics, debates, plays, etc.
3. Summer community activities and school playground programs would be disrupted. This would involve school playground noises while classes are in session, revamping of community activities to a year-round basis, and other related problems.
4. Building maintenance, cafeteria and transportation costs would increase.
5. Pupil transfer and adjustment problems would be intensified, particularly when from an area not using a similar plan.
6. Students who would be graduated at an earlier age might not be eligible for jobs or for admission to college.
7. Withut time for additional college work or educational travel, the quality of teaching may deteriorate.

It would seem that the disadvantages are as foreboding as the advantages are promising.

There is, however, a "middleground" approach, Davis reported — the extended school year. This is the area Davis covered, as a supplement to the committee findings, in his report to Langdon.

In expressing a belief that the "extended school year" formula would best meet present and anticipated needs, Davis listed the following three "important considerations:"

1. The improvement of learning opportunities for all children and youth as a common goal.
2. A "main responsibility" to provide opportunities for the optimum development of each pupil, and
3. That 39 weeks are already available for education; that the present progress is good, and getting better. "Let's make certain that we do nothing to cause any attrition in the strength of the present regular school year," Davis said.

(The second and concluding article in this series will explain the "extended school year" plan, its operation within the Columbus school system and its potential for the future.)

Senior Citizens Center

275 McDowell-st

The new officers elected by the Senior Citizens for the coming year are, president, Charles Coleman; first vice-president, Edward Hederick; second vice-president, Merton Berrie; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mayme Bryan; recording secretary, Merle Spung; treasurer, Mrs. Blanche Coleman.

The Senior Center has a small staff of recreation leaders to manage the affairs of the center, but most of the activities of the center are done by volunteer help from the membership. Each year the people that have volunteered a certain number of hours are recognized at a service. This year the Volunteer Recognition Program will be held on Thursday, May 23, at 2:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the new center.

We are "Proud as Peacocks" of this loyal group of senior citizens and we are decorating accordingly for this important occasion.

Last summer some of the outdoor citizens had a campout at the Big Brothers' Camp in the Hocking Hills. On Monday, May 20, this group will have a reunion, at which time they will talk over plans for camping this summer.

New Flag Supply Is On Order

Scores of new flags were seen flying in this area during Armed Forces Day over the past weekend.

Many of these flags belonged to readers of Hartley Newspapers who had already taken advantage of the new American flag offer being made by this paper.

The response to the plan has been so tremendous that the supply is exhausted.

For this reason Hartley Newspapers have decided to extend the original offer and another order has been placed with the manufacturer. The new supply should arrive within a few days.

In the meantime, if you have ordered a flag or plan to do so, we request that you bear with us for the short time until the new supply arrives.

The complete kit includes a 3x5 cotton, color-fast, 50-star flag, with staff, top, halyard and window socket. Usually priced at $5.95, the kit along with a one-year Hartley Newspaper subscription, valued at $3, is being offered for only $5.

If you have not ordered your flag yet, be sure and do so as quickly as possible to insure delivery before Memorial Day, May 30. Plan your "Avenue Of Flags" for this coming patriotic holiday. Check the advertisement in this edition of your newspaper and place your order now.

Landfill May Be Closed By County

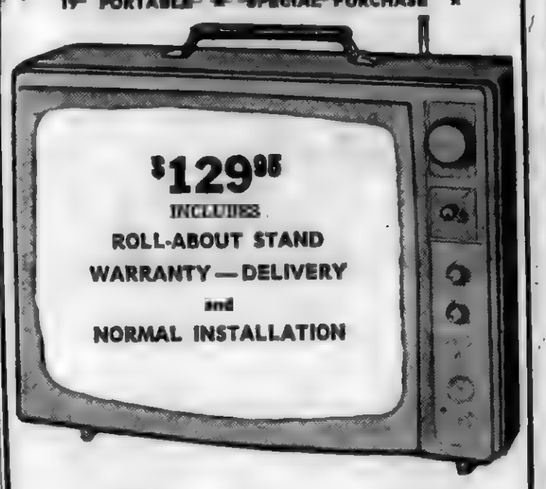
The Alum Creek-dr landfill will be closed if the city takes over the county's refuse collection business.

Under a tentative agreement, yet to be approved by city council, the city will buy the equipment now county-owned and assume the bond obligations.

The city will serve all county areas within the city limits and arrangements will be made for private haulers to contract for pick-up in the county. Reynoldsburg is the principal area served by the county.

The negotiations will become effective July 1.

But far more numerous was the herd of such who think too little and who talk too much. . . John Dryden.



Rabid Skunk Killed In City

With a rabid skunk killed in the city last week, Dr. Ollie M. Goodloe, city health commissioner, repeats his warning for owners to obtain rabies shots for their pets immediately.

The animal was killed by Clark Evans in his yard at 2142 Noe-Bixby-rd. Although he had buried the animal before tests were made, the health department dug up the body and obtained a positive reaction.

Pets should be confined, Goodloe stated, and children warned to avoid contact with any stray animals.

AID AT HAND FOR ADULTS WHO CAN'T READ

'OPERATION ALPHABET' BEGINS MONDAY ON TV

Help is offered to the adult who cannot read or write through Operation Alphabet, Karl F. Kessler, supervisor of Adult Education for the State of Ohio, has announced.

The series of 100 half-hour lessons being televised over WLW-C TV at 6 a.m. will begin Monday, May 27, and will continue until Oct. 11.

The educational series was developed by the Philadelphia Public Schools and after several years evaluation by reading experts has been scheduled by about 100 stations over the nation.

Kessler explains that a non-reading adult who follows the program should reach a third-grade reading and writing level which will allow him to understand signs and directions, with basic reading skills and give him the foundation for further education.

Pickaway County, at our back door, has the dubious distinction of having the largest percentage of adults over 25 years old with four years or less of schooling of any county in Ohio. While Franklin County is below the state average of 5.44 per cent with only 4.14 per cent, Pickaway has a shocking rate of 15.5 per cent of its adult population unable to read and write.

As efforts are made to re-train those who lose their jobs to automation, the adult who cannot read is considered untrainable. United States Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg made the statement, "The man with no education, with no skill, is bound to be a derelict in our fast-moving industrial world unless active efforts are made to reclaim him. He is an untapped resource both to himself and our society. He needs help."

Community service organizations are called upon by Kessler to identify non-readers and encourage them to participate in "Operation Alphabet."

Also, local groups are needed to raise funds to buy home study materials. For $2 from the National Association of Public School Adult Educators, a homework book is available.

It is also hoped that the possibilities of using volunteer workers to assist with viewing of the programs will be investigated, and the state is interested in learning whether the 6 a.m. time is appropriate.

Children from homes of the uneducated tend to follow their parents' footsteps, and according to the director of Carver House Settlement in St. Louis, without a special effort to help the adult, you will have the same "vicious cycle of poverty, ignorance and crime repeating itself generation after generation."

As it is difficult to communicate with the non-reader, it is especially important that the community promote these programs; otherwise, those who can profit most from them may be unaware of them.

AN EDITORIAL

People On Relief Are Still People

People on relief are people.

This is something that needs saying time and again—especially now when the problems of financing our relief programs are so much discussed.

Reliefers in the main are people with the same general hopes and moral standards as those around them.

So often they are people who are innocent victims of brutalities or brutes of our civilization. And so often they are men and women who are willing to work hard to regain their economic feet.

Just how bad are things? Here's a smattering of stories from social workers at the South Side Settlement House where the problem is being felt bitterly.

A South Side woman who lived through the bitter months of 1962 when poor relief was cut to 40 per cent of the state minimum told a meeting of the South Side Family Council what it was like:

"When relief went to 40 per cent, we just went down. Our rent was $50 and our checks came to $56. We had $6 left for food and utilities after we paid the rent.

"We paid it, because even to be sick or starve you need a place to live. But the gas and electric were shut off. I didn't have lights for seven months. Gas wasn't off so long.

"But, when the gas went I began to cook with coal oil. That was horrible. The fumes almost knocked my eyes out. I couldn't breathe. Then I began not to see.

"I thought I was blind but later the clinic said it was the coal oil and nerves. We sat in the back room; shut the rest of the house off and tried to heat just one room.

"We were there in the dark — just coal oil fumes and no lights. We ate stuff people gave us and commodities. It was a horrible time. When we got our lights turned back on, it was queer. I didn't think the winter would ever end or that we would make it."

On Apr. 8 a mother came to the settlement to tell them that her baby was back in Children's Hospital:

"I took her to Children's Hospital and they kept her. I was afraid to tell them at Children's we didn't have heat. She's only five months and she's had pneumonia twice.

"The first time I told them the gas was shut off, but the second time I was afraid they'd have me up on neglect. But I can't help it. My gas bill is over $100 and my relief check don't cover rent and food.

"I had to get juice for the other kids when they were sick and just couldn't. The first time gas was shut off, I had it opened in another name; but they caught me and shut it aff again. They warned me I'd go to Marysville if I pulled a trick like that. If I get sent to Marysville, who will watch the kids?"

And right here might be the place to print a great line forwarded by Roberts Mann, a thoughtful naturalist in the Chicago area. He just wanted to share it with as many persons as possible and it seems appropriate in connection with the above thoughts.

The line: "Never despise a puddle. It may reflect a star."

Ask any boy and he will tell you...

IT'S A WONDERFUL FEELING

When winter is past and most of the spring rains have come and gone, what a joy it is for a boy to go barefoot and feel the warm moist earth oozing up between his toes and the hot sun on his back... It's a wonderful feeling—remember?

If it has been some time since you were in the warm company of like-minded Christians and basked in the warmth and love of God's glory and grace as manifested in His Church, attend this coming Sunday. It's a wonderful feeling to sense that you are in tune with God, your fellow man, and the universe.

"I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the House of the Lord."
Psalm 122:1.

Retiring Professors Honored By Capital

Four professors, with an accumulative teaching total of 123 years, were honored Wednesday, May 22, upon retirement from the Capital University faculty.

They are Grover L. Orr, professor of chemistry; Paul L. Schacht, professor of English; William L. Young, professor of English and assistant to the president in the area of research, and Clara G. Steinmann, assistant professor of public health nursing.

The four retiring professors were presented special hoods and caps during a convocation program Wednesday morning and were further honored along with Capital's emeriti, at a banquet that evening. Professor Orr came to Capital as an instructor in 1919. A year ago he retired as head of the chemistry department.

Professor Schacht joined the Capital staff in 1916. He retired as head of the English department in 1959.

Dr. Young started teaching English at Capital in 1922. Through the years he served as head of the department, vice-president and acting president (1941-42). From 1945 to 1960, Dr. Young was executive secretary of the Board of Higher Education of the American Lutheran Church. He returned to the Capital teaching staff in 1960.

Professor Steinmann joined the Capital nursing staff in 1958. Prior to that time she served as supervisor in public health nursing for the departments of health at San Antonio, Tex., and the State of Maryland.

Maxwell Drops Libel Charges

James Maxwell, Jr., 4042 E. Mound-st, has dropped legal action in which he had charged J. Craig Wright, 433 Country Club-rd, with libel.

Franklin County Common Pleas Court records show that Maxwell withdrew his petition "without prejudice," and that he paid court costs. Both Maxwell and Wright are attorneys.

The suit was brought by Maxwell during a controversy over apartment building in Whitehall, and in which the attorneys expressed opposite views. Maxwell filed the suit after a story appearing in the Eastern Review on Apr. 25 quoted Wright as saying:

"It's all very well for Mr. Maxwell to use his special skills on council, but I don't think he ought to misadvise the public."

Approve Two Zone Shifts

Columbus City Planning Commission Wednesday approved two local requests for zoning changes and held one request to the June meeting.

Approved by a 3-2 vote was a change from two-family residential to apartment-office for a 90 by 90 foot parcel 150 feet north of the northwest corner of E. Livingston and Elizabeth-avs. Plans call for construction of an apartment building and a parking area.

The second petition approved involves two parcels on the north side of Livingston-av, west of Lonsdale-rd. The change would be from rural residential to apartments and institutional use. Construction of apartment units and a funeral home is planned.

Final approval for zoning changes rests with Columbus City Council.

The commission withheld action on an appeal to rezone from suburban residential to one-to-four-family use parcels on the west side of Hamilton-rd, south of Mcilroy-av. Plans call for construction of four four-family apartment buildings. Action on the petition is scheduled for the June commission meeting.

WILL THE REAL GERMAN SHEPHERD PLEASE STEP FORWARD?

NO ONE HAD ASKED, but none of the four dogs would have stepped forward — for two reasons. First, all were developed from the original German Shepherd herding dog. Second, all are trained to obey their masters. The masters and their dogs include Sgt. Sowers, Air Police, Lockbourne AFB, with a "police" dog; Patrolman Dewsey, Grove City Police Department, "police" dog; Gene Fullen, emcee of "Dialing For Dollars," the program on which they appeared; Stanley Doran, head trainer, Pilot Dogs, Inc., "seeing eye" dog, and Wayne Whitmer, president of the German Shepherd Dog Club of Central Ohio, Inc., with an obedience dog. On Sunday, May 26, the GSDC will hold its eighth annual Specialty at the Junior Fair Arena, Fairgrounds, starting at 8 a.m.

'Printed Garbage' Infects

There are few who will deny the power of the written word and the picture as a virtually limitless source of education and knowledge for the human mind. Indeed, our great nation was advanced in its earliest days as much by the voracious reader as by the more formally educated scholar.

The advancement in printing and photography techniques and of distribution methods have not been without a serious negative aspect. Cheaper production and distribution factors have, unfortunately, resulted in the country being flooded with the "cheapest" type of printed and pictorial material — obscenity and pornography.

A recent article in the Journal, a publication of the National Council of Juvenile Court Judges, stresses a couple of points well worth being remembered by all parents. Prepared by the Cincinnati branch of Citizens For Decent Literature, the article says in part:

"Perverts are not born. No man is by nature a pervert." Manifestations of perversion "exist in youth because of circumstances under which they develop, because of the environment in which they live."

Certainly, an important part of the environment for youth is the type of reading material that is fed into inquisitive minds. (And it is a sad but true fact that the less desirable the material, the greater the promotion for readership.)

A U.S. Supreme Court decision in one smut-for-profit case stated the following test for obscenity:

"You may ask yourself does it offend the common conscience of the community by present-day standards."

Just what is our present-day standard? Do we want printed matter for our children to be food for constructive thought, or garbage for malnutrition and eventual intellectual starvation?

The World Knows . . .

With a well-earned hero's welcome behind him, Air Force Maj. L. Gordon Cooper, Jr., America's flyingest astronaut, returns now to the less glamorous role of an earthbound space technician.

Billed as the devil-may-care, lighthearted member of the original seven astronauts, Cooper proved that an effervescent personality need not interfere with the serious side of space travel.

Our space victory, while less spectacular, perhaps, than what the Russians SAY they have accomplished, is nonetheless, more impressive. Because we allowed "live" coverage by a free press, the world KNOWS what we have accomplished.

Weed Fatigue

Guest Pulpit . . .
Trust And Let The Lord Lighten Your Load

We are living in a world of tension, strain and frustration but in Christ we can live relaxed under burdens. Certainly the Lord has given us every reason not to be tied up like a rubber band. He said, "Take my yoke upon you . . . for my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

Rev. Dick

If you should go to bed and lie there with all your muscles taut because you were afraid the bed would break down with you, you would not rest but would get up in the morning exhausted. To put it simply, you have to trust to be able to rest. Some people are still holding themselves inwardly taut, afraid that if they let go the grace of God won't sustain them, so they live exhausted lives, worn out from within.

One day an old woman trudged along the road with a heavy pack upon her back. A man in a wagon overtook her and offered her a lift. Grateful beyond words, she climbed in but sat there still holding her burden on her back. When the man suggested that she put it in the back of the wagon, she replied, "O, but it is so kind of you to carry me, I don't want to make you carry my burdens too."

We smile at the old lady and yet how many of us do just as she did? We believe that the grace of God can save our souls, but we do not trust that same grace to carry our daily burdens, our daily cares, and anxieties, our worries of business and the home. These we continue to keep on our own backs. The outcome is exhausted souls.

From out of childhood days many can remember. I am sure mother's quotations from the Bible that read like this: "Casting all your care upon Him for He careth for you." This was surely something to remember for how many of us have seen mother do that very thing? She cast all her care upon Him, for without this she could have never gone through what she did.

The Lord desires to be our burden bearer. He has paid the supreme price on Calvary for the sins of the whole world. And when we become His children through the new birth, He desires to bear our burdens as well as save our souls. The song writer phrased it this way: "O what needless pain we bear, all because we do not carry everything to God in prayer."

Frosting On The Cake

By "UNCLE ROC" ROSE — U.S.A.

Thoughtful and informed millions are fed up to the gills with taxes piled on more taxes, including all of the back-door sneaks and leaks hidden all along the way. If there ever was a time for fearless and intelligent leadership in all units of government, it is now.

Academic geniuses now in power are still blissfully unaware of the general public temper about the whole mess. But, one of these days fate and our liberty-under-law form of government will catch up with them and perhaps Divine Providence will save us before the whole structure of something-for-nothing goes down the drain.

Party labels mean so little any more. The Republicans keep right on nominating and electing crazy spenders and secret socialist-minded men to office under a false pretense party label. Jeffersonians continue to pray and bide their time until the present economic madness in government has run its course. Then old Mother Nature and the lash of final circumstance disaster will give us the third oak in the forest of American Statesmanship.

The country will go back to work and the "nuts" will have to crawl back into the woodwork. A dollar will again be worth something and the tax burden will be "fumigated."

White Denies Report

To the Editor:

I am amazed at the report in the Sunday (May 12) Dispatch stating that some Republicans were attempting to draft me for the position of mayor if incumbent mayor Carl Huffman does not run in the November election.

But since the rumor has been circulated at this time, I feel that it is most important to make an official statement regarding this.

The city of Hilliard is faced with a dilemma in that many hats have been thrown in the ring for position of mayor, and yet none has stated a strong position with the exception of one man for the fall election—that man being councilman Steven King.

I am a strong advocate of the mayor-council form of government, this is true.

I am for a full time administration of the rapidly growing city. But I am also for "self-preservation of the community against the strong arm of the city of Columbus and those who would have Hilliard give in to them."

I am opposed to knuckling under to Columbus on water and sewer contracts which in the long run would jeopardize our community.

I am for the "sensible growth of the city of Hilliard" and believe that citizens should have more voice in the determination of this growth.

The citizens of Hilliard by their action on May 7 have selected a home-rule charter which is a strong-mayor form of government.

They voted 2-1 for the charter. They have indicated by this willingness that they want to see Hilliard progress under this form of government.

I believe that whoever the candidate for mayor may be, he must be willing to work with council and work for the people and all of the citizens of the city.

He must be able to compromise if the case may be for the betterment of the city. The future expansion of the city of Hilliard depends largely on the ability of the administrator and city fathers to hold fast against Columbus' desire to stamp out commercial and industrial growth in the Norwich Township and Hilliard city area.

Consideration of the present business establishments and the future of the present "old downtown" area must be considered. The biggest factor in Hilliard future development is "just how much are the citizens willing to pay for the future progress of the city—be it water, safety protection, or other items."

At the present moment the city is progressing forward, and on what appears to be a course of constructive action. Township officials and city officials have approved a course of action for a master plan. Development of park sites has been accomplished. These are items that the citizens have requested through surveys over the years. It appears to me that the people of the city of Hilliard by virtue of their passage of the charter want future progress and development without interference by the city of Columbus.

As to my candidacy for mayor, as appeared in an erroneous statement in a downtown paper; it came as a complete surprise to me.

I, however, at this time would not state that I would decline a draft for the position. I am 100 per cent for the city of Hilliard and what "all of the people want"—not just what a select few want.

In conclusion, the city of Hilliard can and will progress with a unified effort of the citizens who believe that Hilliard can stand on her own two feet and do the job themselves without help or strings attached or interference from outside the city.

An Editor's Outlook . . . by Jenkin Lloyd Jones
River People Made Of Stern Stuff

The old man and his wife, fishing from a boulder into the dark waters of the Ohio River, looked up with mild interest as the towboat, Lin Smith, 20 hours from Louisville, shoved her three giant gasoline barges toward Government Lock 48 on the Kentucky side.

High in the pilot house Capt. Ellis Gipson stood easily behind the steering handles. He wore a jaunty long-billed cap and the casual expression of a man about to perform a trivial thing. Six hundred feet ahead the jackstaff on the lead barge swung slowly around toward the upper lock gate. A curl of water splashed the shore.

Jones

Suddenly a squall of cold wind out of Indiana caught the unwieldly tow at the moment the set of the current pushed her toward the rocks. The high prow of the first barge loomed over the startled fishing couple and they fled up the bank. Gipson rang full astern and set the reverse rudders over hard. There was a momentary pause at the brink of disaster.

"You'd better do somethin', Mr. Engineer," said Gipson quietly, "or we're goin' to tear her up."

And he leaned casually against the steering post, calmly munching a cud of tobacco until the engines caught and the huge tow halted in a boiling cauldron of mud and inched back into deep water.

Ever since that moment I have been an admirer of the rivermen.

It has been some years since my wife and I rode grandly down from Louisville to Baton Rouge in the air conditioned luxury of the Lin Smith. But I never cross the Mississippi or the Ohio or the Tennessee in an airplane without searching the stream for towboats. For the cool, calm men in the high glass pilot houses who buck upstream at five miles an hour are made of the same stuff as the bright boys at the jet controls who skim the earth at 550. These are no jobs for sissies.

Life on the river is better, of course, than in the Mark Twain age. Boilers don't blow. Steel hulls can snap the snags. Mark III radars outline the banks in the darkest fogs. And the upper Mississippi, the Ohio and the Tennessee are a series of slack water pools backed up behind the government dams.

But the Mississippi below Alton is still an untamed beast with the restless channel whipping back and forth, building up bars and ripping them out, swallowing plantations and moving farms from one state to another. You'll be vaguely disturbed in your sleep by a thump and the next morning you'll find the deck littered with leaves and branches, souvenirs of a bend shaved too closely in the darkness. The charts are no good on the lower river. You navigate by complicated sailing orders issued each week by the Army Engineers.

I remember Capt. John Philo Marionneaux, the Cajun skipper of the Lin Smith, who said of the river: "She's living and our enemy. Our companies may be competitors, but rivermen have to help each other."

For 24 hours a day the short-wave radio on the pilot house bulkhead chatters with skipper talk.

"Boy did I ever get messed up in Commerce Crossing! You don't take the shape of the shore off Campbell Light no more. Them two red buoys are out in the middle and you got to sashay around 'em and turn upriver of the dredge. Come back, Cap'n Billy."

"Thanks, Cap'n Oscar. We're comin' up on Hole-in-Wall now. There's mighty fast water in the Racetrack on account of the rise on the Yazoo. Watch for logs."

Minnesota, Mississippi and Pennsylvania voices come in with warnings of new hazards at old names — names like Whiskey Chute, Shoofly Bar, Pair o' Dice, Hop Joe, Free Nigger Point and Destruction Bend.

Well, here at Cincinnati they've been fitting out the Delta Queen for another cruise season. She's the last passenger-carrying packet on the rivers. Strangely, she was built in Scotland in sections and shipped to San Francisco where she spent years on the overnight run up to Sacramento. The famous Greene family of Cincinnati, which stubbornly refused to admit that packeting was dead, finally bought her and towed her around through the Panama Canal.

From now until the last of September she'll cover the Mississippi from New Orleans to St. Paul, the Tennessee as far as Chattanooga, and the Ohio to Pittsburgh. The green hills of Kentucky, the tall bluffs of Wisconsin and the delta canebrakes of Louisiana will echo to her steam calliope. She's the last of the Mohicans, the last of great tradition of the Natchez, the Robert E. Lee, the J. M. White, the Eclipse and the Grand Republic.

But the Mohicans may return. Business has been good and is getting better. An overcrowded and overhurried America may be about to discover the peace, the spaciousness of our river wildernesses.

Captain Ernest E. Wagner, 52-year-old skipper of the Delta Queen, guided me around the painters on the Texas deck and we leaned over the rail, looking at the thick waters.

"How did I get started on the river?" The captain laughed. "Dipping nickel ice cream cones on the boat that run up to the amusement park. I was a 17-year-old kid out of the Tennessee hills and I'd never seen a steamboat before. I dipped one day. Then I applied to be a deckhand. The river got me."

FOOD MARKETS THIS WEEK

Good Home Freezing Begins At The Market

By ESTELLE B. FRANKS

THIS WEEK LOOK FOR:

Vegetables—Greenhouse tomatoes, asparagus, salad vegetables, new red potatoes, lettuce, green peppers

Fruits—Bananas, pineapple, local rhubarb, strawberries

Protein Foods—Beef "specials," fryers, pork shoulder roasts and steaks, dairy products, large eggs

When vegetables or fruits are at their best for table use it is usually the ideal time to buy them for freezing. This time, as a rule, coincides with peak of harvest . . . when supply, quality and price are all in your favor.

Mrs. Franks

Foods to watch your market for now are asparagus, rhubarb and strawberries. Local asparagus will be past its best come June 1. Rhubarb is tops now for freezing and the season is here for shipped-in strawberries. Kentucky and California are the heavy strawberry suppliers this week. Ohio strawberries start coming around Memorial Day; local growers expect the heaviest pickings the second week in June this year.

Choosing the proper variety is also an important factor in successful freezing of fruits and vegetables. Some varieties freeze better than others. For example, a variety of strawberries may taste fine in a fresh strawberry shortcake but may not make a satisfactory frozen product.

Extension Bulletin No. 389, "Freezing and Using Vegetables, Fruits and Prepared Foods," O.S.U., lists the common fruits and vegetables that are recommended for freezing. It also gives tips on selection and detailed preparation methods. Drop a card or phone the Franklin County Extension Office, Room 317 Old Post Office, 221-3411, Extension 454, if you want a copy of the bulletin.

RED MEAT SUPPLIES CONTINUE LARGE

Retail beef prices are expected to remain relatively low during the spring and into the summer as there are still large inventories of cattle on feed at heavier average dressed weights. Typical of the season, there are a number of fine front quarter features—chuck, roasts, beef stew and the wholesale front quarter to be cut for freezer storage.

Retail pork supplies are declining and will be noticeably lower through the summer months. However, a number of pre-planned specials are available at present on loin roasts and chops, butt roasts and steaks, country-style ribs and roll sausage. Bacon is still at very economical price levels along with a variety of smoked hams.

DAV Slams Sale

The Disabled American Veterans of Franklin County have only one fund-raising project on the streets of Columbus and other towns in Franklin County each year. This is the Forget-Me-Not Sale conducted in the fall. All legitimate salespersons are identified by the blue Forget-Me-Not and canister.

The so-called "Disabled Veterans" who have been selling plastic rosettes and other novelties in the shopping centers and other congested areas have absolutely no conection with the Disabled American Veterans, are not sponsored by the Disabled American Veterans and in some cases are not even veterans. The only persons benefited by the sale of these novelties are the salespersons themselves.

Do not be taken in by these parasites.

HARD SEAT, CLOSE FINISH, BIG JUMP AS AREA CINDERMEN RACE FOR DISTRICT BERTHS

AREA TRACKSTERS were busy last week at Worthington as they vied for qualifying positions at the Central District Track and Field Meet. At left, Eastmoor's Jim Clark grimaces as he hits the sawdust after clearing the pole vault bar at 13'5¼" for the best effort in the qualifing round. Center photo finds Whitehall's Don Smith picking up a first in the qualifying round of the mile run. Smith covered the third heat distance in 4:41:6. At Smith's right is Walnut Ridge's Kenny Schwartz who finished a close second and also qualified. At right is East's Dick Saunders clearing the final obstacle in the 180 low hurdles. Saunders failed to qualify but teammate Kent Schoolfield did soon afterward. (Photos by Jack Wittenmeier)

HORIZONTAL SCOTTIE — Walnut Ridge pole vaulter Chuck Corbett is frozen horizontally in mid-air as he attempts to clear the bar in the qualifying round last week at the Central District Track and Field Meet at Worthington. Corbett's effort wasn't enough to offset a winning performance by Eastmoor's Jim Clark (see above). Bexley's Rick Harbold finished in a second-place tie.

ON AREA TRACKS . . .

East 3rd At District; Lundy, Clark Sparkle

East came closest among five area cinder squads to picking up honors last weekend in A and AA track and field meet competition.

The Tiger thins, paced by fleet-footed Fred Lundy, added up 27½ points to finish behind winner Worthington (32) and runner-up Central (31) at the AA event on the Cardinal track.

WHITEHALL (11½) was seventh, Eastmoor (7½) tied Gahanna for the ninth spot, Bexley (4) picked up the 18th position while Academy (14) tied University for fourth place honors in the A going at Otterbein.

Lundy picked up two of East's three firsts with wins in both the 100-yard dash (10.0) and 220 (22.1) while the Tigers' 880 relay team (Mike Gordon, John Bailey, Gail Lane and Lundy) set one of four new marks by covering the distance in 1:30.1.

Lundy's efforts paid off in 12½ points, topped only by Central's George Trammell's 14 markers.

THE ONLY other first place picked up by an area representative was notched by Eastmoor's Jim Clark, who paced the pole vault field with a bar-clearing win of 13'5¼."

Bexley's Rick Harbold finished in a second-place tie behind Clark to pick up the Lions' points.

Other area point getters were: Whitehall—Mike Short, discus (fourth) and shot put (third), Don Smith, mile run (third); Clark Fuller, low hurdles (third); Rick Ford, high jump (third-place tie).

EAST — KENT Schoolfield, low hurdles (second) and high hurdles (fourth); Bob Martin, high hurdles (third); Mike McClendon, pole vault (third-place tie).

Eastmoor—Don Wray, mile run (fifth); Ron Eiland, high jump (third-place tie). Bexley — Rick Davis, high jump (third-place tie).

Academy, who surrendered its A crown to Marion Catholic (40), gained two second-place finishes when the Vikings' mile relay team placed in that event and Ed Laws finished runner-up in the mile.

JOHN LARRIMER took a third in the 100-yard dash and Academy's 880 relay team also finished in the show spot to complete Viking scoring.

Worthington picked up the AA crown by merit of the Cards' victory in the final mile relay event by a fraction of a second. Runner-up Central, who had led until this point, finished fifth in the event.

Four records were eclipsed in the process of the AA event. Delaware's Dan Rybolt set a new discus mark with a toss of 163'1¾"; Central's George Trammell, only a sophomore, wiped out the old 440 time with a run of 49.6; Marysville's Jim Johnson tossed the shot 58'5" and East's winning 880 relay team completed the rundown.

MARION CATHOLIC overcame Richmond's first-day lead to snatch the A laurels. Two new marks were put into the books on University's Ken Love's 6'2⅛" high jump and Tom Kempton's (Mt. Vernon St. Vincent) mile run which clipped 3/10 of a second off the old 4:37 mark.

Wasps, Loneliness Part Of Scoreboard Detail

When Columbus Jet publicity man Dave Miller ushered us to the confines of deep center field last week, he must have wondered what could possibly be exciting about spending a couple of hours browsing around the scoreboard.

What Dave didn't know was that while other neighborhood kids were dreaming about a seat in the dugout, we had always been hopeful of tasting the excitement of thrills of supplying Joe Fan with all the scores of all the games in all the leagues.

TO OUR AMAZEMENT, we found that the scoreboard job is neither exciting nor thrilling, but a little bit hazardous and certainly lonely.

The man that shuffles the metal scorecards at Jet Stadium is an 18-year-old OSU freshman, Jim McCann. Young Jim, who has been hopping out to the park for night games at 6:30 p.m. since 1956, is responsible for posting runs, hits and errors. (Balls, strikes and at bat are handled electronically from the press box).

Just like most other jobs, the scoreboard man doesn't just fall into his position. Jim started as a bullpen 'runner' (smuggling peanuts to hungry reliefers) and eventually worked his way into his present duty.

JIM'S RIGHTHAND man is 13-year-old Tommy Cooper, son of GM Harold. Tom's job concerns climbing around the major league board and like Dad, worrying about things like losses and attendance.

Two of the major qualifications for scoreboard duty are agility (dodging a barrage of stones junior fans might decide to let fly over the center field wall) and grass roots public relations (sharing the scoreboard telephone with a nest of wasps.)

INCONSIDERATE ball players can also pose a problem, especially when they rattle home run balls between the scoreboards on successive days and fall over the outfield fence on top of you as Johnny Powers did a couple of seasons ago.

The scoreboard man must be a cool-headed sort even when the numbered plates seem sure to be exhausted (seven 'ones' in two and one-half innings the other evening).

Hot summer night games introduce another peril as squadrons of blood-thirsty mosquitos and fluttering millers, attracted by the bright spotlights, dive bomb the scoreboard crew with uncanny accuracy.

OLD BOY SCOUT training must be recalled and dusted off when chilly spring evenings necessitate the crackling sound of flames and wood. And even at the hottest Sunday doubleheader, the concession boys don't include the scoreboard on their circuit.

Disregarding wasp nests and pesky mosquitos, the unkindest cut of all came this spring when the powers that be decided that slowpoke firemen took too long arriving from the center field bullpen and placed them down the right and left field lines.

NOW THE SCOREBOARD area is virtually deserted. It's become a lonely place with only Tom's transister radio and a robin's nest with three unhatched eggs for company.

The boys harbored a turtle that wandered into the area for awhile but the lazy amphibian was small compensation for the diamond stories of the departed bullpen crew.

So any time you might notice an inverted 2 or a 6 that should really be a 9 on the Stadium scoreboard, don't be too critical. Remember all that glitters isn't gold. Everybody has their problems these days.

MAIL BAG DETAIL—Dear Mr. Wittenmeier,

A note of appreciation for last week's (May 9) really great column re: The Tribe! This, sir, is the story of my life and hard times as an Indian lover. Never have I seen our plight more graphically described.

Probably the high spot of my career as a fan was the day I sat in the stadium and watched Casey Stengel retrieve a pitcher the lights of my life had succeeded in knocking from the box. (I even have pictures to prove this momentous event!)

Those were indeed the golden "days of wins and Rosen" (one of the best puns ever).

Sincerely,
Jane T. Ault

DEAR MRS. AULT,

Your letter proves there's still hope. All this time, my Yankee friends have been telling me that ours was an extinct breed. Don't give up the ship!

Eastmoor Nine Eliminated; Whitehall Hopes Dwindle

Eastmoor, knocked out of the AA diamond tourney by Lima Senior Saturday, 7-5, remained in contention for the City League pennant Monday with an 8-4 win over North.

Jerry Aggas provided both pitching and batting punch to the Warrior attack, helping to win his own game in relief of Doug Cromer with three RBIs.

EASTMOOR SCORED four in the first and three more in the seventh to ice the win although Aggas needed relief help from Jerry Myers when the Bears rallied for three runs in the final frame.

The Warriors had another big first inning Saturday in the AA regionals against Lima as they scored five big runs. But that was all Eastmoor could score the rest of the way as Senior tied the score in the second and picked up their winning tallies in the fourth.

The Warriors collected a total of eight hits including two each by Dean Ishida and Ron Bollie. Myers went the distance for Eastmoor and took the loss.

WHITEHALL'S hopes of a CBL title grew dimmer last week as the Rams dropped their fourth loop game, 3-2, to Grandview.

Both clubs collected four hits each but two of the Bobcat safeties were of the four-base variety as Doug Welsh and Steve Emrich teed off during Grandview's three-run fourth inning.

In other area games, Walnut Ridge downed St. Charles, 4-3, while the Carolians also lost to Watterson, 7-2. Hartley was defeated by South, 4-2.

DAVE FEYH'S single provided Walnut Ridge with a 2-1 extra-inning victory over Aquinas Tuesday afternoon.

Dennis Day went the route for the Scotties and picked up the win on a five-hitter. Walnut Ridge tied the score in the last inning, picking up the win that put them over the .500 mark when Steve Heavlin came home on Feyh's safety in the first extra frame.

A. K. Pitchers Limit Long Ball As Loop Opens

Pitchers held a gallery of long ball hitters to only four home runs in the four games played in the Jewish Center A.K. loop openers last week.

Hal Paris with three hits, including a home run, led Kozy Kitchen to a 5-3 decision over Outdoor Military.

OUTDOOR JUMPED out into a two-run lead in its half of the first inning but never touched home plate again.

Ben Horowitz, a "rookie" this year, had two hits for the Militarymen.

Kozy Kitchen scored its five runs on 13 hits while Outdoor Military scored twice on seven hits. Ben Weis was the winning pitcher and Ben Horowitz the loser.

SEYMOUR BAKERY, led by Irv Flox and Ed Baier with four hits each, blasted Muffler King, 13-8. Dennis Browner hit for the circuit in the Seymour attack.

Howard Byer, Mort Rising and Henry Finke all had three hits for the Muffler men.

Seymour scored its 13 runs on 21 hits. Muffler King picked up nine safeties for its eight runs. Sanford Shaw was the winner and Gene Hamer-off the loser.

MARTIN'S MARKET netted three runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to defeat a hard fighting Ontario team, 5-3.

Marty Friedman's long home run pushed over the three runs to ice the game. Ernie Michaelson hit a four-bagger for the Ontario team. Dick Stein was the winner and Meyer Kravitz the loser.

HACKMAN REALTY took a 5-4 cliff hanger from Wolman Insurance as Lenny Haas and Irv Lichtenstein picked up three hits a piece.

Stu Newpoff led the Wolman with three hits. Wolman outhit Hackman 15-14 but could only tally four runs.

Scottie Athletes Feted At Banquet

Varsity and reserve athletes from seven athletic squads were honored Monday night at Walnut Ridge's first annual All-Sports Banquet at the high school.

Coaches recognized letter winners in football, wrestling, basketball, baseball, track, golf and cross-country. The Scottie Booster Club presented picture placards to the departing senior lettermen.

BASKETBALL COACH Jack Moore announced the scheduling of two state cage powers for the Scottie card during the next two seasons—Middletown next season during the Christmas holidays and Salem the following season.

Ralph Webster, head football coach, outlined a rigid training program for the W-R athletes which includes a "walk to school" policy. The latter proposal drew applause from the large crowd of parents present at the affair.

The U.S. Navy announced Nov. 24, 1945, that a complete cure for cholera had been found.

Fish, Scenery Lure Scribes To Fontana

FONTANA VILLAGE, N. C. — As the man stepped in the boat, he tossed a lure box to me and said "we'll try this for bass. I'm Bob Cook." We didn't talk anymore, for a while, as the outboard motor was purring and I was watching the spectacular beauty unfold of Fontana Lake and the Great Smoky Mountains wherein it lies.

INSIDE ON THE Outdoors By ROB COCHRAN

My fishing partner was Will Keller, outdoor writer for the Cincinnati Post-Times-Star, and Bob told us that he would keep the boat at casting distance from the rocky shore. "Put your baits right in on the bank," he said. "Then twitch them for about four to six feet and then reel it." It was the same trick used by bass fishermen everywhere.

ON ABOUT MY twentieth cast the bait, a Boba-Linda manufactured by Cook, disappeared with a slurp and I was confronted with a largemouth bass sudsing up the water like a smallmouth. He jumped five times and ducked under the boat twice, but the bass was well hooked and we landed him.

This, of course, was not a surprise, for Fontana Lake is noted for its leaping largemouths. We had come nearly 500 miles to see some in action.

My second fish was a smallmouth, and we couldn't predict which would be next — largemouth or smallmouth. The shorelines here are steep and rock strewn. There are no brush or trees growing in the water, but there are large mats of driftwood backed up in some of the coves.

IT IS EASY fishing, for you simply work the shorelines at this time of the year. Casting around the rock outcrops and along the mats of drift seems to be the most productive procedure.

We stuck to artificials since Cook has a lot of confidence in his bait. Some of the other Buckeye fishermen (there are 31 writers on this trip) used live bait called "spring lizards." These are no more than salamanders caught by hand from beneath rocks in the fast-flowing stream here in the mountains. Faith in the Boba-Linda paid off, however, for we caught bass.

All the action we had was on this bait, and we tried some others. It is modeled after the famed Rapala which is difficult to find and disappears from sporting goods stores as fast as it arrives. You can get a Boba-Linda, however, from Robert L. Cook, Route 2, Maryville, Tenn. Price is $2.00.

THE FISHING possibilities here are enough to make you want to pack up and move. Fontana Lake is at the end of the huge TVA chain, and offers some 10,000 miles of shoreline to anglers. There is trout fishing in the mountain streams, the best, perhaps, being Hazel Creek.

Directly below Fontana Dam are two other dams belonging to the Aluminum Company of America — Cheoah and Santeetlah. There are trout and muskies in Cheoah and fine bass fishing in Santeetlah, which we fished today.

Water was higher here and had flooded some willows, and this is where we found the bass in Santeetlah. Later, I understand, the level will bed ropped and the rock shore will be more exposed.

THE ENTIRE Great Smoky area appears to be a large forest preserve. This vicinity is owned almost entirely by the government. There are the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, Joyce Kilmer Memorial Forest, Santeetlah Wildlife Area, and the Nantahala National Forest.

The scenery here is impressive, as many people know, but it cannot all be seen from a car. A walk through part of the Joyce Kilmer Forest is an experience you would not want to miss.

Here is a stand of trees that are as the pioneers saw them—huge hemlocks, tulip poplars and oaks. The area was owned by a lumber company, but the lakes in this region flooded the roads and a railroad track before these trees could be cut. Preserved now for all to see, a hike here is like walking in a cathedral.

LAUREL IS in bloom and the azaleas are just finishing their performance. The rhododendrons will put on their show for sightseers next month. With all of the government land here, there is enough development to allow the enjoyment of the area.

Fontana Village offers 365 cottages and a lodge to tourists, and has all the facilities of a small town. Actually that is what it is, for TVA built the place for construction workers when the dam was built during World War II.

Among other places I've seen are the motel and cabins at Thunderbird, and the beautiful, remote and scenic Snowbirds Lodge on a mountain top.

This trip has been too short — I hope to return soon.

Fast Service Is Specialty Of Front Street Auto Wash

An economical car wash at a big savings in time is the specialty of Front Street Auto Wash, 261 S. Front-st, according to a company spokesman who explained that the complete job of washing and cleaning an automobile is completed in from only three to three and one-half minutes at a cost of only $1.75.

A special offer by the company enables regular customers to receive a car wash and cleaning at even more savings through the purchase of a thrift card. This plan enables the purchaser to receive four washes for $6, a savings of $1, or seven wash jobs for $10, a savings of $2.25. The card is available by request from the manager of Front Street Car Wash, Ervin Warner, or from a member of the staff.

Automatic equipment enables the firm to speed autos through the process of being cleaned and washed. A full-time staff of eight men speeds the task along. Every car which goes through the process is completely scrubbed and wiped off. The inside of the auto is also vacuumed with a sweeper, the dash and interior are wiped off, and the white or black tire sidewalls are cleaned. The entire process takes less time to do than to read about.

Although waxing a car is not a regular speciality of Front Street Auto Wash, this type of work is also done by prior arrangement. Appointments can be made by contacting the organization at CA. 8-4175.

One of the big advantages offered by the firm is the extremely fast service, not to mention the complete cleaning job that every auto receives. For the driver or auto owner in a hurry, who wants his car looking its best, Front Street Auto Wash has the answer.

'Training Is Key To Canine Joy' Claims Warden

Jack Chapman, 8097 E. Broad-st, Reynoldsburg dog warden said that any dog may undergo training for better enjoyment by its owner after it has reached nine months of age.

"The purpose of obedience trials is to demonstrate the usefullness of the purebred dog as the companion and guardian of man, and not the ability of the dog to acquire facility in the performance of mere tricks." Chapman pointed out.

This classification which has been adopted by the American Kennel Club is progressive, with the thought in mind that a dog which can be termed a "utility dog" has demonstrated his fitness for a place in our modern scheme of living.

Long before a dog reaches the point of being entered at a show to qualify for a degree, he must begin a training program. Certain methods are proven and acceptable as the best means of teaching the dog to "heel," "sit," "down," "stay" and "come." If he goes to the weekly classes, and is worked at home only 15 minutes a day, he should become a more pleasant fellow to have around. No more jumping on visitors, or dragging you down the sidewalk when you try to take him for a walk. Even canines without a pedigree can be training to their owners' enjoyment and pleasure, Chapman brought out.

"The secret behind a dog's being so easy to train is the fact that more than anything else, he wants to please. If commands are given properly, and the dog lavishly praised for performing properly, he soon realizes just what you wish him to do, and that if he does so, attention and affection are forthcoming." Chapman said.

Call the dog warden (866-2425) if you are interested in training classes. Children's classes will be held this summer for eightweeks. The next ten-week session begins in September, Tuesday evenings at 7:30 p.m.

the fact they have served a certain number of years. More attention should be given to rewarding individual teachers for his or her exceptional ability to teach. More of these teachers should be kept in teaching rather than being elevated to administrative jobs where their services as excellent teachers are lost.

8. We need to devise some method of interesting more parents in a close relationship with the school and with their children's school work. Too many parents look upon the school teacher as a day-time baby sitter.

9. It is highly desirable that the matter of moral and character development is not overlooked and is made a part of the processes of learning to live together.

10. If and when reliable surveys show that more money is needed for new buildings and teachers' salaries, residents of the community should realize that this is their most important investment and should support such measures.

• Arranging for Little Columbus (Cheri Cardi, Jan's daughter), Little Miss Portsmouth (Jamisue Griffith) and Little Miss Whitehall (Phyllis Ann Schaffer) to be on hand along with Miss Central Ohio Sally Ann Shrader.

• Contacting Whitehall Mayor Walter B. Moling to present trophies.

"I thought all you had to do was throw 25 or 30 girls in bathing suits, escort them to a platform and let the gentlemen in the audience ooh and aah and dodge elbow jabs from their spouses," I said to her, feeling somewhat ignorant at this point.

"Mercy me, no," Mrs. Cardi replied.

"One thing bothers me about the list of arrangements, though," I continued.

"What's that," she asked.

"Contestants," said I.

"Sonofagun," was the reply with modulating tones that obviously meant that it may have slipped her mind.

Garbage—

signed in January, 1961, and expires at the end of this year.

In a special Saturday council meeting, Councilman Ken McIntosh stated that the North firm has a problem of its own. "Their desperation is not our problem," he said.

Service Director Robert Mickey opined that Whitehall has been "getting its garbage collection too cheaply, anyway." Mickey added: "I realize that North Haulage is in trouble, and we have a moral obligation to them — not a legal one."

Maxwell, in attendance at the special meeting, said he has made an "actual count" of the city homes using the free service. He termed his count as different than the one reported by Mickey.

"I'll admit that I did not make the count," Mickey said, "but I know that any count made will fluctuate greatly."

McIntosh urged that a "base count" be adopted to give council "something to go on." Councilman Linn Hiatt persisted that "it's too difficult to maintain an accurate figure."

Maxwell's claimed increase of 1,126 units over the two-year period is based on correctness of the original starting point of 5,050 units. Mickey claims a two-year increase of 89 units, based on building permit records.

Two additional sources for determining the approximate increase in residential units are much closer together in their calculations. They are the Ohio Fuel Gas Co., and the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co.

According to Ohio Fuel statistics, they were servicing 300 more residential units in December, 1962, than in December, 1960. The C&SOE figures showed an increase of 296 over the same period.

The question of determining the winning number in this "legalized numbers game" now rests with Whitehall Council.

There may be many who wish for a more complete and comprehensive solution of the Cuban crisis, but in this imperfect world, we have at least for the moment, to accept less than perfect solutions. . . U.N. Secretary General U. Thant.

Stocks Open At Speedway Friday Night

By BILL GRAY

The Columbus Motor Speedway will swing open its gates for the 1963 racing season Friday night, when a full program of flying-stock races is scheduled.

Following Friday night's lid-lifter, the Williams-rd raceway will run every Friday and Sunday night, with a combination program of supermodifieds and late-model events every Sunday evening.

THIS WILL be the first season that late-model cars will race regularly on the fast third-mile blacktop oval. These cars will be from 1954 through 1961 models and must be strictly stock in appearance. Changes in the motor can be "anything you can't see."

In the speedway's game of "Total," there will be $100 in cash in Friday's jackpot for the fan, or fans, who can correctly pick the first five finishers, in order, in the feature race. Entry cards are free and may be picked up at the ticket gate.

Time trials, both Friday and Sunday, begin at 7 p.m. with the first race set for 8 o'clock.

The award, given annually since 1960, is the "Oscar" recognition to the outstanding faculty member during the current school year.

Dell was graduated from Capital in 1923 and received his master's degree at Ohio State University in 1929.

He is mainly noted for his poetry, which has been published in such noted periodicals as Atlantic Monthly and American Scholar. He is the author of the Capital "Alma Mater" and the "Pride of the Purple," the university's fight song.

Farmers Nix 1964 Wheat Referendum

Ohio wheat farmers opposed the 1964 wheat program when they voted Tuesday. Only 22.64 per cent of Ohio voters approved the referendum. On Wednesday morning the Ohio voting showed 67,081 against and 19,639 for.

National figures showed 597,000 approving, 547,000 dissenting. A two-thirds yes vote was required to pass the referendum.

The Kennedy administration stated that passage of the "supply management" measure would have kept wheat prices at $2 per bushel by limiting overproduction. Prices will allegedly drop to $1.10 per bushel through uncontrolled surpluses.

Bexley High School LION'S ROAR

By Connie McCleary

Prom Theme Will Be Told To Students On Saturday

The secret theme of the 1963 senior-junior prom will be revealed Saturday, May 25, when the juniors entertain the senior class at the annual dance from 9 to 12 p.m. in the school gym.

Committee chairmen for the affair are Roger Nullman and Barbara Klages, decorations; John Grossman and Carla Coffman, reservations; Charlene Gilbert and Paula Solomon, refreshments; Pam Mulbarger and Joanne Coopersmith, souvenirs, and Kay Ingalls and Shyla Jones, details.

At the fourth annual Journalism Banquet held May 6 at the Defense Construction Supply Center, 37 Bexley juniors and seniors were inducted into Quill and Scroll, national journalism honorary.

The new members include: Todd Barkan, Kathy Bidlack, Lee Caryer, Mary Jane Chittenden, Sherry Christie, Judy Danchik, Diana Detrick, Jeff Fischer, Gail Gertner, Carole Glick, Irv Godofsky, Jane Gumble, Sally Heinke, Missy Heffernan, Jim Hoyer, Shep Kahn, Barbara Koltun, Marilyn Kurtz, Cindy Levoff, Phil Magley, Libby Lemmon, Connie McCleary, Jeff McClelland, Steve Pariser, Edward Pritchett, Sharky Roberts, Pam Robinson, Dody Schwartz, Betty Shafer, Joel Slaven, Dave Swedlow, Barry Thall, Roger Williamson, Doug Woodyard, Susie Wolman and Ann Zimpfer.

Creative writing awards were also presented to the writers of the seven best stories appearing this year in the school newspaper, the Torch. Recipients of the awards were Steve Ault, Harriett Nalty, Connie McCleary, Doug Woodyard, Carl Japikse, Sherry Christie and Bob Granat.

Student Health Council officers were elected recently. Cheri Papier will serve as president for the year 1963-64. Vice-president and secretary-treasurer will be Kalitsa Tsitouris and Kathy Offenberg, respectively.

Spanish Club installed its officers for the next school year at its annual banquet held May 14 in the student lounge. Carolyn Stegmiller will head the club as president. Other officers include Bob Berlin, vice-president; Cathy Malloy, secretary, and Ron Solove, treasurer.

Music Club will hold its annual picnic at Jeffrey Mansion next Monday, May 27. Officers to be installed are Betty Jane Shaw, president; Sandra DeLong, vice-president, and Janet McCleary, secretary-treasurer.

Jaycees—

their second year now) but they have some grown-up ideas about the Fourth celebration's rebirth.

Plans now call for spreading the activities out through Whitehall with the big field off E. Broad-st at Robinwood-av as the central location.

A parade (sound trucks, decorated bikes, civic and fraternal groups and, maybe, pretty girls, too) is to launch the project by marching from one end of the Town and Country Shopping Center to the other.

The Jaycees also want to stage a Little League baseball game at Whitehall High, a swimming contest at Swimland on Hamilton-rd and an archery contest on the Robinwood lot.

Another concern of the Jaycees is tying the event in with the nationwide Independence Day bell ringing project ("Let Freedom Ring"), which will be a five-minute period at about 1 p.m. They may pipe bells through a loud speaker and, of course, make use of the firehouse bells.

Other plans call for a water battle by the fire department, potato sack races, dog show, pet parade, amusement rides, Shetland pony rides, horseshoes, bowling on the green, relay races, band concert and exhibitions by the police honor guard and Civil Air Patrol drill teams.

Sound like a full day? Just in case it doesn't, Mayor Moling has given his okay to stage games with winners receiving gift certificates to Town and Country and Great Eastern shopping centers.

Also, for teens of all ages, a big sock hop is being readied, to say nothing of a $500 fireworks display climax.

The Jaycees say that they will arrange "booths depicting the spirit of the day" and also for the various games of skill. Arrangements for booths can be made by calling LaRue at BE. 5-3829.

With plans like these, this thing could prove to be the biggest civic pride booster ever to hit Whitehall. There are those who think it will be.

NEW BUILDING PERMIT

The Standard Oil Co., 174 E. Long-st, has been issued a building permit to construct a one-story, masonry and steel building at 1565 to 1569 E. Main-st. Construction is valued at $12,500.

PLAT PRESENTED

The failure of the Madison Local School bond issue at primary time did not deter the Ohio Holding Company from filing the final plats for Blacklick Estates No. 3 with the City Planning Commission Wednesday morning. When the issue was beaten it removed any possibility of adequate classroom space in the district next year.

The Regional Planning Commission has already approved the plats of the 82.935 acres east of Noe-Bixby-rd and south of Henderson-Miller-rd. The 346 lots in the subdivision are additional to the approximately 750 included in Blacklick Estates 1 and 2, according to Grant Dyer of the City Planning Commission office.

No reservation for a school site is included in this plat, but Phillip K. Williams, executive head of the district, was verbally granted his request for a 12-acre reserve in the remaining 30 per cent of the overall development which remains unplatted.

Dyer stated that it is unofficially understood that model homes will be built this summer.

Welfare Council Elects Officers

New officers of the Hilliard Community Welfare Council were elected at a recent meeting.

Elected were Howard Liles, chairman; James Sarafin, vice-chairman; Mrs. Richard Springer, secretary, and Mrs. Jack Springer, treasurer.

Kenneth Love, retiring chairman, was retained as an ex officio committee member in the hope of continuity of council activities.

The press goes first — and what comes next? Well, the legitimate courts are superseded in every autocracy by puppet judges and tribunals. Thus freedom passes. . . Don Shoemaker, editor, Miami Herald.

NO SHORTAGE OF FISHING SPOTS

THE BATTLE OF THE DAY is nearly over and the story of the one that didn't get away will be told and retold by these two anglers for many days . . . at least until the next big battle. Hundreds of lakes in Ohio have offered the avid fisherman a virtual paradise for many years and the future of the popular sport is insured by the Ohio Department of Natural Resources. Columbus is in the center of some of the finest lake, creek and river fishing to be found in the Midwest and hundreds of popular fishing spots are within a four-hour drive of the Ohio Capital City.

Make Plans To Protect Your Health For Traveling Abroad

If you're planning a summer trip out of the United States, it might be wise to consider a few factors concerning your own health before running to catch the Queen Mary.

Otis B. Schreuder, M.D., the medical director (overseas division) of Pan American World Airways, Inc., offers some tips.

First of all, Dr. Schreuder predicted that almost two million Americans will engage in international travel this year. This is more than enough to justify comment on the subject of health for the traveler.

Some travelers will ruin their trip by becoming ill, and this ruination begins early.

"Too often the traveler handicaps himself right from the start," the doctor said. "Frantic last-minute arrangements, farewell parties, the excitement and possible anxiety leave him exhausted and already below par."

The answer, of course, is to start early to avoid the rush.

If going away for any length of time, a physical examination and a dental checkup are in order, the doctor urges. "Your doctor can give the necessary immunizing shots for the section of the world you plan to visit, plus checking on your smallpox vaccination," he added.

You might also toss in a small, simple first-aid kit with the bare essentials: adhesive tape and gauze bandage or small tape-on bandages, aspirin and nasal spray. Take along an extra pair of eyeglasses or a prescription for a new pair in case your present ones are lost or broken.

"If you are a diabetic, are allergic to penicillin or have a condition that should require emergency care, then I strongly urge you to carry an identifying bracelet, tag or card indicating this," the doctor added.

Diarrhea, the most common tourist ailment, is most often caused by contaminated food, milk or water, although emotional tension and too-rich foods can also bring it on, he continued.

"If it strikes," Dr. Schreuder advises, "rest and diet on tea, chicken broth, boiled rice and applesauce. Consult a physician if it lasts more than a day or two."

Here's a final tip:

If in doubt about drinking water, boil it for five minutes or add three drops of tincture of iodine for each quart and let it stand a half hour.

On a more cheerful note, the doctor concluded by saying "very few tourists get sick, so don't be overly concerned about your health problem during the trip. The best policy is to decide on a set of reasonable precautions and then relax. Your stay abroad may be a medicine in itself."

Bon voyage!

Comedy Corner

"No, Herschel, I can't find anything in your future that says you're going to travel!"

OUTFIT THE DOG

Taking the family dog along on your boating trip? Then outfit him with a body harness rather than a collar, experts recommend. A harness makes it easier to pull Fido out of the water with a boat hook if he falls overboard.

Haydocy Reports Sales At All-Tme High

Paul Haydocy, president of Haydocy Pontiac, 500 W. Broad-st, reports that sales reached an all-time new high in new and used car sales and in the service department during the month of April at his auto dealership.

Haydocy attributed the new records to "a friendly atmosphere, excellent service and the best deals in town." Haydocy Pontiac has also continued to be one of the largest Pontiac dealerships in the state of Ohio, doing a large volume of business which in turn offers better prices to customers.

Haydocy said his agency is looking forward to exceeding last month's record figures during May and sales already are pointed in this direction.

The popular owner-manager of the auto agency is married, has six children and resides at 7575 Belaire-av, Dublin. He is an Air Force Veteran of World War II.

Jack Haydocy, 2277 Nayland-av, Upper Arlington, serves as vice-president of the organization and started in business with his brother at a Cleveland auto firm. In 1956 they purchased their present Pontiac dealership and moved to the Columbus area. Later a large used car lot was added to the business and one of the biggest body and fender repair shops in Columbus was installed.

Make The Most Of Your Vacation Film

By MARCUS ORR

No doubt about it — thousands of people will have happy vacations this summer, but they'll bring back nothing but a flock of sad pictures to show.

Good vacation pictures will be admired over and over again by your family and others. They can be worth many times their original cost, if you'll take time now to make them good.

Following are a few hints to help you make the most of your vacation photography:

Be familiar with your equipment. Too often the camera is the last item purchased (or borrowed) for that once-in-a-lifetime vacation. The results can be disastrous. You can ruin your fun while fumbling over the controls of a new camera. Practice with a few rolls before starting your trip. A camera dealer can show you where you went wrong and any defects in equipment can be spotted in time.

Protect your equipment. Travel is hard on cameras and film. Heat, salt water, and sand are special trouble makers. A good leather carrying case is worth the money. Film and accessories (keep gadgets to a minimum) should be kept in a sturdy box for auto travel. Try to place the box in the coolest part of the car and out of the view of thieves. (Incidentially, camera insurance, available from any general agent, is low cost and a wise investment.)

Heat is a real enemy of color film. For this reason you may wish to buy it as you go, if supply places are assured. Mail it to the processor as soon as it is taken from the camera. Never, but never, keep film supplies on the rear seat ledge of the car. Some photographers select the rear floor of the car for their film storage box, but this may not be good. It may be directly over a hot muffler. Today's greenhouse-glassed autos admit a lot of heat when the car is parked and locked up. A thermometer check may show that a well-insulated trunk and a blanket cover provide the best protection.

Choose films carefully. You'll probably want to do most of your travel pictures in color. There are many new products on the market and some may be confusing. Also beware of bargain "off-brand" films. They're seldom satisfactory. Be sure your camera settings match those given in the instruction sheets. Some modern color films require settings very similar to the black-and-white stuff of 10 years ago.

Scenic views seem to be the chief targets of vacation camera toters . . . although some of your most pleasing shots will be closeups of people, flowers, animals relics, etc. Large expanses of mountain, prairie, and water may appeal to the eye but often make disappointing pictures. Lighting and composition are most important for these. It's no longer a sin to point your camera into the general direction of the sun—providing you keep a low-cost sunshade on the lens. Landscapes will take on a new "texture" through this backlighting or sidelighting from the sun . . . just remember to allow a little more light into the lens. Nudge the pointer over a mark or two, say from f16 to f11 or f8.

Compose your scenics with some foreground objects in them. Pictures shot out over the water from the railing of a pleasure boat are seldom good . . . so step back 10 feet or so and include part of the boat. The difference will be gratifying. For distance landscapes, include a tree, a car, or person in the foreground to give depth and scale.

Many camera fans shoot their vacations with two cameras. Scenics are most economically shot on, say 35mm slides, the best of which may be made into pleasing enlarged prints for framing or picture book. Save the movie camera footage for the interesting little side trips . . . the true action. Shoot movies of that horseback ride to Hidden Falls, the morning of fishing, the Indian rain dance, the old fellow tending his tobacco patch, the ride on the ski-lift and Junior building his sand castles at the beach.

If you must shoot landscapes with that movie camera, do it in several takes. Don't swing the camera (called panning) in wide sweeps hoping to get everything in a 10-second burst. You'll make your audience dizzy.

A good rule for novice movie cameramen: make believe you have a bad case of rheumatism. Freeze your body while you hold the camera and let the subject do the moving. Pan the camera only when you must follow close-up fast action. If action in the scene "turns sour," stop the camera and choose a new angle. Liven up your footage with good closeups, signs to identify your location, faces of the people you see.

When you return home and all the pictures are assembled, be firm. Edit out all your "goofs", duplicate views, etc. Your family and friends will love you for it, and your reputation for good photography will be established.

Horse Auction Set For May 25

Like auctions?

Most people do and Earl Lambert, manager of the Midwest Auction Sales Management, is extending an invitation to the public to visit their horse auction in the Junior Fair Building at the Ohio Exposition Center Saturday, May 25.

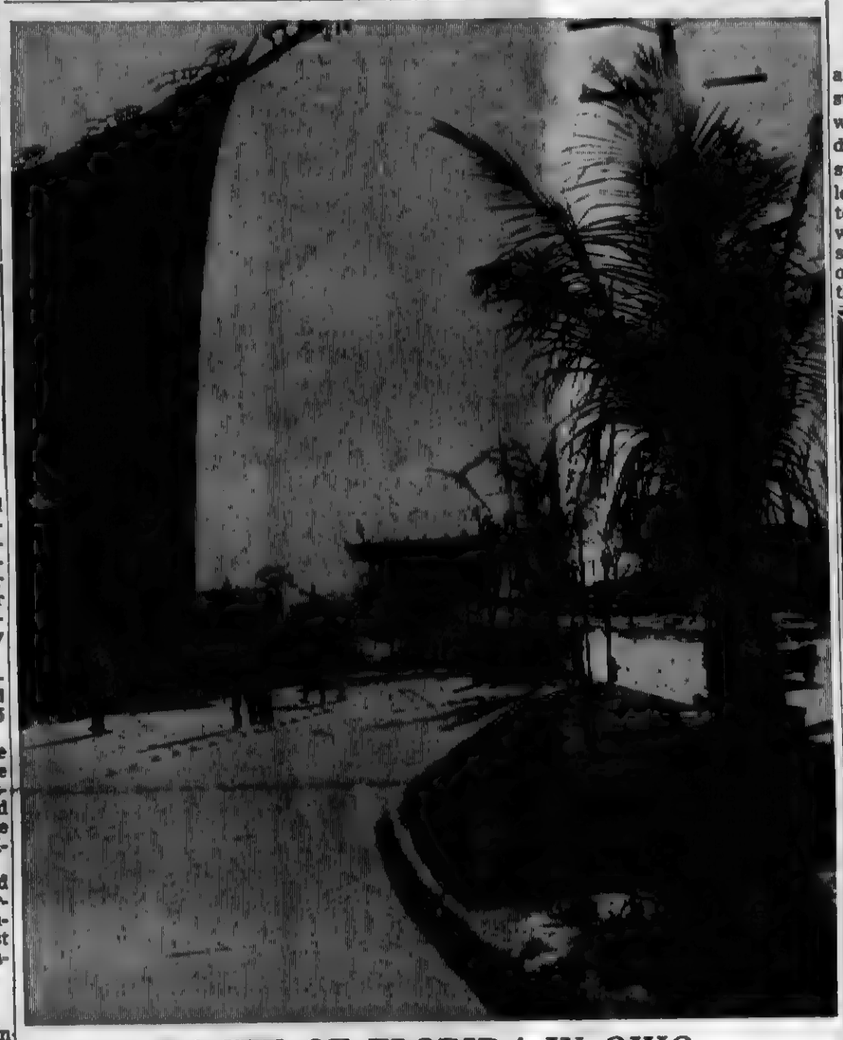
The sale of tack and equipment will start at 3 p.m. and horses will go on sale at 5 p.m.

In the forthcoming sale some outstanding horses are being offered with some exceptionally good registered Arabian stock from the estate of the late Dr. John E. Talbott of Lima, Ohio.

Many horse breeders and farmers are turning their surplus horses into cash by consigning them to the Midwest Sales. Offices of the organization are at 544 Parsons-av.

EARLY START

Travelers who complain about the crowds in Yellowstone National Park will enjoy its true wilderness beauty before the big summer season. For the early birds, Old Faithful Inn and Lake Lodge opened May 1, Canyon Village Motor Lodge will open May 24.



OFF ON A FAMILY CAMPING TRIP

READY FOR A WEEKEND at the camp grounds the Jay Erbe family, 168 Postle-bl, have everything in shape to join with thousands of other Ohioans at their favorite outdoor sport. The family uses a tent-trailer combination, which easily hitches to the rear of a car, that opens into a large tent complete with beds. Sides of the trailer are hollow to allow storage of camping equipment. Leading the procession with large jug in hand is Gary, 8, followed by his father Jay and little sister Debbie, 2. Fifteen-year-old Ricky followed by Darlene, 16, and Mrs. Erbe complete the family camping group.

FALSE SAVINGS

You can get more "mileage" on your vacation this summer if you drive a car with new, well-inflated tires, drive on a hot day at high speeds, and carry a minimum load. But, the American Automobile Association says, it will be a false mileage saving, since those factors affect the odometer reading rather than the actual mileage traveled.

A BIT OF FLORIDA IN OHIO

PALM TREES have displaced native Buckeye trees on Columbus' East Side. Sporting six eight-foot and two 25-foot and a dozen smaller tropical palms is the Kahiki Supper Club, 3583 E. Broad-st. Photo shows workmen after they completed transplanting two of the palms, which were trucked in from Florida. How long passersby will be able to view a bit of Florida on the East Side will depend upon when freezing weather arrives next fall.

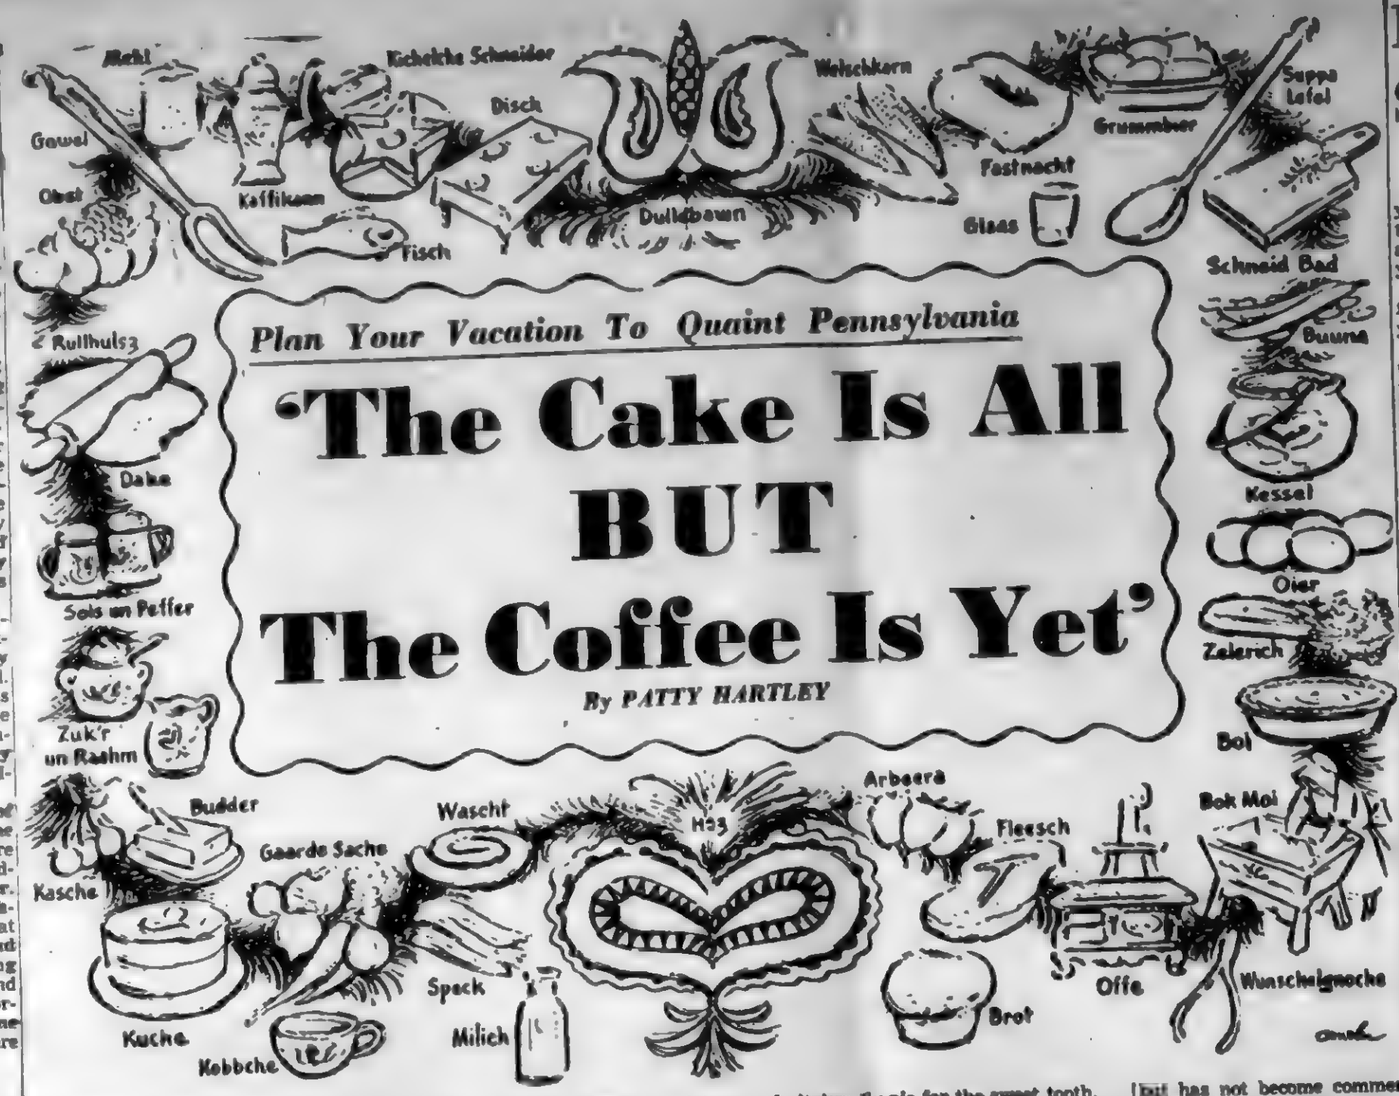
Wildlife Orphans Hard To Raise

This is the time of the year when wild animal critpers are reported to the Division of Wildlife officials. Often, the person reporting wants to "adopt" the young creatures and attempt to raise them.



"Do not pick up the young of wildlife which you may find in the outdoors," the game officials say. "Usually the parents are nearby watching over their young and if you take them, you are actually kidnaping. What is more, you are violating the game laws by taking wildlife illegally and this offense is punishable by a maxmum fine of $200 plus costs.

"The wild young are usually hard to raise and frequently die. If they survive, they must eventually be released. After being reared by humans the are unfit to survive in the wild as the have no wild instinct. As the result, they often fall easy victims to predators.

Don't make orphans of young wildlife, either. Canine cats and dogs as they are bound to capture young wildlife at this time of the year. Drive carefully on the highways, too, for most adults at this season are parents, and if they are killed their young will starve. If you should find an actual case of a wild orphan, call your local game protector. He will take care of the young wildlife."

PROTECT CAMERA

Take your camera along on your motoring vacation this year, but don't keep it in the glove compartment, the American Automobile Association advises. The heat and dust there could be injurious to both camera and film.

Plan Your Vacation To Quaint Pennsylvania

'The Cake Is All BUT The Coffee Is Yet'

By PATTY HARTLEY

Sauerbraten, wiener schnitzel, German potato pancakes and applebutter, topped off with shoo-fly pie and the quaint, cozy atmosphere of a Pennsylvania Dutch kitchen.

There's something unique about the people, food and customs in southeastern Pennsylvania, designated as the heart of Pennsylvania Dutch territory.

Such towns as Lancaster, Bird-In-Hand, Lebanon, Manheim, York, Fertility and Strasburg are populated by Amish, Dunkards and Mennonites who have not changed with the times and who infect tourists with their simple, sincere way of life.

They shun publicity and so other folks in the area have formed the Pennsylvania Dutch Historical Society to preserve and share these homey traditions. Several times during the summer they sponsor folk festivals throughout the area.

Typical will be the Harvest Frolic near Lancaster to be held Aug. 28 through Sept. 2.

The festival has demonstrations on cigar-making, fence whitewashing, quilting and bonnet making, schnitzing (applebutter making), soap making, glass blowing, bread baking in outdoor kilns, sauerkraut and relish (sweet and sour) making.

There are numerous neatly-painted sign boards with history on local customs and sayings. These farm folk have a language of their own:

"Throw papa down the steps his hat;" "His rheumatic ouches him so in the back;" "The button don't bell, bump the door;" "Don't talk so quick — it runs together when I think;" "I sit broad, ain't I;" "We grow too soon oldt and too late schmardt."

You'll loosen your belt several notches before you leave this rich farming area. The festival offers home-cured bologna, fresh comb honey and apple cider, sarsaparilla, deep-fried funnel cakes and waffles, long, salty pretzels and the ever delectable shoo-fly pie for the sweet tooth.

We suggest you stop at the Dutch Cupboard at 523 Baltimore-st, Gettysburg, Pa., for authentic Dutch cooking with atmosphere to go with it.

These folks are usually early-to-bed, but if you happen to stumble on to a barn dance, you're in for pleasure untold. The Mennonite boys are as cordial to New York tourists as to their own prayer-capped neighbor girls.

You'll want to drive through the countryside to see the clean, productive farms, the barns with brightly-painted hex signs, the Amish in their horse-drawn buggies.

Also in Lancaster is Wheatland, home of James Buchanan, and Rock Ford, home of Gen. Edward Hand, commander in the Revolutionary War and member of the Continental Congress.

Pennsylvania Dutch territory is a tourist attraction, but has not become commercialized. It is reached by going east on the Pennsylvania Turnpike. Such other historical spots as Valley Forge and Gettysburg are not far away.

New Vacation Idea: Swap Holiday Houses

By JANE ROBINSON

There is no guarantee that you'll like the wallpaper or the china pattern, but there's a vacation home waiting for you—and FULL FREE.

Well, at least practically free. You do pay $25 and toss your own home in the deal.

Mrs. Olive McMillan came up with something new under the sun—the Holiday Home Exchange Bureau of Grants, N. Mex.

Designed to make life simpler for those who don't like suitcase living while away from home, the plan involves a swap.

Assume you'd like to spend several weeks in New England this summer. You drop a line to Mrs. McMillan and she will send you without charge an application blank.

After having learned about your needs, your home and your life, she will turn to her files to find a New Englander of similar background with a whim to spend several weeks in Columbus.

After thoroughly investigating both parties, she will turn the results of her "match-making" over to you and accept your check for $25.

Though claiming that her idea is far from a gold mine, Mrs. McMillen finds the hundreds of letters she receives from all over the world fascinating.

Not only the man with a two-week vacation calls upon her, but internationally-known diplomats, businessmen and celebrities are ready to make a short-term loan of their homes in exchange for the luxury of a door bell rather than a bellhop.

Her experience has shown that people home-swapping are not "towel-knappers" and mutually respect each other's property.

New Studebaker Wagonaire Sports Sliding Roof; One Piece Tailgate

The new "Sliding-Roof" Wagonaire model in the 1963 Studebaker line of station wagons includes a unique roof panel, which can be readily operated to permit carrying of high-standing cargo, adding to the flexibility of the station wagon's many uses.

When parked at spectator events, the sliding roof permits a better viewpoint.

The four-door model "Wagonaire" has increased dimensions, a new side-glass design, and a one-piece tail-gate, with roll-up rear glass, manual-operated, standard; electrical-operated, optional. A "foldaway" tailgate ladder is also available as an option.

In addition to the sliding-roof model, the Studebaker line of Wagonaire station wagon models has been expanded to include a new "Standard Series," adding a lower-priced fixed-roof four-door "Wagonaire" line in Standard, Regal, and Daytona lines.

Choice of either six-cylinder or eight-cylinder engines is available. Features of all Wagonaire models include a padded dash, direct-reading instruments, positive crankcase ventilation, reinforced coil-spring seats, two-color vinyl upholstery.

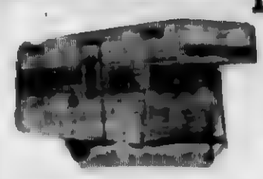
The 113-inch wheelbase is used on all Wagonaire models; one model is priced $75 less than the former 1962 models.

See all 1963 models at Coffman Studebaker, 2357 Sullivant-av, the local Studebaker dealer.

There's A Thrill In A New Car

There was a time, not so very long ago, when buying a new car was considered a luxury. But this is not the case today when an automobile is almost as much of a necessity as a sink in the kitchen or a bed in the bedroom. In fact more and more families are finding it necessary to own two cars.

Even though the automobile has become a common and essential item, a thrill is still experienced when the new car pulls into the driveway on the first day.



New car dealers in Columbus and Franklin County hope the readers of Hartley Newspapers will experience this, too, by stopping into one of the dealerships advertised in this special Vacation - Travel edition.

Anyone considering the purchase of a new or used auto would do well to check the goods and special prices advertised in this newspaper. Enjoy spring and summer by spending your leisure hours and vacation time in the safety and security of a new or late model used car . . . and don't forget to tell your favorite dealer you got the idea from your Hartley Newspaper.

The naval humiliation of France was completed when an English squadron defeated the French Nov. 20, 1759, at Quiberon Bay.

Put A Vacation On Your 'MUST' List

To Extend Your Life, Relax!

"Allah does not deduct from the alloted time of man those hours spent in fishing."

I don't know if the Arabs can take credit for this statement or not . . . In any event it is a good thing to believe.

And so, when I think of vacations I think in terms of fishing, because I somehow have to go along with this bit of wisdom and believe that I will not have these hours deducted from my time on earth.

And it does make sense 'cause it really should add to one's extended time. But for that matter any vacation that is properly planned and executed can do the same thing.

Now there are vacations and there are vacations. And a lot of them can be and are really rat races.

To take the busy highways and just drive and drive is for the birds . . . in my opinion! I want to get somewhere and then take time to relax.

That's why my first choice of a vacation is a fishing trip with congenial friends or family and far enough off the beaten track to get away from telephones, TV and a lot of people.

Now, I like people but I don't like crowds. I'm happy to know that my friends enjoy bucking the crowds as they go to the top of OSU stadium each Saturday afternoon in the fall, but for me one trip is enough for a season and I like those other Saturday afternoons alone in the outdoors rubbing shoulders with trees, leaves and all those good things in the country.

Mr. Thoreau advised that we spend some days as deliberately as Nature. "We have lived not in proportion to the number of years we have spent on earth, but in proportion as we have enjoyed."

Started Ahead of Crowds

A few years ago our family enjoyed a fine trip through the West and especially liked the national parks. We headed out through St. Louis, on to the dry lands and the Painted Desert, Grand Canyon, Yellowstone, the Sequoias, California, Oregon and Washington, the Canadian Rockies and the Bad Lands.

If billboards annoy you or even if you travel the super highways that don't have these annoyances some of your greatest enjoyment can and will come from the side trips off the beaten path.

Much of the real beauty of the Rockies and of the Canadian Northwest as well as in eastern Canada will show up only when you veer from the main highway.

And speaking of Canada, it isn't at all difficult to get into this country. Just be honest with them at customs. They have a strainge knack for picking out liars. If you declare something going into the country just be sure you have it when you return.

If you want to bring back some of those Canadian spirits or other merchandise be sure to check American customs on the way over to get the low down on how much you can bring back.

Conclusion: You go this way but once . . . enjoy it.

LAKES ARE PLENTIFUL

FUN ON THE WATER is enjoyed by Central Ohioans all spring and summer on hundreds of lakes within easy reach. These pleasures range from fishing and cruising to water skiing and camping. Rivers criss-crossing Franklin County offer boating enthusiasts a haven for outdoor fun.

Make Hiking Enjoyable

Hiking is not necessarily toilsome—it is only difficult if one makes it so. Beginning hikers frequently make the mistake of biting off more than they can chew. The person who is out on the trail for the first time may not realize at the start, but before the day is over he may become quite tired. Beginners should plan short hikes of two or three miles before attempting longer ones of five to twenty miles. Don't hike until you're tired and then start back, especially if you're walking a straight trail; the distance back may double the length of your hike.

Regular hikes, even short ones, will help to keep you in good condition. Don't expect to hike only once or twice a year and not become worn out. Plan hikes the year 'round: winter walking, when you're properly dressed, can be as interesting and as much fun as spring, summer or fall trips.

The hiker needs very little equipment. If you're one of those persons who are not bothered by insects, snakes, sunburn, rain, etc., you're all set—just start walking.

Most people should make some preparations before starting out. Plan your hike. Will you be in rocky terrain, hill country or level; will there be swamps and streams to cross; will drinking water be available; what are the weather conditions? Since your feet are your most important asset in hiking, give them first priority. Wear good shoes, preferably high cut as against moccasins. In a rough, rocky area, heavy soles are a must. If you don't like getting wet, take along a plastic rain coat and some kind of a hat.

When travelling in mosquito infested country, you may profer a long sleeved shirt to a T-shirt, even in hot weather. Slacks are better than shorts in brush and briers. A good insect repellent will help considerably. A canteen will solve the water problem. A pocket knife and some stout twine will cope with many emergencies. A small snakebite kit will give you a feeling of security. Raisins will relieve hunger pangs: a big lunch may taste good, but hiking is usually more pleasant when the stomach is not full.

Too much to carry? This should be no problem. A lightweight shoulder bag will hold most items. If you plan to take cameras, spare shoes and socks, and other items, a knapsack will solve the problem. A well adjusted knapsack need not be a burden to carry but it may tire your shoulders until you become accustomed to it.

Winter hiking requires more planning. Deep snows, mud and water will soak through the best of leather. Plastic slip-over boots or rubber-bottomed hi-tops are water proof. Heavy coats are bulky and a burden to carry: try a sweat shirt, one or two flannel shirts and a light jacket. Or try a jacket of alpaca, goose down or similar material; these are light weight and there is nothing warmer. Mittens are warmer than gloves but not as versatile. Don't burden yourself down with so many gimmicks and supplies that you lose the joy of hiking. Experience is the best teacher; after a few trips in the field, you can determine what fits your needs. Travel slowly and save enough energy to look and observe and enjoy the world about you. Nothing can compare with being out on the trail.

Tent Living On The Increase For Weekend Camping Fans

By RON BARLOW

A tent is still a tent and serves much the same purpose today that it did some 2,000 years ago in areas all over the world. But today the camping enthusiast will find a much larger array of the "homes away from home" than do the wandering Arabs on the sands of the Sahara.

For instance, you might arrive at the happy camping ground in your umbrella tent, your wall tent, with a handy pop-up model or even pulling a rig that uses the trailer for the base of a folding tent.

Finishes come in nylon, canvas, cotton or a dozen other materials but cotton has remained the most popular because of its ability to "breathe." Duck and drill are the most popular cotton fabrics for the portable abodes.

Experts say the umbrella tent is the most popular and probably best buy for its simplicity of construction, economical cost and ease in handling. The wall tent, according to those in the know, is on the way out except for Scouting groups which still prefer its roomy size.

In the land of two-car families it isn't uncommon to find the camping family sporting two, or sometimes more, tents. In many cases one tent is used for sleeping, the second for eating and living. Sometimes a separate tent for the children is also utilized as a welcome addition.

Evidence shows tents and camping are growing in popularity day by day and the movement from the cities and towns to the campsite for a weekend of fun is on the increase. Apparently, hundreds of thousands of otherwise comfortable citizens are willing to forsake their waterproof homes, hot running water, bath tubs and convenience-filled kitchens for the uncertainties of tent living in the great out-of-doors and are enjoying it.

Aquatic Hitchiking Becomes Increasingly Popular Sport

Riding behind a motor boat is becoming as popular as riding in it.

"More than thirty per cent of our customers, three times as many as seven years ago, now list water skiing as their main reason for buying an outboard motor, and more than half of our boat buyers plan to take part in the sport," Mr. Baxter, manager of the sporting goods department at Montgomery Ward's 261 Third Street Store in Columbus, said.

The size of outboard motors purchased is another indicator of water skiing's popularity because extra power is needed to start skiers on their way. Today the average size motor sold by Wards through its retail stores and catalogs is more than 30 horsepower, while ten years ago the average was nine horsepower.

Manufacturers have redesigned boat interiors with back-to-back seating, to allow free access to the stern where two ropes are attached, and to give passengers the best view of skiers.

This year Montgomery Ward has added five models with back-to-back seating to its boat line, more than doubling the number of its boats available with this interior arrangement.

Water skis themselves have changed from copies of traditional snow skies to a distinct styling of their own.

Improvements to water ski design can be seen on Ward's Sea King skis which are curved at both ends and tapered for stability and better maneuverability.

New non-jamming automatic foot binders, available on Ward's water skis, have push button fingertip control to enable a skier, while in the water, to easily slip back into his skis, which will remain properly adjusted.

Becoming more popular are "Combo" pairs of water skis, with one cutout for the single ski slalom maneuvers with rear toe binder and an extra - deep aluminum keel.

A wide range of water ski accessories, including ski belts also are available at Wards.

BACK-TO-BACK SEATING arrangements are becoming more popular for boating enthusiasts and are featured in Montgomery Ward's Sea King runabouts, equipped with a 60 HP Sea King outboard motor. The great increase in water skiing has helped raise the demand for back-to-back seating, which allows easy access to the boat's stern and enables passengers to observe the skiers most comfortably.

Visiting Colleges Offers Interesting Weekend Jaunt

One of the most enjoyable types of vacation travel, although somewhat limited to certain groups, is visiting college campuses in spring and early summer.

Families with offspring of college entrance age can find a week-end jaunt to any one of a number of Ohio colleges pleasurable and informative.

Most people in this area are somewhat familiar with the Ohio State University campus, but other state-supported universities, Bowling Green, Ohio, Miami and Kent, are also worth visiting.

These modern - well planned campuses and their locales are eye-pleasing and college candidates can wrap business and pleasure into one package with little trouble.

Of course the state schools aren't the only nice ones to be taken in.

From the University of Cincinnati to the University of Toledo, to Case Tech, one can find worthwhile, a short vacation trip.

Of course, there is the distinct advantage of enrolling in one of Ohio's many fine colleges and universities for a higher education and a better foothold on life.

Proper Equipment Important For Boating Fun And Safety

Proper furnishings to make a boat useful, safe and comfortable should be included as an essential part of any water-going craft. In fact the U.S. Coast Guard requires, under penalty of a stiff fine, that certain items be included on every boat. These vary for the boat's size and capacity.

For undocumented power boats used on Ohio waterways the Coast Guard requires a state license number and certificate, an approved life jacket or cushion for every person aboard, ancher and line, approved fire extinguishers mounted in accessible locations, and mufflers. Proper navigation lights must be carried when underway after sunset.

Inboard boats must have their engine compartments properly ventilated and carburetors equipped with flame arrestors. As the size of the boat increases, so does the list of required equipment. The requirements are set forth in publications issued by the Ohio Division of Watercraft and the Coast Guard and are available from all marine dealers.

Boats on Lake Erie and other waters under federal jurisdiction must comply with state and federal requirements. The jurisdiction is concurrent. Larger craft are required to carry a bell and horn. It is just as important to have these as shipmates on the smallest of boats.

The bell must be used in fog and fog has no respect for size. The right-of-way rules apply to every boat and the best way to let another skipper know what you are about to do is with the proper horn or whistles signals.

For safe boating there is gear that should be carried in addition to that which the law requires.

The list includes dock lines, fenders, lead line, compass, boat hook, bilge pump or bailing scoop, flashlights, first aid kit complete with sunburn ointment, insect repellant and seasick pills, spare parts for engines, tools, pocket knife, flares, paddle or oars, spare propeller, oil and grease, spare bolts, nuts, screws and other hardware, chart of the waters on which you are boating and a piece of heavy canvas for use as a collision mat should your boat's hull be stove in.

If there is still room on board, you can start with the batch of equipment that is convenient to have and adds to the fun of boating.

Combine College Study With Hawaiian Vacation

Sun, surf and study — what better way for a college student to spend the summer?

The University of Hawaii offers a versatile summer program that will suit the tastes of a bookworm or pseudo-student. And, needless to say, Hawaii offers everything to everyone.

The university is an accredited school and credits from courses will transfer to most colleges on the mainland. Courses range from hula dancing and basket weaving to studies in Asiatic anthropology and Far East religions.

The six-week session is informal — muu-muus and bermudas are as popular with professors as with students. The faculty for summer school features a distinguished list of educators from all over the world.

The University's summer session is unique in that it is the only U.S. college that draws more students for summer school than the other school terms.

Extracurricular activities at school in Hawaii include a tour to Buddhist and Shinto temples, a plane trip over the other islands in the Hawaiian chain, an evening's entertainment by Polynesian dancers, and all the thrills of surfboarding or hukilau fishing.

There are special tours available for students which include around - the - island tours to Pearl Harbor and other famous sites, parties, dances, and a luau, and "dormitory" accommodations in lush Waikiki hotels which include swimming pools and maid service. You may fly or take a luxurious cruise ship to the islands.

Call your travel agent for information on this unusual way to combine pleasure and education.

Rest Your Oars At Michigan's Lakes

By ED CHURCHILL

Within about four to five hours driving time from Columbus, there lies one of the most relaxing and fun-filled vacation grounds known to this writer.

The lakes of southern Michigan offer various and sundry pleasures, not the least of which is a chance to just relax (rest your oars) and breathe some good clean fresh air breezing across the lake to the front porch of a lakeside cottage.

Cottage rentals range from $40 to $140 per week, depending on how rough you like it, or can afford it.

Specifically, Devil's, Wampler's and Sand Lakes lie within 15 minutes of Adrian, Mich., and in this area one can pursue the delights of boating, fishing, swimming, camping, golfing, hiking, dancing, tennis, shooting, driving, touring, shopping, sun-bathing, picnicking, water-skiing, all types of outdoor participation sports, scenic photography in the surrounding hills and, of course loafing.

But, get your reservations in now, because these little havens of happiness don't wait around for customers.

Usually most of the cottages are rented by the first of June.

Write to the Adrian Chamber of Commerce for information.

WALK SAFELY

When it's raining, says the Columbus Auto Club, it's easier for a pedestrian to see an approaching car than it is for the driver of that car to see the pedestrian. During a rainstorm it's most important that pedestrians do not obscure their own vision or visibility with umbrellas.

A decision by the Supreme Court Nov. 20, 1863, held that the Great Lakes and their connecting waters constituted the high seas.

Camping Trip To West Is Suggested By Family

SIGHTS LIKE THESE are yours to enjoy on a family camping trip through the West. This is a mountain lake in the Medicine Bow Mountain range in Wyoming.

AN EIGHTEENTH BIRTHDAY celebration for Ron Groom, held in the Grand Teton mountains, was a highlight of the trip. Hosts were the DeGaws from Bensonville, Ill. The Grooms and DeGraws met on the trip and traveled together for several days. From left are, standing, Mrs. Margery DeGraw, her stepfather, Ed; and son, Ernie; seated, Mrs. Lola Groom, Evie DeGraw, Roberta Groom, Peggy DeGraw and Ron.

A two-weeks' vacation trip for four through 4600 miles of the west, including food, travel and car expenses, for $ .08.

And there's even more for your money than a memorable vacation in some of the union's most scenic states when the trip is a family camping excursion.

Fourteen days and nights of informal fun, adventure and companionship, away from individual demands and responsibilities, can be a richly rewarding experience for and family.

The W. Harley Grooms of 3068 W. Mound-st seeking such a vacation, tried the camping plan last summer, and found its success exceeded their highest hopes.

Armed with books, pamphlets and guides; steeped with advice from experienced friends, and pulling a rented, tent trailer packed with the recommended equipment, they headed for Rocky Mountain National Park, Colo.

Any faint misgivings they may have had about the trip were soon dispelled with the miles.

Arrangements for such a camping trip, growing more popular each year, are surprisingly simple and inexpensive.

The Grooms' tent trailer, rented for $70 for the two weeks, was packed with a foot locker containing cooking utensils, dishes, soap and towels, and food staples.

An ice chest was used for meat, milk and vegetables, purchased fresh each day; a gasoline stove was used for cooking, and gasoline lights.

Sleeping bags, cots, blankets, a hatchet, first aid kit and a plastic water jug were the other basics.

Camping sites were readily available, with State National Parks, roadside parks and privately-operated sites lining their route. All had water supplies, and many had showers and bathing facilities.

Definite, assigned responsibilities for each member of the family, gave even the youngest member a feeling of participation, and reduced the camp set-up time to 15 minutes.

Friendships with neighboring campers were an added enjoyment bonus, as were the contented evenings around a campfire, popping corn and swapping tall tales, or playing cards.

And the magnificence of the west, its scenic lakes and parks, its snow-capped mountains, were seen as never possible on scheduled, planned tours. It was family's choice all the way, with each member's wishes contributing to their travel plan.

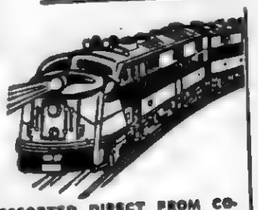
Everything from a view of Mount Rushmore by helicopter and horseback riding in the Western manner, to scenic wonders were captured in memories and on film.

In the "Next-time-department," the Grooms listed more warm clothing, for temperatures in the west are sometimes 25 degrees at night.

And among their recommendation are heavy, comfortable walking shoes, and plenty of socks.

Library Has Travel Hints

Vacation time is just around the corner for many Central Ohioans and the Columbus Public Library has dozens of books and magazines on travel, both in this country and abroad.



Particularly valuable for the vacationer are suggestions for luggage, clothing and other travel necessities. The out-of-country travelers will find useful information on passports, visas and ports of entry in books and magazines at the library.

Information about sections of the United States, maps and travel suggestions will also be found on the library shelves.

WONDERING WHERE TO GO?

'Take Me Out To The Ball Game' Sweet Relief From Highway Race

By JACK WITTENMEIER

Ever come back from your vacation more exhausted than when you departed?

If your answer to this question is "yes," you are probably echoing the consensus of the majority.

In our head-spinning, ulcerated present-day pace of living, the struggle of "go and return" cuts down on relaxation time almost to the point of swallowing a meal whole just to get back on the highway.

So what's your hurry? Ohio isn't exactly a barren wasteland which must be endured for 50 weeks each year.

For the sportsman the Buckeye State has abounding resources for the whole family to enjoy. With major league baseball teams stationed at Cleveland and Cincinnati and the Jets practically in your backyard, there's plenty of proximity to the national pastime.

Lakes (Erie and smaller) or streams provide the thrill of the "big catch" for the family anglers and this state's camping boom is evidence enough that time spent in the great outdoors can be both enjoyable and relaxing.

Boating and swimming facilities plus plenty of room for the water skiing enthusiast are provided throughout the state in many waterways.

What's that, Mom? How about those meals you'll have to cook? No problem. Nobody ever starved at the old ballyard and even the most isolated camper is but a short drive away from some kind of an eating facility.

Just for the record, Cleveland's Municipal Stadium is 141 miles distant while Cincy's Crosley Field is about 106 miles away.

The Grand Canyon is approximately 2000 miles, 16 migraines, two flat tires and roughly ten million "Daddy, are we almost there's" from the Capital City.

See you at the ball park!

Boat Can Add To Camp Fun

According to the most recent campfire counts, there are some 5,000,000 families who spend weekends or vacation time camping in these United and vast States. Unfortunately there is no count available on how many of these sociable stargazers make boating a part of their program, but it's a sure thing that those who do not are missing a good bet.

Experts suggest these advantages to trailing a boat along on a camp trip:

Mobility. A campsite gets to be a mighty small world after about a day and a half, but if it's near the water your boat can extend its horizons a thousand per cent, and help you get away from "getting away from it all."

Variety. Watching birds, gathering flowers, and tending the fire will pall in time. A boat adds fishing, skiing, exploring, just plain riding in the fresh and open air . . . pleasant changes.

Pack room. A boat riding behind your car on a trailer will hold a lot more than any station wagon. Your storage problems are solved.

More campsites. With good campsites accessible to automobiles at a premium these days, the family with a boat has an advantage: it can go where carbound folk cannot, and enjoy a wider choice of sites.

Solitude. By running to islands and other otherwise hard-to-reach areas, boaters often find the camper's pot of gold — complete privacy.

Yes, say the experts, there's much to be said for attaching a boat and trailer to every camper's car.

PROPER CARE and use of tires is so much more important now that the take - to - the - road season is here. Among special safety checks offered by your General Tire Sales Companies (like the one here at Fourth and Long-sts) are correct air pressure and tire rotation. There're other things you can do, too, like avoid riding the edge of the pavement, avoid fast stops and starts, drive at moderate speed and not overload.

Many Repair Services Are Offered By General Tire Co.

Members of the personnel and mechanical staff at General Tire Sales feel especially proud this time of year. They feel, and justly so, that they can be a part of your vacation fun.

Nothing's more frustrating on the highway than to have a flat tire or two and you can do a lot to prevent such an occurance while en route to your favorite fun spot by stopping at one of the General Tire headquarters stores.

The General Tire staff has been cited for being specialists in tire service and related automotive maintenance required for enjoyable, economical and safe motoring vacation fun.

General Tire Sales describes its wheel alignment equipment as being the most modern available. The modern General "Visualiner" shows the car owner on a picture screen whether front end alignment corrections or steering repairs are needed, and also enables General's technicians to do a faster and more accurate job of correcting any evident trouble.

Richard Hollingsead of the General Tire Sales Co. at Fourth and Long-sts pointed out that car owners can ruin a set of tires on just one vacation jaunt with car wheels that are out of line.

He added that it takes only a few minutes to check an automobile on the new "Visualiner." No charge is made for this check if no corrections are needed.

The company also lists its wheel balancing equipment as being the most accurate type balancing machine available. Tires and wheels may be run through the entire speed range of the automobile.

Brake service at General also is complete since the company is equipped to do everything from minor adjustments to rebuilding an entire brake system.

A complete muffler and tail pipe service, seat belt service and installation along with other features should make the nearest General Tire Sales office your first stop this summer.

Locations include:

Hilltop, at corner of W. Broad and Eureka-av; East Side in the Town and Country Shopping Center and downtown at Fourth and Long. Phone appointments also are accepted for all customer services.

Dick Klamfoth Concludes A Colorful Career Of Racing

A graduate of Groveport High School, Dick Klamfoth, owner of Klamfoth Cycle Sales, Groveport-rd, has been one of the most colorful and exciting motorcycle racers in the country since he won his first expert race, the Daytona 200 Mile Championship, in 1949.

He actually started his [illegible] on the motorcycle tracks in 1947 when, as an amateur, he entered races in the Columbus area with a Norton motorcycle furnished by a local dealer. Since those days Klamfoth has won the Daytona 200 three times and stacked up 16 national victories. His biggest years were in 1951 and 1952 when he won four national championship events each year.

There are some top riders coming up in the Buckeye State according to Klamfoth, He thinks Dave Estep of Columbus and Don Kiger both have bright futures in motorcycle racing.

Projected plans for his own shop, which features the Hondo Motorcycle, call for the expansion of present facilities and the relocation of the agency to 1962 E. Main-st. As far as racing goes, Klamfoth has expressed plans to leave the track for the comparative peace and quiet of his own motorcycle shop.

About three miles of filament yarn and two million stitches on a high-speed hosiery machine are needed to produce a pair of nylon stockings.

Auto Dealers Wary Of Pipe Smoking, Mustached Buyers

Looking for a new car to make that vacation trip in? Better shave off that old cookie duster first and, to be sure, leave your pipe at home.

These are the two "deadliest" traits of the car buyer —the ones which, according to a recent survey, cause the most trouble to the auto dealer.

To some of the biggest auto dealers in the world, a man with a mustache and a pipe is the toughest prospect an auto salesman has to face.

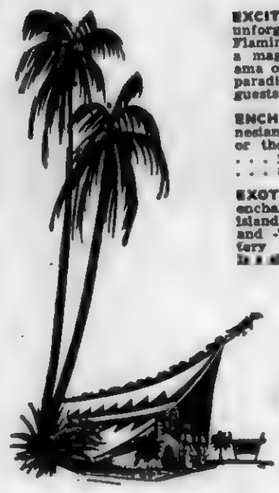
"The mustache means he's fastidious," they claim. "He always dots the 'i' and crosses the 't'. And that pipe helps him delay making a decision while he fills it aand lights it. He can think about what the salesman said."

Another dealer maintained that a drop-stem pipe in the hand of a mustachioed man is an even worse sign.

"We can generally peg this man as ultra conservative, and having easily enough money to pay cash for a new car," he said.

And, if you have a friend or relative in the auto business, you become even more fearsome as a potential customer since, the dealers say, "you've collected all sorts of little bits of misinformation."

After the pipe smoker, they list physicians and clergymen as the most difficult prospects. They are extremely particular about the product and very concerned with price.



A TOUGH CUSTOMER is the opinion of automobile salesmen about this type prospect. Experts say the mustache and pipe indicate a tendency to be very careful and thoughtful before reaching any decision to buy a new or used car.

Backing a trailer is confusing at first unless you remember this rule suggested by the experts: You turn the wheel of your car to the left to make the trailer move to the right, and vice versa.

Ohio Offers Variety, Beauty In State Parks

A large part of the wealth of Ohio cannot be measured with a dollar and cents value or placed in a deposit box to be hidden away in the deep vaults of a bank. It is a wealth that can be seen and enjoyed by everyone, and loved and appreciated as few personal belongings can.

Beyond the reach of human memory nature endowed the Buckeye State with a beauty that can be observed, lived in and enjoyed today by anyone who will invest in the time to travel to his favorite part of Ohio to visit a state park or lake area.

From the Great Lake in the north to the plains in the center to the rugged hills in the south, Ohio offers an amazing variety of scenery and nature lore.

Some of the more popular camping and vacation areas have been maintained by the Ohio Department of Natural Resources, Division of Parks, and are available for use throughout the summer.

Beaver Creek State Park (1) is a relatively undeveloped park that offers fine scenery and rough hiking. Features include an old mill, canal and a fine place for the study of natural history.

Blue Rock State Park and State Forest (28) offers short trails that connect numerous picnic areas. A 15-acre lake provides swimming, fishing and tent camping for the outdoor fan.

Clear Fork State Park in Mohican State Forest (3) provides 10 to 14 miles of hiking trails through forests. Trails lead to rock shelters, a waterfall and a dam at Pleasant Hill Reservoir. Exceptional scenery and nature study are found in the 535-acre park.

Forked Run State Park and Shade River State Forest (7) features one developed trail about one mile long which ascends to a ridge and scenic lookout. A lake covering 102 acres offers swimming, picnicking and fishing. A tent-camping area is now under construction.

Hocking State Park and Hocking State Forest (8) is Ohio's most popular scenic area. Trails are numerous and lead to such famous scenic areas as Old Man's Cave, Rock [illegible] and Ash Cave. Many waterfalls and deep hemlock-lined gorges make the natural beauty as fine as anywhere in the Eastern United States. Tent camping only at Old Man's Cave.

Hueston Woods State Park (9) has many well-marked trails in the wooded area behind the main beach. Several small waterfalls are located in valleys on the cabin side of the lake. Excellent fossil hunting in the streambeds. Facilities include housekeeping cabins, tent camping area, picnicking, 625-acre Acton Lake, two beaches, boat docks and ramps, rental boats and good fishing.

FIFTY-FOUR state parks and recreation areas are shown on the above map which are operated for the enjoyment and recreation of Ohioans. Most of the areas are within easy driving distance of Central Ohio and offer many types of facilities for the person seeking outdoor activity.

Jefferson State Park (10) features limited hiking on service roads and rough hiking in the woods. A 27-acre lake offers swimming, fishing and picnicking with a camping area located about two miles from the lake.

John Bryan State Park (11) is deep and rugged with a limestone gorge and sparkling stream. This is a fine area for observing trees and wild flowers. Facilities include a tent camping area and picnic grounds.

Lake Hope State Park and Zaleski State Forest (12) has an extensive trail system and improvements are being made on 10 miles of beautiful scenic trails. The area features fine lookout points, clay mine, coal mines, iron ore outcropping, iron furnace, prehistoric burial mounds, plant fossils, ghost towns. Facilities include housekeeping cabins, sleeping cabins, dining lodge, tent camping area, picnicking, swimming and fishing.

Nelson Ledges State Park (32) is a small park that offers large rock formations and steep narrow gorges. It is fine for short hiking trips. Picnicking and sanitary facilities are available.

Pike State Park and Pike State Forest (13) has a limited amount of developed trails which ascend to a series of ridges and center around a main park area. Abandoned roads, service roads and logging roads provide excellent hiking east of the park. Features include a fine wooded area, abudant wild flowers, many birds, reptiles and amphibians. Several historic sites are located within a short driving distance, including Fort Hill, Serpent Mound and Seip Mound. Auto tours and evening activities are offered during the summer. Facilities include housekeeping cabins, tent camping, picnicking, swimming, limited boating and some fishing. Lake covers 13 acres.

Pymatuning State Park (15) offers three hiking trails and features fine woods, excellent for nature study. Facilities include 35 housekeeping cabins, tent camping, picnicking, swimming, boating and fishing with rental boats available. The lake covers 17,000 acres, 3:500 of which are in Ohio.

Roosevelt State Park and Shawnee State Forest (33) is a small park in Ohio's largest forest. Rough hiking is available. Many forest roads, which are seldom used, can also be utilized for hiking. Facilities include tent camping, swimming and fishing. Lake area covers 17 acres. Solitude is available and wildlife is abundant.

Scioto Trail State Park and State Forest (34) has no developed trails but rough hiking is available on logging roads around the two small lakes. Fishing, tent camping and picnicking are available but no swimming is allowed. The two lakes total 30 acres.

Tar Hollow State Park and Forest (18) has several rough trails that have not been marked by signs. Scenic roads go through the forest area which is fine for the study of wild flowers. Tent camping, picnicking, fishing and group lodge are available for visitors.

Information on other state park areas is available by contacting the Department of Natural Resources, Division of Parks, 1500 Dublin-rd, Columbus 12, O.

NAVIGATION LIST

Planning a long run in your outboard boat? Here's a navigation tip. Using a large navigation chart can be awkward and keeps your eyes off the water too much. Before starting, go over your intended course on the chart and make a checklist of the buoys you will pass by type and number, hazards to be avoided and landmarks. A list of this kind is easier to manage and read than a big chart. By glancing at it the steersman can see quickly what he must look for as his boat speeds along. Of course, you should also have the chart aboard in case you need complete information . . . but you'll like the checklist method once you try it.

The Columbus Auto Club cautions motorists that when traveling with children in the back seat of the car make sure all doors are closed securely. Above all, keep the children calm so they do not distract you from your important job behind the wheel.

Use Of Safety Belts Can Aid In Preventing Serious Injury

With summer driving and vacations rapidly approaching, the American Medical Assn. has highly recommended the use of seat belts in automobies. The association states that the installaion and use of the belts can save lives and prevent or lessen injuries

This is a well-established fact, and many autos today are equipped with seat belts. But many more are not. An immense amount of scientific research, including actual collisions under controlled conditions, proves that the seat belt is the single most effective item of protective equipment now available to reduce the toll of traffic injuries and deaths.

Thousands of lives are lost ach year because people are thrown against windshields or out of car doors in crashes. The seat belt will help keep you in your seat and in your car. Most accidents occur close to home and at moderate speeds. Thus seat belts are important even for short trips to school or the neighborhood grocery. Your seat belt can protect you in town as well as on the highway.

If you're worried about being held down by a seat belt in the event of fire, or if your auto should plunge into water, you should know that the buckle can be unfastened in you can get clear of a burning an instant with one hand, so or submerged car.

Many motorists who have installed seat belts in the past year or two have them only in the front seat. People in the back seat also are entitled to protection. The seat belts should be in both front and rear.

Others who have installed seat belts have become careless in their use. The belt won't protect you if it isn't buckled in place.

The driver has some protection in minor crashes by being able to hang onto the steering wheel. Seat belts for the driver, however, give added safety in that he will be better able to keep control of the car if held in a driving position by a belt.

Safe-driving habits by all can reduce accidents. Seat belts help provide greater safety for driver and passengers.

SAFETY TAPE

If you have to cross many busy highways after dark when returning from a day afloat, affix several strips of reflective tape to the sides of your boat trailer to warn cars coming from the left and right of the length of your rig.

HONORING OUR WARRIORS

Solemn Memorial Day Rites Planned

"We cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or to detract."

The great words of President Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg Address may still be the best description of the sentiment that will prevail this Thursday—Memorial Day, 1963.

Solemn tributes to the defenders of our country are planned throughout the area, ranging from the singular effort of a man in Reynoldsburg, to the huge parade in downtown Columbus, to the Naval services on the Dublin bridge.

Harold A. Temple, superintendent of Glen Rest Cemetery in Reynoldsburg, will again this year place flags on the graves of all veterans in the cemetery.

Nearly all veterans' organizations in Franklin County will participate in the annual downtown parade, which begins at 9 a.m. at Washington-av and E. Broad-st and moves west to the W. Broad-st bridge.

The parade will pass the reviewing stand on south side of City Hall, and at the Broad-st bridge, a Naval Memorial ceremony will be conducted by the Navy-Marine Post, American Legion.

A floral anchor, in memory of deceased sailors and marines, will be placed on the Scioto River, just as another will be placed farther up-river, at Dublin, at noon.

The seventh Memorial Service of the American Legion will be held in the Memorial Room at Veterans' Memorial, immediately following the naval ceremony.

The program is expected to start about 10 a.m.

Speaker for the event will be Dr. Harold H. Bibling, superintendent of Columbus schools.

Also participating in the program will be the Walnut Ridge High School Choir and the 37th Division Band.

Master of ceremonies will be Judge William C. Bryant.

Memorial Day parades will also be staged in Groveport, under the sponsorship of Robert Dutro Post, American Legion; Grove City, directed by the Grove City Post, American Legion, West Jefferson, conducted by the West Jefferson Post, American Legion and Hilliard, by Post 614 American Legion.

Just How Casual Can We Get?

If it's entertainment you are looking for, you no longer need to spend your money for the theater or go to the drive-in. Now you can be amused out in the good, fresh open air by merely standing beside one of the stores of a well-patronized shopping center and watching the "Passing Parade."

Especially at this time of year does one have the opportunity to get a real eyeful. Being human, I would have to admit that some of it is quite pleasing. But, a major portion of the sights are not only just uninteresting but even distasteful.

It isn't every female who has the good fortune to have all of the proportions that attract. But, certainly those who do not have some interesting equipment are well aware of same and would do well to properly cover it rather than show it off to a disadvantage.

As the gals go by it might be interesting to take a poll as to which wears the shortest shorts, which wears the loudest shorts, which wears the tightest shorts, and which could more properly be put in the category of oversize tents.

And while you are at it, watch for the gals who have taken this modern day advice to be "casual" to the extreme that they still have the complex gadgets called curlers in their heads. I agree with my friend, Leo Paulin of Bethesda, Md., that these gals look more like something from Mars. Also, if they feel they must have that milking machine look, they should wear clothes in harmony with the curlers—overalls.

By now you probably have guessed that I am a little bit old-fashioned and kinda believe we have taken a few too many liberties in the matter of "casual" living.

Judo School Given Okay For Bexley

During one of its more lengthy sessions, Bexley council took steps to make the city a leader in the fine art of judo Tuesday night.

The solons gave approval to a Dayton firm to open a judo school at E. Main-st and Parkview-av, in the building formerly occupied by Treasure Island, which recently went out of business.

In other major action, council postponed passage on the controversial Gould-rd stop sign removals (and erecting one at Fair-av at the suggestion of the traffic committee).

Several residents protesting the removal of the signs at Bryden-rd and Dale-av said they wanted more time to see what they could accomplish at the June 11 meeting of the Columbus Traffic Commission.

East Area Graduates At End And Beginning

Eastern area High Schools are in the midst of graduation practices this week as students practice their final assignment— the long walk for the diploma.

Reminiscing has already begun among the graduates who reflect back to the "good ol' days" of tearing down goal posts and senior proms.

It's all at an end now but, on the other hand, it's but a beginning.

"In rivers, the water that you may touch is the last of what has passed and the first of that which comes: so with time present." That was said by Leonardo da Vinci.

Graduates are now at an end and at the beginning. They have an education to gain wisdom, strength and a successful life. They have the eagerness and enthusiasm necessary for making these goals come true.

AMONG THE lovely entries in the Miss Columbus contest are, from left, Pam Ward, Helen Bates, Joann Picking, Gloria McBride, Linda Blair, Barbara Klein, Peggy Thacker and Rita Seemueller. In the center is Mrs. Janet Cardi, 1956's Miss West Virginia and coordinator for the upcoming Miss Columbus pageant Friday, July 31, in front of Penney's in the Town and Country Shopping Center at 8:30 p.m. The contest is a preliminary to the internationally-famed Miss Universe competition.

Time Drawing Near For First-Ever 'Miss Columbus'

By JOHN AUBLE, JR.

Despite the fact that Polynesia is the theme of the Miss Columbus beauty pageant Friday (May 31), you don't need an Hawaiian eye to appreciate the bevy of wahines.

The contest, sponsored by the Town and Country Merchants Association, will be staged in front of Penney's in the Town and Country Shopping Center, beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Mrs. Janet Cardi, contest coordinator, has promised that the stage will be adorned in a south sea island effect but who will notice, anyhow?

The contestants were given a dinner party Monday evening at the Kahiki so that they could get into that ol' Polynesian swing of things.

Pageant MC Jack Denton noted all of them the "Most Likeable To Be Stranded On A South Sea Island With."

Denton, who recently ended a stint with WLW-C, TV-4, was on hand to greet the guests along with judges Ed Fisher (local sportswriter), Sam Tiberi (of "Coiffures by Tiberi") and this writer.

Some wondered if the judges might outshine the contestants since one is striking Mona Sue Edwards, another is pixieish Melba Price and a third, comely Carol Ballantyne.

Mona was Miss Ohio Press Photographer, Miss Price is one of the Columbus school district's most attractive

A TOTAL OF $203 in "Confederate" cash is turned over to Murel Chester (right), 2370 Westwood-dr, Valleyview, by Hartley Newspapers Circulation Manager Jack Schlarp. Chester holds the paper containing the winning "$" insignia to prove he had found the lucky number.

VALLEYVIEW MAN WINS

$203 Jackpot Claimed

The old jackpot has been claimed and already a new jackpot is building up for the next lucky winner of the Hartley Newspapers' "Confederate Money" contest.

Murel Chester, 2370 Westwood-dr, Valleyview, a retired employe of the Pennsylvania Railroad, came up with the lucky "$" emblem in his copy of the Hilltop Record last week and brought the paper to the Hartley Newspaper Office to claim the $203 in "Confederate" cash which was waiting in the jackpot.

These "Confederate" bills are as spendable as good ol' U. S. currency at any place of business which advertises in a Hartley newspaper and can be spent for anything the winner desires.

One of the items Chester said he was interested in buying with his winnings was a tape recorder to use in corresponding with his son, who is stationed with the Federal Aviation Agency in Germany.

The winner said he had

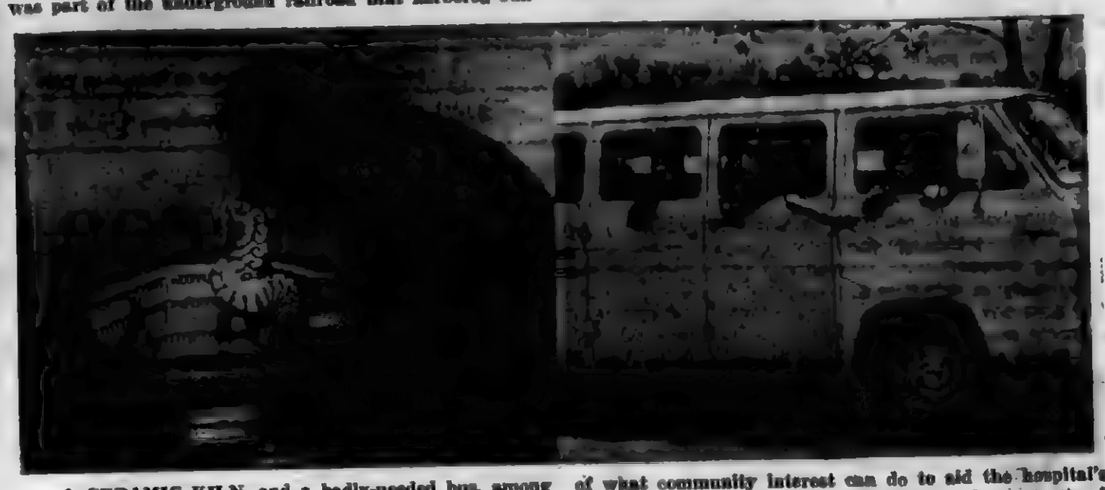
Enrollment For Summer Program Now Open



THE EDUCATIONAL CLINIC
4150 E. MAIN
BE. 5-5583

WISHES for a wading pool to replace hose-sprinkling will come true this summer if the Eastern Sertoma Club's current money-making project is successful. The group will donate their proceeds from the sale of tickets to the Kenley Players production, the "Unsinkable Molly Brown," on July 9, to the building of a therapeutic wading pool.

THIS HISTORIC STRUCTURE, built in 1830, has been used as an inn and, during the Civil War, reportedly was part of the underground railroad that harbored runaway slaves. The building now houses the Columbus Children's Psychiatric Hospital.

A CERAMIC KILN, and a badly-needed bus, among gifts of the Ruth Lyons Christmas Program, are examples of what community interest can do to aid the hospital's program of treatment for young children. The youngsters' tential service to their patients with the most modern tools and concepts.

Youngsters Helped To Mental Health

There is little about the quiet and unassuming old brick structure at 800 N. Nelson-rd to distinguish it as a house of hope for youngsters.

Only the playground and basketball court suggest the building set behind the trees is a place for children. The residence is officially called the Columbus Children's Psychiatric Hospital. It is more familiarly known as "Happy Acres."

The 27-bed residential treatment center for boys and girls, ages six to 12, was founded ten years ago. Dr. W. Hugh Missildine, then director of the Children's Mental Health Center, had an idea.

It was Dr. Missildine's conviction that a place was needed for children who could benefit from intensive treatment. They could be helped in residence, with intensive therapy possible during 24 hours each day.

As an outgrowth of this idea, the lay board of directors of the Children's Mental Health Center, with the help of other community agencies, especially the United Community Council and the Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction, organized the treatment center.

The structure, built originally in 1830 and used as an inn, was donated by the Big Sisters of Columbus for $1 a year, and the support of the building and grounds was assumed by United Appeals.

The child residential care center was staffed by the State of Ohio, which paid for the services of the staff and the program.

This unique financial arrangement of state and community sharing is still in force.

In the first ten years of its operation, the care center has dealt with 220 children. Seventy-five per cent of these have been returned to their families significantly improved.

The hospital's 27-bed limit was filled almost as soon as the program was started, and the waiting list of patients has grown through the years, proportionately with Franklin County's population.

The only deficiency in the center is its size. The 27-bed hospital has become entirely inadequate to serve the needs of a community the size of Franklin County, with a population of 700,000.

Under the direction of Dr. Thomas King, child psychologists, four social workers, three teachers, 12 child care workers, to psychiatric residents, four social work students, one business manager, four secretaries, two maintenance men, four cooks and three housekeepers, carry out an intensive, 24-hour therapy. The staff of 35 dedicated, well-trained specialists, meets APA standards.

Each child has a personally prescribed schedule, established to cover his specific needs. These needs are carefully evaluated weekly and daily in staff conferences.

School, beginning at 9 a.m., day's schedule during the days' schedule during the school year. At 3 p.m., activities conducted by the staff cover model building, arts and crafts, ceramics, and recreational therapies, using a wide variety of specialties and games.

Patients are charged by the State Bureau of Support up to $5 a day, depending on their ability to pay. However, no child is excluded because of the parents' inability to pay for his treatment.

Dr. King gratefully credits community groups such as the Franklin County Mental Health Association Volunteers, Council of Jewish Women, Rinkey Dinks and Eastern Sertoma Club, for their interest in the hospital and their assistance in providing needed extras.

He cites Ruth Lyons Christmas Gift Program as an example. "We have a new piano, a kiln for ceramics, an educational television set-up and a new bus, replacing the one that was 20 years old and constantly broken down, all provided from the Ruth Lyons Program.

"These are things we just did without before," Dr. King explained. "We have had plans for building a wading pool for several years, and were it not for the Eastern Sertoma Club, now sponsoring a project to raise funds for this purpose, we would just have to do without it.

"All these newer and better tools," emphasizes Dr. King, "are not essential to the well-adjusted child, but they are important to the therapy of our kids, making our job faster, better, easier and more efficient."

Dr. King's reflections are those of many professionals, who strive to do their job well, while hoping for greater po-

I'M NO GLAMOR-PUSS

"I just want to look natural!" Is this your cry? Far be it from us to change natural beauty. We'd rather start there and build around it. Unfortunately, Mother Nature was born centuries ago. She may have supplied you with bountiful basics . . . but did she style them to fit this decade? We can!

NO CURL — MINE'S NATURAL

We love to place our shapers in naturally-waved hair! We take pride in translating an "already-there" line into a modern hair-line. Your natural curl pattern may be too narrow for today's styles. Mother Nature may have forgotten to turn up the curls at the back of your neck, but we won't.

MOUSY — BUT ALL MINE

Two-thirds of the girls in America have "mouse colored" hair. . . . but oh, how it glows when we get through with it. For light brown hair, we have a color bath . . . a rinse of red tone, a touch of lightener, a gloss of mahogany. We'll give it a bath in professional beautifiers that turn "mouse" to "mink"! Isn't it time you gave Nature a boost?

FROM OVER THE DRYER

When "mouse" turns to "mink" . . . one knows your hair has had beauty salon breeding.

watched the paper every week for the winning emblem and could hardly believe his eyes when he opened his newspaper to page eight and found the number "5" printed in bright green ink inside the Great Western Shopping Center Paint Town advertisement.

When told his money was waiting at the Hartley Newspaper Office, the happy winner quietly sat down and with a smile, said, "We can find a good use for it."

Other winners last week reduced this week's "Confederate" jackpot by $3. Those receiving $1 "Confederate" bills were Helen Bugh, 2665 Valleyview-dr; Mrs. John Simmons, 1871 S. Sixth-st, and Ruth Kuder, 14 S. Wayne-av.

This means the new jackpot, starting this week, is now worth $22 in "Confederate" cash.

This is the insignia you must find in order to claim the full jackpot. It appears in only one of the 72,000 newspapers printed each week by Hartley Newspapers. It always appears in a bright colored ink in the white space of one of the advertisements inside the paper.

This insignia is worth the entire amount of the jackpot only if the finder is a paid subscriber to a Hartley Newspaper; otherwise, it is worth $5 in "Confederate" money. The entire page containing the winning "5" insignia must be brought to the Hartley Newspaper Office, 2465 W. Broad-st, by the finder to collect the prize.

Twenty insignias like this are placed inside twenty Hartley Newspapers each week. These insignias are always stamped in a bright colored ink and are worth $1 in "Confederate" cash to the finder. The page containing the "1" insignia can be mailed by the finder to the Hartley Newspaper Office and "Confederate" money will be sent by return mail. This money can be spent just like cash with any advertiser in any Hartley Newspaper during the week the finder wishes to spend it.

Each week the contest closes at noon on the Monday following publication of the paper. All mnoey not claimed is added to the following week's jackpot. This contest is not open to employes, including carriers, of Hartley Newspapers or their families.

teachers and Miss Ballantyne would be welcome in any beauty pageant.

She's the 22-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Ballantyne, 108 N. Virginia Leerd, and served as the official French interpreter for the Miss Universe pageant three years ago in Long Beach, Calif.

It seemed appropriate to have her participate in this contest since the Miss Columbus winner Friday night will take part in the Miss Ohio contest in Cleveland and, finally, in the internationally famed Miss Universe competition in Miami Beach.

This is to say nothing of Mrs. Cardi herself, who was Miss West Virginia in 1956 and a runner-up in the Miss Universe pageant that year.

A $1000 scholarship to Patricia Stevens Finishing School is first prize, with various other awards going to the finalists. Trophies have been donated by the Town and Country Merchants Association.

A parade and other activity is included in the pageant plans, open free to the public.

Rita Seemueller, 3818 Roswell-rd, has been selected "Miss Hospitality" and will give an opening welcome address.

Contestants include:

Pamela Ward, Joanne Picking, Linda Blair, Barbara Klein, Linda Sue Boggs, Helen Bates, Gloria McBride, Grace Adams, Peggy Thacker.

Mary Kay Terrel, Dianne Reid, Sue Skeen, Louise Scinta, Joyce Cook, Maureen Rickan, Sandra Harper, Pamilla Tucker, Linda Stuart, Barbara Dearth and Marilyn Renick.

Besides picking a "Miss Columbus," said Denton with a grin, why don't we select individual honors for the girls like Miss Poly Unsaturate?

Why not? Mrs. Cardi's husband, Carl, suggested there be a "Miss Understood," also.

Local TV Station Presenting Reading, Writing Program

If you were asked to guess how many adults in Franklin County cannot read or write, how many would you guess were in this category?

The 1960 census showed 15,000 people in this county had not completed the fourth grade in school, and could not read well enough to read road signs or this newspaper.

In an attempt to help these men and women learn the fundamentals of reading and writing, the Adult Education Council of Greater Columbus in cooperation with WLW-C, Channel 4, is sponsoring a TV program geared to adult learning.

Every weekday morning at 6 a.m. to 6:30 a.m. for twenty weeks, WLW-C will present the television series "Operation Alphabet." This series has been developed exclusively for adults by the Philadelphia Schools and is being shown at present to over 200,000 viewers in Cleveland and Cincinnati.

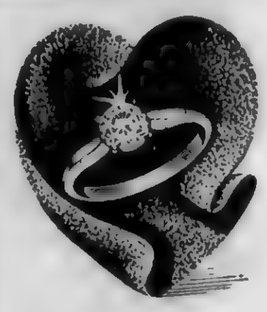
If you have a friend or relative who cannot read or write, or who reads or writes so poorly that he can not fill out an application for employment or cannot read "the funnies" in the newspaper, you are urged to tell them about this new program.

"Operation alphabet" started May 27 at 6 a.m. and will continue daily throughout the summer.

Chest X-Rays Reveal 27 TB Possibilities

Twenty-seven cases of suspected tuberculosis were reported from Christmas Seal chest x-rays offered in 22 local industries during April, the Tuberculosis Society reported today. A total of 103 cases of suspected TB has been reported from industrial x-rays since January.

The x-ray survey is part of the overall industrial and special location program offered by the society each year from January to May. Free x-rays are available for any firm employing more than 40 persons.



April x-rays showed the following other suggested findings as well: eight tumors, 33 cardiac conditions, 16 emphysema cases and 81 other pathologies.

Sponsor Contest

Hartley Newspapers area artists—professional, amatuer or just hobbyists — can compete for prizes to be awarded by the National Tuberculosis Ass'n. for designing the 1965 Christmas Seal.

Deadline for the contest is Sept. 4. Information and details are available from the TB Society.

Dec. 20, 1880, an English court ruled that the telephone company was an infraction of the telegraph company monopoly. Now, all telephones in England are operated by the Post Office Department.
